THE NEW "Happy Land of Canaan" The "Happy Land of Canaan" has had quite a run and became an almost every day song. The following new "Happy Land of Canaan" we copy from one of our exchanges:

I am almost ninety-nine, And remember well the time When our country was invaded by the British; But Freedom's noble son, Our brave Gen'l Washington, Made them get from this happy land of Canaan.

always accompany the pistillate, in the ratio of one row of male to three or four of the female plants. Staminate are self fructifiers, and may be grown separate from the pistillate, where it is desirable to do so, but no pistillate, according to the theory now generally acknowledged can produce its maximum of fruit unless it be grown in the close vicinity of a staminate variety.

When plants are covered for a winter protection, something should be first laid down among them to raise the covering an inch or two from the ground, in order to allow the air to circulate under the covering, or the plants will be liable to become mildewy, and in the spring to press those into the earth that have been thrown out by the frost.

Plaster, Ashes and Experiment. A late number of the Boston Cultivator furnishes the following statement and suggestions; and such experiments would be doubtless of much value if carried out, remembering that no single experiment is sufficient to form a conclusion, but they must be several times repeated, under all varying circumstances.

Ringbone Curable. Dr. R. Thompson writes to the Ohio Farmer that to cure the semi-ossesous deposit, called ringbone, the animal must be thrown and well secured; with a strong scalpel make a crucial incision over the highest part of the tumor. Having dissected the four angles of the skin, back to a line corresponding with the base of the tumor, expose the entire surface of the morbid mass to view.

Advantage of Crossing with Good Bulls. It would no doubt be interesting to farmers to read a lengthy article on this subject, but as they want nothing but "war news" at the present time, I will simply give a few leading thoughts, for their present consideration.

A Nice Dish. Happening to imagine that there may be a great many ladies and gentlemen among your readers, possibly yourself among the number, who may chance to love another really excellent dish, than my husband's or their own "green peas and roast lamb," I attempt the description of one, which as prepared by myself, is as delicious a one as ever graced any dinner table.

Christianity and Atheism. If the worst that can happen to the believer if he mistake, be the best that can happen to the unbeliever, if he be right, who without madness can run the venture? Who in his senses would choose to come within the possibility of infinite misery? —John Locke.

Dirty Haads. Charles Lamb once said to a brother-whist-player, Martin Barney, whose hands were none of the cleanest, "Martin, if dirt were trumps what a hand you'd have."

The worst thing that can be said of the most powerful, is, that they can take your life; but the same thing can be said of the most weak.

God will severely reckon with those that strengthen the hands of the wicked in their wickedness.

Telegraphic Dispatches. "Well, that's always the way with the telegraph folks!" exclaimed Mrs. Melton; "the good news they send us one day is pretty apt to be contradicted the next. Why, there's our neighbor Sally Shute, who got a story as how her husband had been killed in one of the battles, and the day after it was all up-set, for it proved to be another man! Gin me the old mail stage after all," continued Mrs. Melton, "if 'twas slow, 'twas sarth'!"

He who will not look before him, will have to look behind him with regret.

People to be Shunned. But there are human beings, whom, if you are wise, you would not wish to know too well. I mean the human beings if such there should be) who think highly of you, who imagine you very clever and very amiable. Keep out of the way of such! Let them see as little of you as possible. For when they come to know you well, they are quite sure to be disappointed. The enthusiastic ideal, which young people form of any one they admire, is smashed by the rude presence of facts. I have got somewhat beyond the stage of feeling enthusiastic admiration, yet there are two or three living men whom I should be sorry to see. I know I should never admire them so much any more. I never saw Mr. Dickens; I don't want to see him. Let us leave Yarrow unvisited; our sweet ideal is fairer than the fairest fact. No hero is a tale; and it may be questioned whether any clergyman is a saint to his bedside. Yet the hero may be a true hero, and the clergyman a very excellent man; but no human being can bear too close inspection. I remember hearing a clever and enthusiastic young lady complain of what she had suffered on meeting a certain great bishop at dinner. No doubt he was dignified, pleasant, clever; but the mysterious halo was no longer round his head. Here is a sad circumstance in the lot of a very great man. I mean such a man as Mr. Tennyson or Professor Longfellow. As an elephant walks through a field, crushing the crop at every step, so do these men advance through life, smothering every t me they dine out, the enthusiasm of several romantic young people.—Country Parson.

A Word to Milkers. The sage of the Ploughman says—"The milkster should be on good terms with the cow. If milkers scold and kick, the cow will, most likely, return the latter; and moreover, she cannot kick to advantage when her leg is in close conjunction with the milker. The best milkers are the quietest; for there will be a flow in less than a minute from the commencement of the process. Take advantage of this, and prevent its return. Milk dry, for the striplings are worth four times as much for butter as the milk that is first drawn. This is good advice. A lazy, scolding milkster, will soon spoil a good cow."

Disappointment. Good reader, if you and I ever reach that Father's house, we will look back and see that the sharp-tongued, rough-visaged teacher, Disappointment, was one of our best guides to bring us thither.—He often took us of our overload of worldly goods, but that was only to make us travel the freer and the faster on our heavenward way. He often led us into the valley of the death-shadow; but never did the promises read so sweetly to us as when read by the light of faith in that very valley.
