THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1870.

[From our Daily of Thursday.]

It has not Rained for twelve hours and our roads are almost dry, such is the porosity of our soil.

The loyal editor of The Last Ditch is around this morning on the streets to see the effect of his torpedoes. The only effect percepible was an extra twist to his moustache, and small sympathy.

The small "defeateds" deny this morning that they were required to "give bond." This, it is presumed, the justice knew to be impossible for them to do, as Webster says a bond is "an obligation imposing a moral duty."

The Weather has taken a slight change: vesterday afternoon was bright and sunny, and this morning instead of the usual rain the fog was so thick that you could not see half the length of a lot. It may simmer down to beautiful weather by the time of the Fair.

Mount & Bennet are building a travelkind we ever saw, and is very well adapted to the purpose. We predict they will take splendid pictures in it.

NEW MILINERY SHOP.

The Misses L. & L. Klous, Milliners and Dress Makers, at No. 20, have just received and are to-day opening their newst ck, consisting of a beautiful line of Ribbe us, Veivets, Artificial flowers, Plumes, and in fact, everything necessary to trim bont ets and hats in the very latest and neatest styles known to the fashionable world, together with innumerable shapes, of which their deft fingers are prepared to make the lovliest Hats and Bonnets immaginable. They have also a splendid lot of the latest patterns for ladies and childrens dresses, and are prepared to do all manner of Dress Making, in the latest styles known to either Paris or New York. They will have two expert dress makers constantly employed and guarrantee entire satisfaction. Their Goods and style of business is such that we heartily recommend them to the ladies of this city and county.

[From our Daily of Wednesday.] Trotting and Racing Postponed. On account of the inclemency of the weathr and consequent bad condition of the track. there was no trotting or pacing this afternoon ; but was postponed until to-morrow afternoon if the weather is good. A Runaway occured last evening, which for danger and luck to the parties concerned we have never known equalled. O. A. Thurman had just seated Miss Lillie McNaughton in his two horse carriage, and started to get in himself, when the horses started ; dragging him down with one leg through the wheel, and running over him lengthwise; yet letting him off with very few scratches. The horses then ran up College street at a fearful rate, turning off near Mr. Hetzel's residence, where Miss McNaughton was thrown out with nothing more serious than a few contusions about the head and shoulders. It was a narrow escape.
