Stop Thief!!!

It is really amusing to see how "the only two papers in Nebraska" exercise themselves crying "stop thief," since it has been ascertained that by the honest vote of the people of Nebraska, S. G. Daily is elected Delegate to Congress. The articles in each paper, the general telegraphic dispatches sent from Omaha, and the talk of "knowing" Morton men all work like a piece of machinery; showing clearly there is going to be one and the same, and the object to be, to pave the way for another magnificent swindle if possible. Before and since the election Morton's supporters here have proposed to bet on Morton's getting the certificate. Their cry now is "fraud on the part of the Republicans," "fraud in Hall county," "fraud in Otoe county," "fraud in Johnson county," "fraud! fraud!!" The effort Morton's wire workers are making is to divert attention while they themselves perpetrate frauds. Time will show this to be so; that bogus returns have been gotten up since the election. After all the returns were in from the settled and organized counties or precincts and Morton defeated, then the discovery is made that way up at Ft. Randall where there are but few, if any, persons who are entitled to vote, a precinct had been established and one hundred and twenty-two majority given for Morton.

The bogus Democracy, fellow-citizens, are determined to disregard your expressed will and wishes.

We yet have faith in the integrity of the Canvassing Board, that they will do right.

Short Sighted.

The Daily Omaha Nebraskian published on the day of election (Oct. 9,) contained the following proceedings of a meeting, said to be held for the purpose of organizing Shorter county. The same paper a few days later, predicted that Shorter and Kearney counties would give Morton "from 250 to 300" majority. Poorly planned!

"A large and enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of Shorter Precinct, of Kearney County, to effect the organization and nomination of county officers, for Shorter County, Nebraska Territory, was held at Cottonwood Springs, Sept. 21st, 1860.

More Frauds.

Additional rascalities, perpetrated by our Republican friends, come to light every day. In Dodge county Republican votes were cast "for Representative in Congress, Samuel G Daily." There is no such office, but the law requires the Clerk to make returns in accordance with the vote. The attention of the Black Republican Clerk of Dodge was called to this fact yet he positively refused to obey the requirements of the law, and violated his oath of office by falsely making returns that the votes were cast "for Delegate to Congress, &c.—Daily Nebraskian.

INDIAN OUTRAGES ON THE PLAINS.
SEVERAL MURDERS COMMITTED.

The Pony Express with San Francisco dates to the 3d inst. 4 P. M. arrived yesterday morning at 10:30 A. M. On the back of the general way bill was the following item:

FT. LARAMIE, Oct. 12 2-20 A. M.

The rider from Horse Shoe Station, together with others, report the Sioux Indians have killed two white persons and one half breed who lived with Louis Goenard, and drove off all Goenard's cattle.—It was presumed to be a party of Sioux returning from the country. Bromley, (Co.'s Ag't) writes that all his ponies have been run off by the Indians on Bear River, which has delayed the Express 24 behind the usual time.

The Seventh Agricultural Iowa State Fair, came off at Iowa City, a few weeks ago. It is spoken of by various newspapers of Iowa as proving a complete success. For the first two days the receipts for single admission and entries, were fifteen hundred dollars. The attendance on the third day was estimated at over ten thousand. The annual address was delivered by Judge Wright.

POOR SCHOOL HOUSES.

I sincerely pity the poor unfortunate pedagogue whose miserable lot is cast in a land of badly built and poorly arranged school houses. It is probable that I pity no man on one so much the more because I belong to the same pitiable class of which he is a member. I feel that I can safely rely upon him and the sympathies of all in his situation, while I enter my protest against that altogether too common cause of the ill success of teachers, and of their losing what little credit they may have heretofore deserved, viz, Poor School Houses. But they are not the only sufferers. If they were, the case would be materially altered. If the community at large were either benefited in morals mind or pocket, by such things, teachers would be the last to complain. They are so obliging in their manners, so self-denying in their principles, and so anxiously desirous for the promotion of the good of others, that for their sake, they would suffer great inconvenience with a complacency unheard, if not altogether unparalleled. But such not being the case, they feel at liberty to lift their voices in favor of reform, being actuated by their love for mankind in general, and the rising generation in particular, and, I ask, who can blame them? I for one, at least, cannot, and do not. Wherever you find poor school houses, you will find the children, in common phrase, "very backward," and will hear people and parents generally complaining that this or that term of school and sometimes, every one taught in the neighborhood, was productive of very little or no permanent good. Point to the school house as the primary cause, and the answer will be "Indeed it is bad but then it is really the very best we can do at present. We are poor."—"Poor!" yes, "poor!" Well, let us see about this poverty. They have seven months school during the year, which has been, and is doing them but little or no good according to their own confession. This costs them from one hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars a year, giving the teacher a very moderate compensation; how long think you would it take with this money thus uselessly spent from year to year, (yes, worse than uselessly, for it is spent in conjunction with the loss of time of children, which could be more profitably employed) how long, I ask, would it take to build a good substantial, comfortable school-house? It seems to me that I can almost hear the wail that comes up in answer to this, and I think I distinguish these words "We are compelled by law to have seven months school during the year, or not receive any of the public funds." Well, how much public money do you receive? "About half enough to pay our schooling—by far too nice a sum to loose." Indeed! what an arbitrary law! compelling sensible, free men to spend from seventy-five to one hundred dollars of their own hard earned money for the mere privilege of making use of the same amount of public funds to no purpose! Horrible! However, horrible as it may appear, I am in favor of the provision in the school law which thus compels seven months school during the year, from the very fact that it does not forbid twelve. And I believe that people generally would be, if, instead of complying with it in any way and every way which the circumstances at the time appear to demand, merely in order that it may be said to be complied with, they would previously prepare to comply with it properly. But I do not intend to discuss the merits of our present school-law, for the merits, or rather the demerits of poor school-houses is my theme. The teacher looses his reputation, the community loses in the depreciation of property, and the children are in imminent danger of being "num skulls" for life—hence they are both time and money out of pocket, as well as time and knowledge out of mind.

Fancy, if you please, and it is not so much fancy as you might imagine, for there is just such a one not one hundred miles from this place; fancy the log house (not far from some place) with here and there a crevice, whether for the purpose of ventilation or not, we will not fancy. Suppose, however, that we do fancy said house to be about sixteen feet by eighteen with two windows on the north, and the same number on the south, with a door between. Suppose that you and I enter said house; fancy that you see some sixteen or twenty scholars huddled as closely as they can possibly get, under the circumstances, around a not very comfortable stove, the door of which will not stay shut without a stick of wood or something else proped against it; while outside of the "magic circle," with his hands thrust into his breeches pockets, with his nose—well, no difference what, and his teeth chattering, stands the disconsolate teacher endeavoring to hear the second reader class read about the man who had on the "Very Comfortable Coat," and wishing in his heart that he were that very comfortable gentleman, who, by the way, happened to turn out to be a bear. Fancy that the furniture of said house consists of four benches, made from "slabs," by furnishing each with four legs, and a very steep desk at which two might possibly write at the same time, and how much do you fancy said teacher can learn said pupils, or scholars, or whatever else you may please to term them, in said house, on said cold day? I am glad to be compelled to acknowledge that there are not very many such in this part of the Territory, yet I am equally sorry to state that there are a great many more which come much nearer answering this description than there are of those which anything like answer the description of a good school house. Sometimes a teacher may be procured who succeeds, to some extent in satisfying his employers, even in the face of all these disadvantages and inconveniences; but in such a case, how much now, think you, he could have accomplished, if he had had the advantage of a comfortable house and the convenience of well arranged and suitable furniture? Suppose you try and see. "Who hath ears to hear let him hear." Good teachers generally avoid poor school houses.

Letter from the Mines.

Golden City, Sept. 26th, 1860.

DEAR FURNAS: Of course it would be my luck to fall sick out here among strangers, and the only wonder to me is that I didn't die; but the very fact that my bad fortune left me still alive, is, I argue, an omen of good for the future. The next day after J. W. Colemen left here, I was taken with a violent attack of mountain fever, and for more than six weeks I was unable to do anything. Any one who has seen a case of this form of disease can enlighten you somewhat as to its effects upon the physical construction of man. I was so low for four days that no one in the neighborhood thought I would live. The members of the company for whom I am at work, done everything for me they could, and showed that interest toward me which is so soothing to one confined on a sick bed, but after all their attentions were nothing like those received at home. Home—how I thought of home and distant friends. How often I thought if mother was only bending over me and ministering to my wants. But I shall ever look back with feelings of gratitude, too deep for expression, toward the ladies of Golden City for their sympathy and attention to the stranger in a strange land. Everything their womenly hearts could suggest for my relief was freely tendered, and when I commenced recruiting mere favors—embracing all the delicacies of the sick sub—than I could well use were showered upon me. I tell you, Rob, until you are lying upon a sick bed, and one you think will be your last, among strangers, you can never properly appreciate the soft touch of woman's hand, as she smooths back the hair from your fevered brow, and with kindness and sympathy whispers words of encouragement in your ear and breathes a fervent prayer for your recovery. God bless the Samaritan women of Golden City, is my prayer.

Pike's Peak is no place for a man who is doing anything of a business in the States, or for any of the laboring class who are making even eight dollars per week to come to, unless they have command of capital. Like every other place in the world, with money you can beget money, and without it you are continually kept at the foot of the ladder until you make a lucky strike.

The Vigilence Committee at Denver and their acts are the only topics of conversation among the people of this region now. Many who were at first bitterly opposed to it (though their opposition amounted to nothing, for it is conducted with a secrecy that rivals Masonry itself,) are now its warmest supporters, for they fine that none but the guilty are punished. The circumstances of two or three, and the most important, of their acts are mysterious indeed. On one pleasant Saturday evening, about nine o'clock, a man called at the Platte House in Denver and inquired for Mr. John Shear, a citizen, who occupied a very fair position in that community. He was informed that Mr. Shear had retired for the night, but upon stating that his business was urgent, the clerk called him down. Mr. Shears made his appearance half dressed; when, after a long private conversation, between the two he made the remark that he "would be down in a moment" and retired again to his room. He soon made his appearance fully dressed, and after telling the clerk he would be back again in the course of an hour, left with the stranger. The clerk waited hour after hour, but Mr. Shear did not make his appearance. The next morning the dead body of John Shear was found hanging to the limb of a tree some distance above Denver, with a paper pinned to his coat with the following inscription: "This man has been found guilty of horse stealing," or language to that effect. Shortly after A. C. Ford, Esq., one of the most talented and best lawyer this region could boast of, but, alas, unscrupulous and unprincipled, was taken from the Express, almost within sight of Denver, by eight men, undisguised, but whom no one knew, shot and buried, no one knew where. A few days afterward several men went to the saw mill of a Mr. Bandy, another prominent citizen, and in the presence of his brother and several workmen, took him thence, no one recognizing his captors, and for three or four days his existence was an enigma. At the expiration of that time he appeared among his fellow citizens with a story of his having been gone to the mountains during his absence. It is thought he has made some important disclosures which has insured his discharge.

The quartz mills now in the different gulches are generally doing well, though many become discouraged and none meet with anticipated success at the commencement, all finding difficulty in saving the gold. Experience and necessity, however, have overcome all difficulties, and the most are being well rewarded. The arastras, of which our fellow citizen Homer Johnson, owns one in Gregory's gulch, are also paying finely.

That there is gold in this country there can be no doubt; but that it has cost, thus far, two dollars to get one, is equally certain; that is, taking into consideration what it has cost to outfit the immense number of pilgrims who have come here and their time spent in crossing the plains. I do not know but it would far exceed that, but we can safely set it down at that number.

Our genial and humorous landlady, Mrs. Blunt, a Boston lady, and her husband, a Miss Smith of Seneca, Kansas, and Mr. A. D. Richardson, the Senior Editor of the Mountaineer and correspondent of the New York Tribune, took an excursion to Pike's Peak for the purpose of ascending said mountain. After a fatiguing and arduous trip they succeeded in reaching the summit; the two ladies being the first of womankind that had ever set foot (I came very near saying that near heaven) upon the topmost pinnacle of Pike's Peak.

Enclosed I send you some seeds of the wild poppy, or a species of thistle, I don't know which. It is, however, a beautiful plant and will be an ornament to your garden. I wish I could send you some mountain cactus, of which there are several varieties and the most beautiful you ever saw.

Yours as ever.
