warrant issued here. United States Commissioner Oliver commissioned R. E. Bryant to serve the warrant if Llorente, who is supposed to be in Juarez, crosses the international line. The commissioner declares that United States Marshal Bert J. McDowell, at San Antonio, had ordered Deputy Frank M. Newman not to serve the warrant.

The warrant against Llorente was issued by Commissioner Oliver on complaint of Robert H. McDonald. McDonald charges that on June 7, 1912, the Mexican consul furnished money to him and two companions with which to purchase arms for the use of the federals. McDonald and his two companions were arrested as a result of this alleged transaction, and held on charges of violating the neutrality laws. The charges also involve Albert Madero, an uncle of the Mexican president, but no warrant was issued, because he is now in the city of Chihuahua.

A dispatch to the Louisville Courier-Journal says: Postmaster General Hitchcock's annual report suggests reduction of some parcel post rates and increasing the limit of weight beyond eleven pounds; civil pensions for postal employes; an increase in rates on second-class mail, which may pave the way for 1-cent letter postage, and consolidation of the third and fourth classes so books and papers may be forwarded by parcel post.

The Washington correspondent to the Louisville Courier-Journal says: Chief Hollow Horn Bear, of the Sioux Indians of South Dakota, asked that he be permitted to attend the inauguration of President-elect Wilson and present him with the pipe of peace, the highest honor the Sioux bestow on their chiefs.

The Chicago Record-Herald says: A memorial to Abraham Lincoln will be erected in Potomac park, near the Washington monument, at a cost of $2,000,000. This was settled when, after weeks of filibustering, the house adopted a joint resolution approving the site and plan chosen for the memorial by the commission, of which President Taft is chairman and Senator Cullom a member. The joint resolution now goes to the president. It will be approved at once.

A Washington dispatch, carried by the United Press says: That a "money trust" actually exists; that J. Pierpont Morgan, George F. Baker and James Stillman, New York's mightiest "money barons," are its triumvirate, and that its actual and potential power is a national menace, are the three salient conclusions of the Pujo investigating committee. On the highest authority—members of the committee, its chairman, Representative Pujo of Louisiana, and its attorney, Samuel Untermyer—it was stated that those are to be the principal features of the committee's "verdict" following sworn testimony given for the first time in the history of the country by the nation's greatest financiers. Actual, real existence of a "money trust" will be predicated, it is stated authoritatively, upon the committee's definition of the alleged combination.

Mr. Nelson was charged with defaming the court in the publication of an article stating that the judge, upon the advice of a divorce lawyer, had allowed attorneys fees to take precedence over alimony in a divorce suit that was dismissed without being brought to trial. Mr. Nelson was released on a writ of habeas corpus.

A New York dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer says: American women of fortune who have been married to or contemplate being married to titled foreigners, thereby renouncing their American citizenship, will be interested to learn that because the late Dowager Duchess of Manchester, who was Consuela Yzanga, of New York, followed just that course, her American executors now are paying two inheritance taxes on her estate in this country—one to the crown of Great Britain and the other to New York state. The situation was brought about pursuant to a decision of Surrogate Fowler. The British tax on the late duchess's property amounts to £20,000, or about $100,000; the tax to New York state is about the same amount. Nearly the entire sum of both taxes will be subtracted from the estate in this country, for the duchess left little property in England outside of her town house at No. 5 Grosvenor Square, London. The duchess died November 20, 1909, leaving an estate in England and this country valued at about $2,000,000. Her New York state property, comprising the bulk of her estate, was largely in stocks and bonds—personal property, upon which the laws of Great Britain and New York impose a specific tax.
