What Commoner Readers Say of These Books

"Books Are Rare Gems."—Wants Set for Children

Huntington, W. Va.—The Commoner, Lincoln, Neb.: I am in receipt of the set of books, "Masterpieces of the World's Best Literature," and desire to say that they are rare gems indeed. I am so pleased with them that I have decided to enlist again in the club of four. I will, in the next ten days, send you a club list of four subscribers to The Commoner, as I want these for my married daughter. I wish very much that I could get a set of "Masterpieces of the World's Best Literature" for each of my five children. I don't want you to think for one minute that I consider the set of books all there is to the subscription, for I assure you that I regard The Commoner the best journal published today. I get more real good out of it than any paper I read. I am a genuine Bryan man; have voted for him three times and am ready to vote that many times over. Hurrah for Bryan and The Commoner!—Yours truly, C. S. McKenzie.

"Excellent in Arrangement and Instructive in Contents"

Malvern, Iowa, Sept. 9, 1910.—I received some days ago through The Commoner, Lincoln, Neb., the books, "Masterpieces of the World's Best Literature," with book holder. I desire to convey to you my pleasure in their perusal. The books are not only a pleasing work of the printer's art, but are excellent in arrangement and instructive in their contents. The holder is unique in its construction and neat in appearance. I am very much pleased with the books.—Respectfully yours, J. R. Graham.

Can Not Too Highly Recommend Them

Hammond, Indiana, July 15, 1910.—Books received O. K., and after a thorough examination of the same, must say I can not too highly recommend them to any student of literature.—Respectfully yours, Dick Broertges.

More Than Pleased With the Books

Seattle, Wash., July 20, 1910.—The books, "Masterpieces of the World's Best Literature," came all right, and I must say that I am more than pleased with them. Thank you very much.—Yours respectfully, C. H. Witteman.

Pleased With the "Masterpieces"

Bower Mills, Pa., August 20, 1910.—The Commoner, Lincoln, Neb. Gentlemen: I received my books, "Masterpieces of the World's Best Literature," and am well pleased with them.—Yours Truly, T. R. Colley.

Thinks It a Fine Set of Books

New Philadelphia, Ohio, October 4, 1910.—I have received the books, "The Masterpieces of the World's Best Literature." It is fine, and I thank you very much indeed.—Very truly, Louise Dorsey.

From the Famous Democratic Ex-Vice President of the United States

Adlai E. Stevenson, Ex-Vice President of the United States writes: "The Masterpieces of the World's Best Literature" well deserves the name given it. Great care has been taken in its preparation, and by one well fitted for the task. It is not too much to say that these books should have a place in every home."

These Books Should Be in Every Home

This Wonderful New Library contains eight handsome volumes, beautifully printed on superior book paper. 2,560 pages, aggregating one million words of the best literature of all nations and of all ages. Every volume is complete in itself and contains an exquisite illuminated title page. The binding is of the most modern style; full gold back. Strong, flexible and highly artistic.

Jennette L. Gilder, the well-known literary critic, is editor-in-chief of this comprehensive work.

Over two hundred of the world's greatest authors are fully represented in this superb compilation, and the cream of their master efforts will be found enshrined within its pages.

This unusually useful presentation of the gems of all literature, in handy form, has met with universal endorsement by the press and the reading public generally.

The classic, the dramatic, the humorous, and the lyric writers are fully represented. Copious selections from Aristophanes to Kipling, from Aesop to Roosevelt, are here formed into a library of over seven hundred of the best compositions on fame's eternal bead roll.

The volumes are placed in an exceedingly attractive book rack, mission style—specially adapted in finish and color for this unique and elegant set and an ornament for any library table, however rich. This rack goes FREE with every set.

Remember that this work is entirely new. The plates were made from easy-to-read new type. Printed on excellent paper and superbly bound in dark red buckram with full genuine gold backs. Each volume is complete in itself, strong and artistic finish, is full lined, wrapped separately in tissue, and the full set of eight volumes packed in a strong box, ready for shipping.
