

OUR FLAG.

Then up with our flag! let it stream on the air! They thought our fathers would in their graves...

And their sons would not be so shamed! Up, up with that banner! where'er it may call...

Notice to the Advertiser Patrons. Suddenly and entirely unexpected, I am called by the Secretary of War to fill a position in the service of the country...

The News.

Further information from Pittsburg Landing, shows that there were more than four thousand troops from the first district, (Washington's) engaged.

Rebel scouts are constantly prowling about our camps, and occasionally a straggler is picked up by our cavalry.

The Merrimac came out on the 11th, from Norfolk, accompanied by the rebel steamer Jamestown, and captured three merchantmen.

A Norfolk paper has been received at Fortress Monroe, containing a dispatch from Beauregard in relation to the two day's fight at Pittsburg Landing.

All the reports received at the War Department, contradict the Beauregard dispatch, and confirm the statements that the enemy were routed and pursued as far as the previous orders of General Grant would permit.

The War Tax.

The Omaha Republican explains its position on the War Tax. It has no objection to the diversion of the appropriation of the $20,000 annually appropriated for Legislative expenses.

It is true that merchants, lawyers, saloon keepers, and others will have to pay license, under the Internal Revenue. But in Nebraska, altogether, it probably will not amount to one-third of the $20,000.

Bombast. We do not deny that the people of the South possess an ordinary amount of courage, perhaps about an average with the rest of mankind.

Beauregard telegraphed all over the South that he had gained a great victory at Pittsburg Landing; that after fighting till he got tired, he retreated to Corinth, which he felt able to hold against all attacks of the enemy.

The Nebraska Regiment. In the various reports we have seen of the battle of Pittsburg Landing, there is no mention made of the Nebraska First.

Daily vs. Morton. We notice in the proceedings of Congress on the 11th inst., that Mr. Davis, from Committee on Elections, reported a resolution that Samuel G. Daily, the sitting delegate in, and that J. Sterling Morton is not, entitled to represent that Territory.

Strategy in taking Island No. 10. The great feature of this memorable siege, and the immediate cause of the great victory which followed, is the transportation of the four steamers across the country to the aid of Gen. Pope.

When the place was invested, Col. Bissell came across the neck of land which is formed by the bend of the river, in a small boat, the water being so high that navigation was perfectly easy.

He announced that Gen. Pope although below the enemy, and in a condition to cross that completely surrounded them, was in want of boats for that purpose, and could make no movement until he was put in possession of them.

The steamer W. B. Terry and Trio, being of light draft, and drawing but 30 inches of water, were placed at his disposal, and the point for entering the woods was selected at the foot of Island No. 8.

Accompanied by a large detachment of men, in small boats and flatboats, armed with long cross cut saws and axes, he made fast work of it. The trees to be cut were selected and chopped down.

perseverance. The boats progressed sometimes slowly, and sometimes with considerable speed, in accordance with the nature of the country.

SECOND DAY'S BATTLE. Gen. Buell having arrived on the previous evening, the ball was opened at daylight in the morning simultaneously, by Gen. Nelsons, division on the left, and Gen. Wallace's division on the right.

WAR NEWS. Battle at Pittsburg—Full Particulars—Two Days Hard Fighting—A. S. Johnston Killed—Gen. Beauregard Wounded—Incidents of Gallantry.

Pittsburg, Va., via Ft. Henry, April 9, 3:20 A. M. One of the greatest and bloodiest battles of modern days has just closed, resulting in the complete rout of the enemy who met us at daylight on Sunday.

The slaughter on both sides is immense. We have lost in killed, wounded and missing from 18,000 to 20,000. That of the enemy is estimated at from 35,000 to 40,000.

The fight was brought on by a body of 300 of the Twenty-fifth Missouri Regiment, of Gen. Prentiss' division, attacking the advance guards of the rebels, which were supposed to be the pickets of the enemy in front of our camp.

Our forces soon formed in line and returned the fire vigorously, and by the time we were prepared to receive them, they had turned their heaviest fire on the left and centre of Gen. Sherman's division, and drove our men back in turn.

Even our heaviest and most destructive fire on the enemy did not appear to discourage their solid columns. The fire of Major Taylor's Chicago artillery raked their down in scores, but the smoke would no sooner be dispersed than the breach would again be filled.

There has never been a parallel to the gallantry and bearing of our officers, from the Commanding General to the lowest officer. Gen. Grant and staff were in the field riding along the lines in the thickest of the fire during the two days of the battle, and all slept on the ground Sunday night, during a heavy rain.

right, while a large number of batteries were planted along the entire line from the river bank northwest to our extreme right, two miles and a half distant.

Gen. Buell having arrived on the previous evening, the ball was opened at daylight in the morning simultaneously, by Gen. Nelsons, division on the left, and Gen. Wallace's division on the right.

On Saturday the whole force at Pittsburg, Savannah and Crump's Landing were 75,000, including sick, about 50,000 being fit for service.

The ball opened Sunday morning before daylight by an attack upon Prentiss' division which was near the center, and thrown out about five miles from the river.

Accordingly it was not long before the enemy renewed the attack upon the centre of the engagement.

Before the struggle of Monday Gen. Grant determined to assume the offensive, and commenced the attack with the assistance of 30,000 fresh troops.

The struggle was obstinate and desperate, the rebels only yielding ground inch by inch, and not fairly retreating till about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Our loss in killed and wounded is estimated from 8,000 to 10,000; the enemy's about the same. Rebel prisoners say Beauregard made a speech upon entering the fight, saying he would "water his horse in the Tennessee River or in HELL!"

He commanded the centre, Johnston the centre, the left and the left flank, shifting the main strength of his forces from the right to the left wing.

On Monday Gen. Wallace did good work with his division on the right of our lines.

Glorious News from New Madrid.

NEW MADRID, April 7. The gunboat Carondelet ran the blockade at Island No. 10 on Friday night, and the gunboat Pittsburg Sunday night.

The Carondelet attacked one battery on her way up the river, and Lewis H. Marshall, aid to General Pope, made a reconnaissance by order of General Pope, to Tipperville, the object being to draw the fire from the masked batteries of the enemy.

This morning the gunboats Carondelet and Pittsburg proceeded by order to the point selected by General Pope for his forces to land, and in two hours three batteries were silenced and the guns spiked.
