Poetry,
The Star-Spangled Banner.
(A friend has looked up, copied, and handed on for publication, the following stirring poem, which was published in the London Packet of December, 15, 1866. Eds. Memphis Post.) The Star-Spangled Banner, that blows broad and brave O'er the home of the free, o'er the hat of the brave Whose stars in the face of no foe, o'er turned pale, And whose stripes are for those that the stars dare to die.
These folds every year broader and broader have grown Till they shadow both arctic and tropical zone;
From the Nierva Nevada to Florida's shore—And like Oliver Twist are still asking for more.
That banner, whose infantile bunting can boast, To have witnessed the Union's great charter engaged;
Which at Boston saw Freedom's stout struggle begin,
And from Washington welcomed its victory won.
For our fathers in rebel defiance it spread But to us it were brotherly greeting instead;
And concord and peace, not Bellona and Mars, Now support England's Jack and the States' Stripes and Stars.
Can it be there are patriotic hands that would tear This Star-Spangled Banner, so broad and so fair?
And if there be hands would such sacrilege try,
Is the bunting too weak the attempt to defy.
Alas! while its roof Freedom wore in her loom, She passed in her work, and the Fiend took her room.
And seizing the shuttle that Freedom had left, Threw Slavery's warp across Liberty's web.
How the Fiend laughed and leaped at the swift shuttle's sweep.
With its blood rotted threads the fair web ranning through;
Now cast out the web; it is broad, it is long, Tipton's Fiend's work and Freedom's loom it is strong.
Ah! now that the blood-rotted warp is laid bare,
The Fiend is crying—the Fiend is crying,
"The Fiend is crying on these warps tear it away, For the work he's had hand in is apt to give way."
Now heaven guide the issue; may Freedom's white hands
Free to late, from the Flag pluck the blood rotted strands,
And to lattle and breeze fling the banner in proof That 'tis all her own fabric in warp and in woof.
If this may be—If the moment be nigh When this banner unrent shall no more float the sky—
To make it division of beam and of boars, Let the South have Slaves and the North have the Stars.
NASBY.
[Written for the Toledo Blade.]
POST OFFICE, CONVENT X ROADS, (Which is in the State of Kentucky.) March 25, 1867.
"Backed, turk backed, oh time in your line," is the first line of a song which I heard not long since. Wood that time could perform that back-ackhen leap and get us all back when we wuz six years ago. But time can't. Time is a perpetual motion, which must go on and on, and which can't never terrace her steps.
The situation ain't periclerously agreeable just now. It hez a jookey look, nor does it promise an improvement in the future. The confidence in the Democracy of Kentucky is shaken to the extent that its lost its equilibrium and tot-ters to its centre. When it falls, I shall be found under the ruins. The passage of the Military Law may be said to be the last feather which really ought to break the Kentucky camel's back. It's the deepest and final stab at constitutional liberty and equal rights, inasmuch as it not only blasts forever the hopes of re-establishing slavery, but gives the nigger all the rites and privileges enjoyed by white men. We, who are chiefly interested, are not to be consulted in the matter. Federal hirelings, whose very presence is pizen to the people up these States, are to be quartered on us to see that "justice"—was holler mockery!—is done to em—the governments established by Andrew Johnson is overturned if they don't play 2d fiddle to the straps and accept the constitutional amendment, which prohibits them who wuz our chain-pions in the late effort to destroy a government which he had, from taking hold of it again and rinning it. Wuz there ever such a mixture of unjust and perscription? Wuz there ever such a perversion?
Wuz there ever such a lack of magnanimity? And all this time where is Johnson? He vetted these bills, but wherefore? He knowed that the Rump Congress hed a majority of two-thirds, and could pass em over his veto; why then, when they set his authority at defiance, didn't he rise in his might and disperse em? Where too, wuz the Democracy of the North? Where are they in this crisis when our dearest rites—their greatest care—is being ship-racked on the iron-banded rocks of despotism? Where are they? Why don't they rally as they threatened and demand that Johnson shall haul the levers from their usurped seats and restore peace to our rights?
We shal consider equitable, in the worst happy but no distracted country. Ar-they hevin' time? I see them who breathed so much vengeance and saw grins afore Johnson had offices to dispose of a negro in us and a rumour about signatories to a application for a office, and holler to us they catch their breath. "Accept the conditions—get back into the Union that we may elect the President in 1869, who'll be in the fish-tub, instead of the wash-tub."

Opinion's of a Farmer.
I am near fifty years old, was always a farmer, as was my ancestors, as far back as I can trace them. My opinions are formed on experience and experiments that satisfy me, whether they do others or not.
Hay should be cut when in full bloom, as all plants contain most sap during that time; and consequently are more nutritious, if used for food. If hay is left later, the sugar turns to woody fibre.— Wood and sugar are chemically the same chemically.
If—All heavy or clayey soils should be plowed in the autumn, so that the frosts of winter may pulverize them and kill the germs of insects deposited in the soil for the next season.
III.—The best way to raise calves is to take them from the cow as soon as dropped, if possible, never let them suck, as they learn to eat or drink sooner, and there is no sore teats from being, and the task of weaning the cow from the calf is soon over. I put them in a place where they will be sheltered from the sun rain, give a good bed of straw, and feed three or four quarts of new milk per day until three weeks old, then feed skim milk warmed. Let them have access to hay or grass. By this method I have raised calves every year since I can remember, and never lost one in my life.
IV.—Nine-tenths of our farmers do not know enough hay seed to the acre, I have kept increasing the amount, and have not found a stopping place. The more seed the more and better hay; if timothy and clover, up to a half bushel each per acre. If the surface of the ground is completely covered, the hay will be fine, and no weeds can grow. I have choked out Canada thistles with timothy and clover seed sown as thick as "hair on a dog," so as to form a good firm sod the first summer. Sow early in spring or in February.
V.—Oats should be sowed very early, as early as possible. I saw a good crop raised that was sown in February, and was not "barrowed" but snowed and rained in.
VI.—Cooking food for hogs is better than doubling the same amount if fed raw, if you wish to fatten. For breeding, feed lightly.
VII.—Potatoes are worth more, for all kinds of stock, than most farmer think they are. If you can have them frozen and then cooked before they thaw, the starch is turned to sugar, and I know of no food that will fatten faster or give a better flow of milk.
VIII.—In fattening beef cattle with corn meal, never feed so high that you can see or smell the effects of it in the excrements, for if you do you may be sure you are losing your feed, as the cattle do not assimilate all the nutriment there is in the grain.
IX.—I believe corn-cobs, ground with the corn, useful as residual matter, and they also contain sugar to pay for feeding if cooked or scalded. In "Kerning," I'll make a good vinegar from sweet extracted from corn-cobs.
New York Dry Goods Market.
The weather, during most of the past week, has been unfavorable to the trade, and our merchants have been soberly and anxiously looking for a change. It has at length come; but too late, it is feared, to make up fully for what has been lost. There was but the best part of the season, or part. Probably not more than one half or two thirds the business has been done in the aggregate which was expected. There must now be a great rush, or many goods must go over the coming season. The country is not generally overstocked; but merchants in the interior have learned by experience that there is no use in accumulating goods for a future market. They will buy as they sell, and they watch the weather, the price of gold, foreign news, action market, and other matters which affect their business, with most becoming sagacity. We note the following in regard to leading styles of goods: Brown sheetings continue dull, and are in overstock, except a few fabric makes; prices favor the buyer. Bleached goods are firm, and in good demand for leading styles; but others less desirable are lower and somewhat neglected. Stripes and ticks are steady, with only a moderate demand. Prints are selling freely, without any notable change in prices, except for best spring styles, which are in great demand and are cleared out immediately on arrival at a half cent advance. Drills are dull and heavy. Denims are a bare lower, and sell only moderately. Corset jeans, except for best makes, are neglected and lower. Printing cloths are steady, with less sales than last week. Ginghams are wanted only of best makes, and such sell well.
Printed lawns continue dull of sale; but more favorable weather, it is believed, will soon help these goods. Rolled jac-nets are pretty firm in price and sell well. Cambrics are in moderate request at unchanged quotations, except for inferior makes. Satinettes are wanted at steady prices. Italian clothes are selling more freely. Muslin delaine continue very active for best spring designs; others are neglected and lower. Broad-cloths are not selling as freely as was anticipated, and prices are lower. Cassimeres, best makes, continue in demand at firm prices. Foreign goods are in overstock, except for best dress dress fabrics, "exposition" styles. Out-of-town buyers will now find a full and complete assortment of the richest dress goods, probably ever exhibited in N. Y.

How to tell the age of a Horse.
At five years of age a horse has forty teeth—24 molar or jaw teeth, 12 incisor or front teeth, and four tusks or canine teeth, between the incisors; but usually wanting in the mare. At birth only the two nippers or middle incisors appear.
At a year old the incisors are all visible on the first milk set.
Before three years the permanent nippers have come through.
At four years old, the permanent di-viders, next to the nippers are out.
At five the mouth is perfect, the second set of teeth having been completed.
At six the hollow under the nippers called the mark, has disappeared from the nippers and diminished in the di-viders.
At seven the mark has disappeared from the dividers, and the next teeth, or corner are level, though showing the mark.
At eight the mark has gone from the corners, and the horse is said to be aged.
After this time, indeed good authorities say after five years, the age of a horse can only be conjectured. But the teeth gradually change their form, the incisors becoming round, oval and then triangular. Dealers sometimes shape the teeth of old horses—that is, scoop them out to imitate the mark; but this can be known by the absence of the white edge of enamel which always surrounds the real mark, by the shape of the teeth and other marks of age about the animal.
An Eastern contemporary, under the heading, "worse than a dead duck," tells the following:
In 1855 there was a severe stump debate between Andrew Johnson, then a candidate for gubernatorial honors, and Gustavus Henry, generally known as Gus, the eagle orator. The debate excited much interest. Andy closed his speech by becoming round, oval and then triangular. Dealers sometimes shape
and other marks of age about the animal.
Foreign News.
The Belgian minister of war states that France is having four hundred and eighty thousand breech-loading muskets manufactured. The arsenals in Prussia are actively at work. Austria is having 600, 000 muskets converted into breech loaders. England will have 350,000 similarly converted by the end of the year.— Russia is transferring 600,000, and Denmark, Holland, Switzerland, Italy, Spain Portugal Greece and Belgium, are all engaged in the same warlike preparation "But, as I said before, we have proved today where that town line is. Yes, gentlemen of the jury, there it is, and there it will remain forever, and all the ingenuity of my learned brother can never efface it—can never wash it out. No, gentlemen; he may plant one foot on the utmost verge of the outermost ring of the planet Saturn, and plant the other on Areturus, and seize the Pleiades by the hair, and wring them dry, but he cannot wash out that town line—never never."
The Sioux City Journal of March 23d, warns its readers in that region to prepare for a flood. "There was a larger body of snow on the ground than for many years at that date, and severe winter remained. Says the Journal: "When if finally gives way, the change from cold to warm weather will undoubtedly be sudden, and should rain come at the time, we may look out for a flood."
