JOHN MORGAN'S ESCAPE.

Gen. John Morgan was honored with an ovation on the 7th, on his arrival at at the rebelc apital. The following highly interesting account of his escape from the Ohio Penitentiary, and subsequent adventures, is published in the Enquirer: Their bedsteads were small iron stools fastened to the wall with hinges. They could be hooked up, or allowed to stand on the floor, and to prevent any suspicion, for several days before any work was attempted, they made a habit to let them down and sit at their doors and read. Captain Hines superintended the work, while General Morgan kept watch to divert the sentinel, whose duty it was to come round during the day and ob serve if anything was going on. One day this fellow came in while Hockersmith was drove under the floor, boring away, and missing him, said, "Where is Hockersmith ?" The General replied. "He is in my room, sick," and immediately pulled a document out of his pocket and said to him : "Here is a memorial I have drawn up to forward to the Government at Washington. What do you think of it ?" The fellow, who perhaps could not read, being highly flattered at the General's condescension. took it and very gravely looked at it for several moments before he vouchsafed any reply. Then handing it back, he expressed himself highly pleased with it. In the meantime Hockersmith had been signaled and came up professing to feel "very unwell." This sentinal was the most difficult and dangerous obstacle in their progress, because there was no telling at what time he would enter during the day, and at night he came regularly every two hours to each cell and inserted a light through the bars of their door, and frequently after he had completed his rounds he would slip back in the dark
