Miscellaneous.

Summer Management of Bees. June usually furnishes the bees with the most ample supplies of honey, and if the weather proves favorable to their labors, and the colonies are strong and healthy, the hives will be rapidly replenished with stores.

Hay Making. To make good hay is quite as much an art as to make good butter. It is not too much to say, that two-thirds of the hay which is sent to market either in bales or in wagons, is not of the first quality.

and thus facilitates successful wintering. Feeding young swarms for some time after hiving them, is also beneficial; but especially so in seasons when pasturage is less abundant than usual, or the weather uncommonly dry.

evening may be put into cocks again until it is hauled to the stack or barn, where it is to be permanently secured. The earlier this is done after the moisture has been evaporated the better the hay will be, and the more certain it is to retain its fine light green colour. The following points are essential: The newly cut hay must be preserved from the damaging effects of dew and rain.

Caponizing Fowls. In response to the inquiry of a correspondent, we give the following from the Country Gentleman. The operation of simple, and may be performed by any one accustomed to the use of a needle and thread and scissors.

Rhubarb Syrup. The aperient qualities of green rhubarb, and its condensiveness to health, being now so well known, its usefulness does not admit of a doubt; but allow me to remark it is best used in the form of syrup, eaten with "plain bread," as are all cooked fruits; and not with pastry, especially by invalid persons who have bilious constitutions.

Drying Rhubarb. Rhubarb dries very well, and when well prepared, will keep for an indefinite period. The stalks should be broken off while they are crisp and tender, and cut into pieces about an inch in length.

Apple Seeds--Grow First Year, &c. ED. PRAIRIE FARMER--Apple as well as pear seeds will remain in the ground a year after having been prepared by soaking in the usual manner; seeds soaked and in every respect in fine condition for growing will, for some cases unknown, fail to germinate the first season, though in every respect similar to those which grow "right along."

Good Yeast. Boil one pound good flour, a quarter of a pound of moist sugar, and half an oz. of salt in two gallons of water, for an hour. When nearly cold bottle and cork it closely. It will be fit for use in twenty-four hours, and one pint will make eighteen pounds of bread.
