

WE INVITE EVERY THIN MAN AND WOMAN

This is an invitation that no thin man or woman can afford to ignore. We invite you to try a new treatment called "Sargol" that helps digest the food you eat—that puts good, solid flesh on people that are thin and under weight.

How can "Sargol" do this? We will tell you. This new treatment is a scientific, assimilative agent. It increases cell growth, the very substance of which our bodies are made—puts red corpuscles in the blood which every thin person so sadly needs, strengthens the nerves and puts the digestive tract in such shape that every ounce of food gives out its full amount of nourishment to the blood instead of passing through the system undigested and unassimilated.

Women who never appear stylish in anything they wore because of their thinness, men under weight or lacking in nerve force or energy have been made to enjoy the pleasures of life—been fitted to fight life's battles, as never for years, through the use of "Sargol."

If you want a beautiful and well-rounded figure of which you can be justly proud—a body full of throbbing life and energy, write the Sargol Company, 715-S Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., today, for 50c. box "Sargol," absolutely free, and use with every meal.

But you say you want proof! Well, here you are. Here is the statement of those who have tried—been convinced—and will swear to the virtues of this preparation:

REV. GEORGE W. DAVIS says:
I have made a faithful trial of the Sargol treatment and must say it has brought to me new life and vigor. I have gained twenty pounds and now weigh 170 pounds, and, what is better, I have gained the days of my boyhood. It has been the turning point of my life."

MRS. A. I. RODENHEISER writes:
"I have gained immensely since I took Sargol, for I only weighed about 105 pounds when I began using it and now I weigh 130 pounds, so really this makes twenty-four pounds. I feel stronger and am looking better than ever before, and now I carry rosy cheeks, which is something I could never say before."

CLAY JOHNSON says:
"Please send me another ten-day treatment. I am well pleased with Sargol. It has been the light of my life. I am getting back to my proper weight again. When I began to take Sargol I only weighed 138 pounds, and now, four weeks later, I am weighing 153 pounds and feeling fine."

F. GAGNON writes:
"Here is my report since taking the Sargol treatment. I am a man 67 years of age and was all run down to the very bottom. I had to quit work, as I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds with 23 days' treatment. I cannot tell you how happy I feel."

MRS. VERNE ROUSE says:
"Sargol is certainly the greatest treatment I ever used. I took only two boxes of Sargol. My weight was 120 pounds and now I weigh 140 pounds and feel better than I have for five years. I am now as fleshy as I want to be, and shall certainly recommend Sargol, for it does just exactly what you say it will do."

Full address of any of these people if you wish.

Probably you are now thinking whether all this can be true. Stop it! "Sargol" does make thin people add flesh, but we don't ask you to take our word for it. Write us today and we will send you absolutely free a 50c. package for trial. Cut off coupon below and pin to your letter.

THIS COUPON GOOD FOR 50c. PACKAGE "SARGOL"

MR. BRYAN IN THE WEST

Editorial in the Portland (Ore.) Telegram: First of all Mr. Bryan is a real man—that is the fundamental thing about him. He wears because he is genuine. He does not need a long memory to protect him, for he does not say here what he is not willing to say there. He has been very conspicuously before the country for sixteen years. No man has stood in fiercer limelight and no man has escaped so unscathed. There is nothing in his public or private life at which the finger of suspicion can be pointed. His life has been an open book. The work which he undertook in the heyday of his youth and enthusiasm he is now following in the maturity of his powers, less feverishly indeed but with no less conviction. His outlook is quite as optimistic as it ever was, even more so; but it is an optimism based upon breadth of information and observation to which is applied an illuminating intelligence. As he grows older he grows more kindly, although there was never anything of the cut-throat about Bryan. The inevitable things he accepts. The things he can not alter he does not permit himself to fret over. He is moving along the line of least resistance toward the goal of his ideals. Over-spreading everything is a genial, glowing humor, very far removed, indeed, from frivolity. With him humor is a means to an end, yet part and parcel of the real stuff he has to offer. So wide and varied has been his experience that he is always at himself. Oratorical situations that would be exceedingly awkward for any other man, are serenely met by Bryan; difficulties are surmounted with such ease, grace and dignity, that the apparently impossible is achieved by the simple turn of the wrist, as one might say, leaving the auditor suffused with pleasure over his mental dexterity.

Bryan is growing older, and while still in the vigor of his physical and mental powers, he is beginning to show the terrific wear and tear of the campaigns through which he has passed, campaigns unequalled for long-maintained strenuousness in our whole political history. He has doubtless long since realized that no mere position or title is essential to any man to do his allotted part of the public work. As president, doubtless he could push ahead, faster than they are going, some of the reforms for which he is fighting and which other men not allied to him in party are putting forth their most strenuous effort to secure. But he has made himself a sort of tribune to the people, a tremendous force and factor always to be reckoned with; a clear-eyed, undismayed and undaunted moral and ethical force which is constantly stirring the consciences and stimulating the thought of the men and women of these United States. With the spectacle of the southern representatives of his party in congress before him, with the democratic machines scattered over the country, he doubtless suffers no delusions that there is inherent in the democratic organization, as such, any divine attributes that have been withheld from other political organizations. But in the present state of governmental evolution, the anchorage of a national party is essential to a man in national politics, however far short of his ideals or even reasonable expectations it may fall. Rather, we think, in his heart in his alliance with one of the two great natural party subdivisions which Jefferson pointed out, the aristocratic party and the democratic, his most hearty and heartfelt fealty being with the latter part thus broadly described rather than with the democratic party as it is at present constituted in the United States.

But it would be a mistake to think that Bryan, in all the passing years, has learned nothing about practical politics; that his political outlook is solely altruistic, and that he is consumed in a contemplation of the purely esthetic and theoretic side of party politics. This would be both an untrue and an unjust view of the matter. But let the older ones of his last night's audience contrast the style of political speech which Bryan delivered with the old-time political oration, and note the difference. No man, no matter what his politics, came away smarting and fuming. No neighbor of opposing politics could dig him in the ribs and laugh in glee because of his discomfiture. Everybody, even the newspapers of a certain stamp, came in for something, and nobody could mistake that medicine was the doctor's prescription. But each one came away a better American, with his ideals strengthened, his outlook broadened and his respect for Bryan, the man, deepened even though his regard for the democratic party was no greater than it had been before he heard the talk.

Washington dispatch to the Portland Oregonian: The "Gary dinners," attended by representatives of the chief steel concerns of the United States are held by an expert employed by the house steel trust investigating committee to have been effective factors in controlling the steel trade. The report was made by Farquhar T. McRae, accountant employed by the committee.

The section of the report dealing with the "Gary dinners," where independent as well as corporation steel men assembled to discuss conditions in the trade, contains an analysis of the legal effect of the "golden rule" policy, prepared by Anthony J. Ernest, a New York lawyer, in which it is declared that the "conventions agreed to and enforced would be objectionable as regards their effect upon competition."

"The Gary dinner arrangement," says the report, "whereat the so-called independents are influenced to reduce their production conformably to their estimate of the reduction in the demand existing, and to maintain prices, is objectionable as far as it operates to exclude free competition. The arrangement is designed and intended to operate and has operated, admittedly, as to standard steel rails, although it is claimed that the so-called independent participants can cut prices without fear of penalty, except the dishonor of declaring in favor of a named price and then selling at some other price."

"It can be no justification of the co-operation of the participants in the Gary dinners that no penalty attaches to a violation of the declarations mutually exchanged, because performance of the anti-trust act would pre-
