

A Seattle, Wash., dispatch, carried by the Associated Press says: United States District Judge Cornelius H. Hanford was hanged in effigy here the other evening while a mass meeting was being held to protest against his action in granting a temporary injunction sought by the Seattle, Benton & Southern railway company in the Rainier valley from interfering with an enforcement of a new schedule. No arrests were made. A resolution was adopted at the mass meeting calling upon the people of the judicial district of western Washington to petition the national house of representatives to appoint a committee to investigate Judge Hanford's judicial and private life for the purpose of bringing impeachment proceedings. Among the speakers at the mass meeting were Mayor Fawcett of Tacoma, State Senator J. W. Bryan and John E. Humphries, candidate for the republican nomination for United States senator last year.

Admiral Togo boarded a Japanese vessel at Seattle for his homeward journey. Before he sailed he received the following dispatch from President Taft: "Accept my best wishes for a pleasant voyage. The government and people of the United States and myself had much pleasure in welcoming you to this country and regret that your visit to us could not have been prolonged."

A Des Moines, Ia., dispatch to the Chicago Record-Herald says: Criticizing the action of the president with respect to the wool bill, the farmers' free list bill and other measures of the extraordinary session of congress which has just closed, Senator A. B. Cummins has come out with the indorsement of some other republican, preferably Senator La Follette, for the leader of the party in the campaign of 1912. "Taft," said Senator Cummins, "is out of harmony with the political views of the rank and file of the republican party. Without disparaging Taft, I do not believe he takes the progressive view." Asked point blank what would be his course provided conditions remained the same next spring as now, he said: "I do not know. The republican state convention is yet a long way off. Many things may intervene between now and then which will serve to change the situation. Personally, I am opposed to President Taft. If I had my way, he would not be the choice of the republican national convention, and if it were possible for me to prevent it, I do not hesitate to say that I would do so. La Follette stands for legislation which is perfectly safe and sane, notwithstanding the efforts that have been made by his enemies to discredit him as unsafe. The intense earnestness with which he fights for a cause espoused is the only thing that leads many to the erroneous belief that he is unsafe."

An Associated Press dispatch to Lincoln, Neb., says: Father William Murphy of Ulysses, famous in Nebraska through his long litigation with the late Bishop Bonacum, has been received into the good graces of the church again, this being indicated in a statement made by Bishop Tihen, who conducted the services at Ulysses recently. Father Murphy called on Bishop Tihen shortly after the new bishop took up his residence in Lincoln and the return of the priest to the circle of persona grata seems to follow upon the advances made by him to the new bishop. It is stated that following his conciliation of the new bishop that Father Murphy will probably be removed to another parish.

A New York dispatch, carried by the Associated Press, says: The marital difficulties of Upton Sinclair, the utopian colonist and socialist author, and Meta Fuller Sinclair, who have been married eleven years, reached a climax when the author brought suit for absolute divorce, naming Harry Kemp, the poet, as co-respondent.

Mrs. Sinclair was asked if she would fight the divorce proceedings. "No," she said. "I have not yet consulted a lawyer, but my present intention is not to defend the suit."

When informed of the statutory grounds which the New York law provides for the granting of a divorce, she said:

"It doesn't seem to me that divorce should be a disgrace, even divorce obtained upon such grounds as you say must be shown in this state. I believe that an individual is justified in pursuing his or her ideal. I have the misfortune to have a conservative husband. He is conservative by instinct and nature, and a radical merely by choice. A monogamist ought to be able to act the part of a husband. In other words, he ought to have some time to devote to his wife. He should not be so absorbed in his work that the true proportions of human relationship fades into insignificance beside his work."

Mrs. Sinclair said that she expected to go away for a rest, and added that Mr. Kemp would not accompany her. She said, however, that both of them might later go on the stage. Mr. Sinclair said that he was going to his home in Arden.

The authorities of the Harriman railway lines have declined to grant the employe's demands for recognition of the federation, increasing wages and a change in method of charging for work. A strike is predicted by some.

A heavy storm swept over the South Atlantic coast, doing considerable damage.

A Milwaukee dispatch to the Chicago Record-Herald, says: Circuit Judge E. C. Eschweiler began a suit for $50,000 against Mayor Emil

Seidel in which he alleges that the mayor slandered him in remarks made during a speech at Bayview in the last judicial campaign. Judge Eschweiler refers in his complaint to a decision he rendered in the case of the appointment of a city hall official, which he held to be illegal. The mayor, commenting on the judge's decision, is alleged to have remarked: "You know that in the United States it is always possible to find one man on a bench dirty enough to do a political trick, and in this case they found their man."

In an "address to the country," adopted at the fourth annual convention of the National Independent Political league, held at Boston, President Taft is taken to task for his alleged color discrimination. The address asserts that President Taft announced color discrimination in the right to hold public office; perpetuated the injustice of the Brownsville soldiers; continued his bartering with the colored prejudices of the south by putting the balance of the supreme court in the hands of the Bourbon south; lent the prestige of his office to the doctrine of education for colored Americans and refused to raise his voice for trial by jury for colored Americans.

An Associated Press dispatch from Mexico City, dated August 30, says: With no dissenting voice, Francisco I. Madero today was nominated by the progressive party for president of Mexico, but Francisco Vasquez Gomez, his old running mate and erstwhile agent of the revolution at Washington, was grilled by partisans of three other candidates for the vice presidency. When the convention adjourned tonight the candidacy of no other man than Gomez for the vice presidency had been considered. Jose Pino Suarez continued a favorite in the betting with Alfredo Robles Dominguez as second choice. A ballot tonight probably would have resulted in a division of honors for third place between Gomez and Fernando Igelesias Calderon. Madero was the only candidate for the presidency whose name was placed before the convention. No speech was made. The chairman announced Madero's candidacy, went through the formality of asking if there were others, and was greeted by a chorus of "noes." One delegate, seated on the stage attempted to make a speech in Madero's support. The delegates shouted him down and called for a vote. It was unanimous. An instant later every delegate was on his feet and to the chorus of "vivas" was added the cheers of the spectators in the galleries. For fully ten minutes the uproar continued.

The French government sent two squadrons of cavalry to the Valenciennes region with stringent orders to repress all disturbances growing out of the war against high prices. The agitation against high prices of provisions still continues and disorders of considerable proportions have been reported from twelve places in northern France. The usual procedure is for a crowd of women of the lower class to assemble and do their marketing together, carrying large placards on which are written the prices which the women are willing to pay. If the shop keeper assents to sell his goods at the price offered, the women buy, but if he refuses they throw his stock into the street.

In an address before the American Bar association at its thirty-fourth annual session in Boston, William D. Hornblower of New York, made an address protesting against "further experiments in drastic legislation" against business interests. Mr. Hornblower declared
