HIDES ON THE FREE LIST

With nineteen Republicans ranging in quality from Capper to Smoot voting for a duty of 2 cents a pound on green or pickled hides and 4 cents a pound on dry hides, and twenty-three Republicans ranging in quality from Lenroot to Lodge voting against it, with the majority leaders, the finance committee majority and agricultural tariff bloc split on the question, an attempt to analyze the position of the senate Republicans appears to be rather useless. Hides having thus been placed on the free list, the committee amendment proposing a rate of 12 cents and 5 per cent, ad valorem on boots and shoes and various rates on hand, rough and sole leather and other products of this kind, was rejected on the motion of Senator Smoot thus putting them also on the free list. Then followed rate reductions on other leather goods, so taken altogether it was a distinctly anti-high tariff day in the Senate.

In view of the Republican record and the persistent Republican explanations of the beneficial effects of a high tariff on practically everything, and the higher the better, the vote of a majority of the Republican senators against hide, boot and shoe and other leather tariffs is somewhat surprising. Nevertheless it would seem to indicate a triumph of political sagacity over political prejudice. It is one thing to maintain the tariff traditions of the party, and it is another to impose a tariff that will compel people to pay more for their boots and shoes. These are articles of intimate use by practically everybody in the country. An increase in their cost, which must be explained by retail dealers to their customers as a result of the tariff, would be a kind of direct tax that would in all probability be resented both at the counter and at the polls.

There was a difference of opinion as to what the burden of the hide tariff would amount to. Senator Walsh (Dem., Mass.) declared that it would be $110,000,000 a year. Other opponents of the tariff said that it would increase the price of shoes 20 to 27 cents a pair while the tariff supporters said that it would be only 3 1/2 to 6 cents a pair; but nobody even pretended a price increase would not result from the impost, nor was there any reversion to that good old fiction of the nineties that the foreigner pays the tax. Whether the increase in the price of a pair of shoes was 3 cents or 27 cents and the increase on other leather goods in proportion, the inadvisability of increasing the cost of living on the eve of a congressional election appears to have been realized by most of the Republicans in the Senate.—Indianapolis News.

$721,359 GIVEN G. O. P. FUND TO AID CONGRESSMEN

A Washington dispatch, dated Oct. 27, says: Three Republican campaign committees—the national, senatorial and congressional—filed preliminary reports with the clerk of the House of Representatives today showing $721,359 had been contributed to help elect Republican Senators and Representatives, of which amount $645,451 has been expended.

Each committee will file another report prior to final ones after the general election on November 7.

The Democratic Senatorial Committee, the Anti-Saloon League of America, the Association Opposed to Prohibition and some minor organizations taking part in national politics will put in their financial statements by tomorrow night.

Heading the list of all contributors was R. B. Mellon of Pittsburg, brother of the Secretary of the Treasury who gave $25,000 through the Republican National Committee.
