The District Court-For this District-Spring term-was opened here Tuesday last, with over eighty cases on the docket for hearing; and the farce of "The king of France, with twenty thousand men, blarched up the hill and then marched down again," enected on a small scale, by opening and closing for want of a judge, as the law, "in such cases made and provided," ditects. Judge Miller is at present in Ohio, unwell, as he informed the District Attorney by letter a few days since; but will be well rough to hold Court in Otoe county, in June. The consequences are: we will have no Court till September; the county will be to some expense; individuals do; and a large docket will accumulate to be put through, in the hurry consequent upon a press of business, somewhat after the style that an ancient lady kept hotel. We hope that all concerned will feel the "solid comfort" contained in the reflection which the circumstance suggested to us, that-Territorially speaking-"sich is life." We confess our desire increasing daily to throw off the appropriately termed "swaddling clothes" of Territorial existence, and assume that manly, State-ly independence, where we may say "well done thou good and faithful servant," or. vice versa; for which expression, we presume Buck is our present mouth-piece, but he "blows his own bellows;" yet there are two pegs to hang a hope upon for an amelicraton of our present condition, they are Douglas and Covode.

The Crops.-From all parts accounts come unfavorable to the present crops. Wheat and oats are suffering and must in some sections prove almost a failure. We have noticed several fields of wheat in our county, within the past few days, looking quite well, but even these will be ruined if the drought continues much longer. We have hear! of a number of farmers who expect to loose both wheat and oat crops: Our corn is up in some spots, but cannot be doing much good. Truly this the said firm. is disheartening to farmers, and will, we fear-prove a bane to our prosperity. If our farming community fail all others must suffer.

Rain. - Since the above was written, our vicinity has been visited by one the most thundering rains we have had here for a "right peart chance of time; it was a "season of refreshing" in every sense of term; green truck-animal and vegitable-seemed imbued with new life; it was, in fact, just such another rain as we use to have in the "flush times" of Nebraska. This "material aid" will help farmers realize their hopes as to abundent crops; and, although an immense lot of corn has been shipped from here this season, yet present prospects indicate that it is but as a "drop in a bucket" to what may be expected the next.

Pictures! Pictures!!-We are requested to state to those wishing to "secure the shadow e're the substance fails," that W. E. MURRAY, at present operating in our City, intends leaving about the middle of next week. Those desiring good daguerreotypes of themselves or friends should call on him immediately. To look at his collection of picture is sufficient warranty of his skill as an artist.

Mormons.-The Hesperian stopped at our levee, Tuesday evening last, long enough to give us a peep at the genus Mormon, with which she was literally crowded, having between seven and eight hundred aboard, ticketed for the "promised land," and, though some apparantly were not labeled "keep dry," yet the "weaker ressels" seemed to be "right side up" and rather good-looking. From the 'harumscarum" manner in which they stowed themselves away, they must have begun to practice Joe's preaching.

Hit wouldn't 'ave bothered hany to 'ave told where they 'ailed from, by the remarks they made. They seemed plucky and determined to "root 'og or die."

Fire.-We are credibly informed that a fire occurred on the first island above BY McKissick's, by which a Saw Mill was burned to the ground. Exact loss we could not ascertain. The River-Is slightly on the rise with a good stage of water in the channel. Brownville. April, 26th 1850.

Improvements.—We believe that in improvements, at present, we can vie with any town. Quite a number of houses. are under way, besides many receiving the finishing stroke. It is pleasant to sit in our sanctum and hear the trowel, hatchet, saw, mingled with the merry ring of the anvel, all joining in the concert anom, provided the cash accompanies the order, not to Progress.

> "Business is Business."-Any one wishing to be convinced of this truth need but to spend an hour or so with us, and see the amount done in our City, and if he is not convinced-after seeing the number of clerks-four or five in each store-so busy that it is almost impossible to get in a word edge ways, until it comes his turn -we will give him over "to hardness of heart," or prove that his optics are at fault.

> [For the Nebruska Advertiser ] The Stranger's Grave.

BY 'NATURE'S CHILD.'

Farewell! farewell! thou'rt gone to rest, Life's tempest wild is o'er: Fallen, as falls the stranger blest,

On Eden's penceful shore. Thy ills, thy cares, thy toil and strife, The tears that thou hast shed, Forgotten-ushered into life, Tho' numbered with the dead.

A stranger in a stranger land, With naught of kindred clay To cheer or south with kindly hand, Or watch the coffin's way.

No kindred eye, with thoughtful gaze Bends o'er the silent bier. Or on the lonely tomb to shed One penitential tear.

To memory's shrine, no waving tree, Calls forth the living past; No blooming flower with odors free, Embalms the sighing blast;

Yet tranquil is his pulseless breast, Nor dreams of sinful care; And naught of earth disturbs his rest, But slumbers sweetly there.

What cares he for earth's brightest joy, Her honor, wealth, or fame? Stranger, kinsmen, empire, wealth, All light and quite the same. Though tempests wild sweep o'er his tomb,

And thunders hourse resound, They east no fear, nor dark'ning gloom, His slumb'ring ashes round.

His deathless soul from clay now freed, Immortal as its sire, Mounts up on tireless wing, To sate its fond desire.

Then sleep on, stranger, sweetly sleep, Although Torgotten hing. This estings I thy name, ( and weep,
