The annexed notice of Penick & Loving extensive Drug and Book House, St. Joseph, Mo ., - whose advertisement appears in to-day's paper- we copy from the St. Joseph Herald :

The oldest and most extensive Drug House west of St. Louis, is that of Penick & Loving, of this city. Many years of upright and honorable dealing with the people of the great Northwest have gained for them a most enviable reputation, but no more enviable than deserved. Of late their business has so largely increased that they have found it necessary to seperate the retail from the wholesale department, and with this view have purchased the lot adjoining their present stand on the north, and next spring will at an about to a abtentia - - 1 then rebuild on their present site for the wholesale establishment. Thus it will be seen that Messrs. Penick & Loving are the first to embark in an exclusively who lesale drug and book trade in this city. In passing through their store on a recent occasion, we found ample evidence that more room is wanted to store their immense stock now on hand and being received. The house, although even now of magnificent proportions, is filled apparently as closely as it can be packed. In one room we noticed piles of sacks and mats of spices and boxes. barrels and casks of dye-stuffs. In ano ther Patent Medicines of all kinds stacked up in gross and dozens. Another contains tons of paints of every descrip tion and hue. In still another room we nnticed select medicines and pure chemicals in quantity sufficient to supply the believers in all the l'athies that have ever been written or practiced. We entered another department and found a grand display of school books, enough to furnish food for the mind of all the juveniles between here and the Rocky Mountains .-Passing on we discovered several hundred dozen coal oil lamps, of all sizes from the small, neat hand lamp for the kitchen to the large and elegant Astral for the parmen of Plan and Fancy Painting, should for. We have often heard the question
