POETRY.
From the Continental Monthly.
THE TWO SOUTHERN MOTHERS.
Heard you not the din of battle,
Cannon's roar, and musket's rattle,
Clash of sword, and shriek of shell,
Victor's shot, and vanquisher's yell?
Saw you not the scene of slaughter,
Human blood poured out like water;
Northern valor, Southern pride,
Stern resolve on either side?
Cherishing his sagging men,
Balling to the charge again,
Came a soldier, charged with grief,
Held the brave Confederates chief.
Down he fell, amid the strife,
Human trampling out his life;
Scarcely can his retreating force
Find and save his mangled corpse.
None they here him to his mother—
He was all she had—none other:
Woful mother! who can borrow
Words to paint her frantic sorrow?
As she mourned her slaughtered brave,
Came and spoke her aged slave,
Came, and spoke with solemn brow:
'Miaus, we is even now.
'I had ten, and you had one;
Now we're even—all are gone:
Not one left to bury either—
Slave and mistress mourn together.
'Every one of mine you sold—
Now your own line stark and cold:
To the just Avenger bow—
Miaus! I forgive you now.'
