IMPEACHMENT.

The New York Tribune, which has late been very conservative in its tone, has at last seen the signs of the times, and comes out squarely in favor of impeachment. In its issue of Wednesday, after enumerating the President's offenses, it says:

"Where will this end? The President meets war. The country must stand and fight, or be defeated. We believe anything possible of Mr. Johnson. His Administration is a record of deception, cunning, dishonesty—antagonism to the best interests of the country. He has made the Administration of Buchanan respectable, by showing a degradation to which even Mr. Buchanan could not sink.

He has betrayed his party; he has betrayed his friends; he has betrayed his country. Nothing is left of his Administration but a few miserable jobbers like those who hang around him, and a few wretched political adventurers like Black.

The men who accepted counsel for his cause, like Seward, and Randall, and Wells, he is impatient to drive out of his Cabinet. The savage of Sahara is not more susceptible to the obligations of friendship; but even this no longer remains with Mr. Johnson. We admonish the people to prepare for a stern and high responsibility. It is nearly a hundred days since Congress met. Till then we are powerless. We can only hope to this dreadful tyranny. The President appealed to the country in his last message.

We join him in the appeal. Let our friends organize everywhere. Let us make the canvass upon them in any of Mr. Johnson's Administrations, and having defeated him at the ballot box, we can prepare, through our representatives, to consider the best course to be taken to punish him for his crimes against the sovereign will of the American people.

The New York Times, of August 29th, says:

Matters have gone too far to render doubt or misapprehension reasonable. Mr.
Johnson has entered upon a course which shuts out the last chance of reconciliation, and renders all compromise impossible. Views and protests will save him no longer. Pretences of compliance with the law which he is trying to obstruct, are no longer admissible. His parrot talk about the Constitution is laughed at as sheer nonsense and hypocrisy. He stands revealed an enemy not less of Congress and its laws than of the country and its peace. Wantonly and treach-erously, with no conceivable hope of success, impelled only by needless malignity and an insane ambition, he has reopened the quarrel in a shape which renders his fate and the duty of the government party perfectly clear. As between the Executive and the people represented by Congress, there will be neither the giving nor taking of quarter. Mr.
Johnson has unheeded the sword of a disturber and a usurper, and there can be no further parley with him.

The New Manufacture—Paper Water Pails and Ice Coolers.

The Japanese art of converting paper into articles of domestic use and convenience will probably be fully developed in this country at no distant period. At Greenpoint L. I., there is a large factory which is now turning out a variety of articles such as have hitherto been manufactured of wood, tin, copper, or other metals. The process is of course a secret. But it may be stated that the ordinary paper pulp is subject to chemical and mechanical influences which render it as hard as larch wood, and superior to it in many respects. The substance thus produced is a nonconductor of heat, and impervious to the action of acids, and not liable to be warped or injured either by heat or cold, being capable of sustaining a temperature of three hundred degrees Fahrenheit, without injury. The preparation is its soft or poly-sate is shaped on molds and patterns, and converted into water pails, wash basins and pichers, fire buckets, sugar-molds, and other articles. Improvements are in process by which complete sets of novel and elegant kitchen and parlor dishes made of paper will be brought into competition with crockery and china.
It is also intended to manufacture trunks, boxes, carriage-bodies, gentlemen's hats, ice coolers, refrigerators, and a number of other articles for which patents have already been secured. It is also spoken of as an excellent substitute for plaster in the interior of houses. In fact, judging from the specimens of paper manufacture which we have seen, there is no reason why paper commodities may not come into general use in this country as in Japan.

The Upper Yellowstone.

From Dr. James Danley, Surgeon of the Montana Vols., we glean the following items concerning the headwater of the Yellowstone river, supposed by so many to be a continuation of the Maucous Terres or Bad Lands that exist at its mouth.

Dr. Danley left Camp Green Clay Smith, near the mouth of the Yellowstone canyon, about the 12th ult., with a small party, following up the western side of the river for about ninety or one hundred miles, and within a few miles of the lake near the head of this great river, travelling through a valley of great extension, richness and beauty, interspersed with scenery of most impressive grandeur which in beauty and symmetry are superior to any works of art; leading cliffs of rock, rising from the waters edge thousands of feet in height; white wood crowned mountains, with delightful slopes and vista like parks covered by purling streams and mountains covered with snows, capped and raving in cone-shaped peaks and knife-like edges, or towered like castles, and rolling away off in beautiful white pyramidal forms, were to be seen on every side. Language is not adequate to convey an idea of the marvelous beauty of the scenery, which is beyond the power of description, and begets a wonderful fascination in the mind of the beholder who reverently gazes at the snow-crowned summits, that seem as if "They were to show how earth may rise to heaven and leave valleys below."

In addition to this, Dr. Danley informs us that he discovered several large streams coming in from the western side, that are yet unnamed. When near the end of his journey his attention was called to something resembling an old smoke, near the crest of a mountain, and observing springs of hot water gushing out of its side, he was induced to attempt to reach it; which he succeeded in accomplishing with very little trouble, there to find something that proved to be the key-stone to the arch of wonder—a boiling hot lake, covering an area of about forty acres. A herd of antelope were quietly licking the salt along the edge, when a shot from his rifle brought one of them down, a sheath knife soon severed off a ham which was fastened to a larriat and thrown into the lake, and in less than forty minutes it was taken out completely boiled and salted! The party ate of it and represented it as having a peculiar but pleasant flavor. The Doctor supposed the water to contain a large percentage of mineral, the crude property from which borax is manufactured, and has already taken the necessary steps to have it pre-empted and a company organized to have it thoroughly tested. He gave it the name of Black, in honor of our highly esteemed citizen, Hon. L. M.
Black. Should this prove all that the Doctor sanguinely expects, it will prove an additional source of wealth to our highly favored Territory, as very nearly all the borax used, until quite recently, had to be brought from Tuscany. Lately considerable has been manufactured in California, but we do not know of any having been found elsewhere within the country. We have not the space to give an elaborate report of Dr.
Danley's trip, but can only say that it abounded in the rarest scenes and incidents equaling almost the experience of Captains Speke and Grant, in their effort to discover the source of the Nile; and we trust are long that some select party, well prepared and equipped, will be able to penetrate these wilds and reveal to the world its manifold beauties, existing as they do in all their pristine grandeur. The Doctor deserves credit for the daring, invincible spirit displayed by him in this far exploring this remote region, which example we trust will be emulated by many others. He was commended to return to camp as his time was limited, and what was his fate had with him because dampened and spoiled. He reports the country filled with game of all kinds, including the mountain bison, and reports mining in three different localities on the eastern side of the river, including Bear and Emigrant gulches.— Montana Post.

Jim Wolf and the Tom Cats

BY MARK TRAVIS.

I knew by the sympathetic glow on his bald head—I knew by the thoughtful look upon his face—I knew by the emotional flush upon the strawberry on the end of the old free liver's nose, that Simon Wheeler's memory was busy with the old times. And so I prepared to leave, because all these were symptoms of a reminiscence—a sign that he was going to be delivered of another of his tiresome personal experiences—but I was to slow he got the start of me. As nearly as I can recollect the indication was couched in the following language:

"We was all boys, then, and didn't care for nothing how to shirk school, and keep up a revival 'stair of devilment all the time. This year Jim Wolf, I was talking about, was the 'prentice, and he was the best hearted fellow, he was, and the most forgiving and onselfish I ever see—well, there couldn't be a bullier boy than he was, take him how you would, and sorry enough I was when I see him for the last time."

"Me and Henry was always pestering him, and plugging him on his back, and putting tumble bees into his head, and so, and so, and some times we'd crowd in and bunk with him, notwithstanding his growing, and then we'd let on and get mad and fight across him, so as to keep him stirred up like. He was nineteen, he was, and long and lank and bushful, and we were fifteen and sixteen, and tolerable lazy and worthless."

"So that night, you know, that my sister Mary gave the candy pulling, and they started us off to bed early, so as the company could have full swing, and we were in on Jim to have some fun."

"Our window looked out on the roof of the ell, and about ten o'clock a couple of old tom cats got to rarin' and a chargin' around on it, and carrying on like rin-There was four inches of snow on the roof, and was frozen so that there was a right smart crust of ice on it, and the moon was shining bright, and we could see them cats like daylight. First they'd stand off and yow yow at one another, just the same as though they was a cus-in' one another, yea know and bow up their backs and push up their tails, and well around and spit, and then all of a sudden the gray cat he'd snatch a handful of fur off the yellow cat's ham, and spin around like the button on a barn-door. But the cat was game, and he'd come and clinch, and the way they'd gouge and bite, and bawl, and the way they'd make the fur fly was powerful."

"Well, Jim he got disgusted with the row, and 'lowed he'd climb out there, and shake 'em off that roof. He hadn't reely no notion of doing it, likely, but he everlastingly dogged him and belly-ragged him, and 'lowed he always bragged how he wouldn't take a dare, and so on, 'till bimble he histed the window, and lo and behold you, he went—went exactly as he was, nothing on but a shirt, and it was short. You ought to see him ere-a-pin' over the ice, and digging his toe-nails in for to keep from slipping; and 'bove all you ought to see that shirt a flapping in the wind, and them long ridiculous shanks of his'n glancing in the moonlight."

"Then Comely folks was down there under the eaves, the whole squad of 'em under that ornery shed of dead Wash-ton Bower vines—all sitting round two dozen saucers of hot candy, which they'd put in the snow to cool. And they was laughin' and talkin' lively; but bless you, they didn't know nothing 'bout the panorama that was goin' on over their heads."

"Well," Jim, he went a sneakin' and a sneakin' up, unbeknowns to them tom cats—they was a wakin' their tails and a yow-yowin' and threatenin' to clinch, you know, and not paying any attention —he went a sneakin' and a sneakin' right up to the comb of the roof, till he was in a foot and a half of 'em and then all of a sudden he made a grab for the yellow cat! But, by gosh! he missed fire and slipped his hold, and his heels flew up, and he flopped on his back, and shot off, that roof like a dart—went a smash-in' and a crashin' down through them old rusty vines and landed right in the dead centre of all them company people and sot down like a yearhunkie in them two dozen saucers of candy, and let off a bang that was hark from the tombs!— Them girls—well, they left you know—They see he was dressed for company and so they left. All done in a second; it was just one little war hoop, and a whisk of their dresses, and blame the wench of them that were in sight anywhere."

"Jim he was in sight. He was gormed with the bilin' hot molasses candy clean down his heels, and had more busted saucers hangin' to him than if he
