

Nebraska Advertiser.

J. S. CHURCH, Editor. BROWNVILLE, THURSDAY, OCT. 22, 1898.

For President in 1896, ULYSSES S. GRANT. For Vice-President, SCHUYLER COLFAX.

For Presidential Electors, T. M. MARQUETTE, of Cass Co. ALGER ABEL, of Richardson, J. F. WALKER, of Dakota Co.

THANKSGIVING. Proclamation by the President. By the President of the United States: Whereas the day of Thanksgiving is a day of thanksgiving to God for the many mercies which have been bestowed upon the people of the United States...

In the year which is now drawing to a close, the year of the people of the United States has been a year of great activity and progress. The people have shown a determination to do better than in the past...

Remember the Republican Mass Meeting at Rockport tomorrow. Senator Drake of Missouri and Senator Tipton of Nebraska are among the speakers.

Senator Tipton will speak to the citizens in Douglas precinct next Saturday at 2 o'clock p. m. John Long Esq. is to make the appointment at some central place.

The U. S. Land Office will finish up all its business in Brownville this month, and then go to Beatrice. All who have business to transact with the office and wish to do it at Brownville will remember to do it now, for ten days hence it will be too late.

Register! Register! All persons who were not registered at the late election are informed that now is the time to have the omission supplied, so that they can vote at the Presidential election next November.

The Rev. Mr. Phillips of Tecumseh, presented us with a very richly bound volume of "Madison Avenue Lectures," delivered in the Baptist church, Madison Avenue, New York, by many distinguished clergymen...

The following are the majorities, official and reported, for Mr. Taffe (Republican) and Mr. Poppleton (Copperhead), in the different counties of the State, as far as ascertained:

Table with 3 columns: Counties, Taffe, Poppleton. Lists majorities for various counties like Richardson, Nemaha, etc.

By the politeness of J. M. Haeker, our faithful County Clerk, we are enabled to lay before our readers the following table, which shows the number of registered electors for the late election in Nemaha County, the number voting, the number who did not vote, and the estimated political status of the non voting:

Table with 4 columns: Precincts, Registered, Voting, Non-voting. Lists precincts like Brownville, Peru, etc.

If these persons had all not only voted, but voted the straight ticket, the Republican majority of this county would have been 594 instead of 403, as it now seems to be. We know of several who voted the Democratic ticket who have declared for some of the reasons that they cannot vote for Seymour and Blair, and many of them will undoubtedly vote the Grant and Colfax ticket. We are confident if the people are not prevented from coming out to the election by any unforeseen accident, that on the 3rd day of November next Nemaha County will roll up for the Republican ticket a majority of 700.

Railroad up the West Bank of the Missouri.

There has been a general expression of the people in the counties in Nebraska bordering on the Missouri River in favor of the contemplated Railroad in favor of the contemplated Railroad from Atchison, Kansas, to Omaha, Nebraska; and there is no doubt but that if a responsible and thorough company should take hold of the matter, they could get much material aid from the counties and citizens of the State. All feel the importance of the road, and are fully aware of the immense benefit a good railroad connection with St. Louis would be to us on the river. We hope this matter will not be allowed to rest until the interest which is now awakened is drawn towards other roads that seem to promise earlier relief.

The people of the river counties are determined to have a railroad. If St. Louis will not second their efforts for the road they want, they will accept the proffered aid of the next best road which proposes to reach their interests. Then it may be too late for the river road when the securities and the State have exhausted their means in a road of secondary importance merely because she was first in the field.

If St. Louis thinks our trade worth contending for, now is the time to reach for it, when we are not only willing but able to assist in making the reaching easier. We shall watch this enterprise to see whether it means business or merely a desire for business without the disposition to make what they want practicable. The people in this section are uneasy. The innumerable eribs of corn, stacks of wheat, droves of cattle, and pens of hogs, sheep, etc., are uneasy for a sure and early market. Rest is out of the question. Who, who or what is first to propose practical relief?

Books and Periodicals. The Chicago Legal News, published weekly by Mrs. Myra Bradwell, Chicago, Ill., at $2 per year, is before us. It is a small sheet in quarto form, and it reports the legal news and judicial opinions announced in important trials before various tribunals. It is a paper for the lawyer and the business man, and surely every enterprising thinking lawyer will have it.

We have received a late No. of the Western Jurist, published by Mills & Co., Des Moines, Iowa, at $3 a year. It is a monthly law magazine of real merit. It gives a digest of the opinions of the supreme bench of Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, and many other States in advance of the authorized reports, and in the more important cases it gives the opinion in full. It is the best law magazine for the western practitioner published, and one which no lawyer can attentively read without profit.

Mr. Kelley, of the Tecumseh Gazette, has left at this office a copy of The Progress, a weekly paper in magazine form, devoted to temperance, reform, literature, art, and general news, and published by Bennett, Greely & Latour, 22 Spruce street, New York, at $2 a year. It is filled with a very interesting variety of reading matter. We should be pleased to see it generally circulated in this county. Mr. Kelly will act as agent.

The Rev. Mr. Phillips of Tecumseh, presented us with a very richly bound volume of "Madison Avenue Lectures," delivered in the Baptist church, Madison Avenue, New York, by many distinguished clergymen...

EDITOR ADVISORY.—The Nemaha County Teachers Association met in the High School building at Brownville on the evening of the 16th inst. The large room in the building was well filled with an intelligent audience to listen to the lecture of Prof. McKenzie on Geography. It was an interesting discourse.

On the 17th the business of the Association was transacted; Isaac Black was elected President and the other officers were properly filed by election. There were many of the best teachers of the county present, and we are sorry to say that many were absent. Teachers institutes are acknowledged by all to be great aids to the true teacher, still many who grant this to be true, will not spare the time to attend our meetings. They will find in this volume that this time they will hold will cost them dearly, for the teachers who show that they do not let an opportunity slip by for improvement without reaping the benefit of all its offers, are already commanding from five to ten dollars a month more than those "cant spare the time" sort, who teach for want of others to take their place. The address that the "early bird catches the worm," holds good with teachers as well as in other departments of labor.

I will furnish you with the minutes of the Association for publication next week. F. M. WILLIAMS.

REB. NEBRASKA, Oct. 16, 1898. Mr. Emerson.—The Rev. Geo. Alexander of Nebraska City, will deliver an address before the Philomathean Society of the Normal School, on Thursday evening, October 29th. His subject will be "The Pyramid of the Seven Qualifications of a Model Preacher."

If he does not treat the above subject he will deliver his lecture on "Effort and Genius," which was very highly commended by the Nebraska City papers.

We shall doubtless have a very able and interesting address. The public are cordially invited to attend. GEO. W. HAWKWOOD, Sec.

Gax. Butler's Proclamation convening the Legislature in extra session at 12 m. on next Tuesday, was in yesterday's Republic. It meets in Omaha to provide for choosing three Presidential electors for the State.

Sheridan Lot Sale adjourned. See advertisement in another column.

Rev. Geo. Alexander will deliver a lecture before the State Normal School in the evening of October 29th—subject, "The Pyramid of the Sacred Seven," or the seven qualifications of the true teacher. From our acquaintance with the Rev. gentleman, we will venture the assertion the address will be a rich treat to them who will be present. We solicit a seat in advance for ourselves and family.

We are informed that a Post Office has been established at Hillsdale in this county, and that Geo. R. Shook has been appointed Post Master, and just here allow us to quote a part of Section 14 Article 2 of the Constitution of Nebraska:

"If any person shall, after his election as a member of the Legislature, be elected to Congress, (not married to) or appointed to any office, civil or military, under the Government of the United States, he shall be deemed to have vacated his seat."

Now, Bro. Shook, be careful and in no way act in violation of the constitution. We give you this gentle reminder, lest in an unguarded moment you may unconstitutionally accept the fair hand or the loving office and thus lose your seat.

John Long says that Senator Tipton's appointment will be at Hartman's School House.

NEBRASKA CITY, Oct. 14. Johnson county gives Taffe and Butler 182 majority. Gage county gives Taffe and Butler 183 majority. Lancaster county gives Taffe and Butler 125 majority. Gains in all the above counties for Republicans.

Burt county gives 100 Republican majority. Sarpy county gives 7 Democratic majority.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16. The World editorially says, that the Democratic party has been injured by aspersions cast upon it through the indirect letter of Blair to Broadhead, which has been successfully used by the Republican party to show that the Democratic party is friendly to England. He denounces Tammey Hall, and declares that voters of the Fifth District must take him as an independent candidate or not at all.

MARRIED. At the house of J. L. Columbia, in Hillsdale, Nemaha County, Nebraska, on the 13th of October, 1898, by Rev. Geo. R. Shook, Mr. George L. Shook to Miss Fanny J. Jones. By the Rev. A. L. Follen, at North Star, Mo., on the 13th inst., Mr. Alphonse W. Williams, Nebraska, to Miss Cora Chamberlain, of the adjacent office.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS. ALL ABOARD FOR SALT RIVER! The New and Elegant Copper Bottom STEAMER DEMOCRAT, T. W. BEDFORD, Master, O. P. FAULKNER, Clerk. Will leave as above on the evening of the 21st inst. for the Democratic National Convention at St. Louis, Mo. For further particulars apply to the undersigned, who is under the special management of the steamer.

St. Louis, Oct. 16. The Democrat's Washington special says a new source of grief and tribulation to the Democratic party in this district, has come in the breaking up of the Democratic National Convention. This occurred last evening, when Col. O'Brien their President, came out in a strong speech for Grant and Colfax, which it is believed will probably be commended by the majority of the delegates. Col. O'Brien was warmly endorsed by several members of the club.

St. Louis, Oct. 16. The Democrat's Washington special says a new source of grief and tribulation to the Democratic party in this district, has come in the breaking up of the Democratic National Convention. This occurred last evening, when Col. O'Brien their President, came out in a strong speech for Grant and Colfax, which it is believed will probably be commended by the majority of the delegates. Col. O'Brien was warmly endorsed by several members of the club.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. SENATE.—Cole, Cameron and Patterson of Tennessee, were the only members present. The President called on the Senate to order, and after prayer by the Chaplain, declared the session adjourned until the 10th of November.

HOUSE.—The following Representatives were present: Colfax, Ind.; Lincoln, New York; O'Neil, Pennsylvania; French, North Carolina; Ketchum, West Virginia; East, North Carolina; South, Carolina; Peck, Kentucky; Prince and Edwards, Georgia. At noon the speaker called the House to order and after prayer by the Chaplain declared the House adjourned until the 10th of November.

St. Louis, Oct. 15. The Board of Commissioners to give Bradford, Republican, the certificate, declaring him elected delegate by seven majority.

St. Louis, Oct. 17. The Washington correspondent of the Democrat telegraphs as follows: The Democratic attack upon the Presidential candidates, has fully occupied public attention here to-day. It has become known that Wash. MeLean and his friends were among the first to telegraph upon the matter, after the result of the elections became sufficiently known. Pendleton himself, according to the Democrat's special, sent a dispatch to-day, urging that Chase be substituted for Seymour.

To offset such influences, quite a number of leading New York Seymourites have telegraphed here to-day, saying that the World spoke without the authority of those there in favor of a change.

The majority want Chase, but a great deal of very bitter opposition has been developed during the day. Seymourites in the city are almost without exception opposed to the change, and say they will never submit to it. Hancock says he will never accept the second place on the ticket. The Blair men are insisting with indignation that the President approve of a change but think that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice, he regards the movement as opposed to the Constitution. The President approves of a change but thinks that he ought to be the figure-head. The Johnson men in the Cabinet favor a change. Mr. Blair is insisting upon the nomination of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown thinks that Ewing should be in Blair's place. McCulloch wants a change. Tom Florence, though a Chase man, says that it is too late; and Rosecrans repeats it still more emphatically than ever. As for the Chief Justice