IMPERIALISM

There is a lad in Boston, the son of a well-known writer of history, who has evidently profited by such observations as he may have overheard his father utter touching certain phases of British empire-building. At any rate, the boy showed a shrewd notion of the opinion not infrequently expressed in regard to the righteousness of "British occupation." It was he who handed in the following essay on the making of a British colony:

"Africa is a British colony. I will tell you how England does it. First she gets a missionary; when the missionary has found a specially beautiful and fertile tract of country, he gets all his people round him and says: 'Let us pray,' and when all the eyes are shut, up goes the British flag."—Harper's Magazine.

NEEDED HIM

Senator "Bob" Taylor, of Tennessee, tells a story of how, when he was "Fiddling Bob," governor of that state, an old negress came to him and said:

"Massa Gov'na, we's mighty po' this winter, and Ah wish you would pardon mah old man. He is a fiddler same as you is, and he's in the pen'tentry."

"What was he put in for?" asked the governor.

"Stead of workin' fo' it that good-fo'-nothin' nigger done stole some bacon."

"If he is good for nothing what do you want him back for?"

"Well, yo' see, we's all out of bacon ag'in," said the old negress innocently.—Cosmopolitan.

HIS OBJECT

"I notice," said the young man's employer, "that you are always about the first in the office in the mornings."

"Thank you, sir."

"Why do you thank me?"

"For noticing it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE NATURAL FINISH

"It fell!" cried the pupil.

"And what became of Nineveh?"

"It was destroyed."

"And what of Tyre?"

"Punctured!"—Cleveland Leader.

In the last election they sold their votes. Each was fined $5, given a suspended workhouse sentence and five years' disfranchisement. Among those arraigned were Colonel William Moore, 67 years old, a printer for thirty-five years. A year ago he was injured and knocked out of work. A proposition to sell his vote for $10 was irresistible. A brother of the prosecutor, a young medical student in Cincinnati, was among those found guilty of having sold votes. Indictments will be withheld in many cases to give the accused opportunity to come into court voluntarily. If they do the court will be inclined to greater leniency."
