A REAL PROPERTY AND A REAL				19-2-12-17-1 16-12-17-12-17-12-17-12-17-12-17-17-17-17-17-17-17-17-17-17-17-17-17-	A CONTRACTOR OF	N.S. R. Sale of Cale State Contemporation (1998)	niger proventione service designations and an
THE ADVERTISER.		ALAAAA		A. A.	A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A A	A second made abasis of a second state of the second secon	THE ADVERTISE ADVERTISING BATES.
CAFFREY & HACKER, Proprietors,	G.HL	MANANC	7 RAY		YPYTYNI	ZDAY	Maning Monthly Report of the second s
DEDWNVILLE, NEBRASKA.		- C C C C C					Other institution         2.50         2.40         5.00         7.00         10.00           Three inschools         2.50         2.40         5.00         7.00         10.00           Three inschools         3.00         4.00         5.00         10.00         11.00           Three inschools         3.00         5.00         10.00         11.00         10.00         11.00           Tweel vertreichen         5.00         12.00         2.60         2.60         2.60         2.60         5.00         10.00         5.00<
Signal Stress     Signal Stress       Signal Stress     Signal Stres       Signal Stress     Si		VER CLERK L BWORD			<sup>11</sup> etteril - at the new series, even it is a series of the new series of the ne	a and another spant Organization of the	Legal advertisements at legal extent: One too elabititie of Agnie-space, or less.) first insert if d: each subscipted insertion, ide. diff All transcient advertisements must be
ADING MATTER ON EVERY PAGE	ESTABLISHED 1856. ] Oldest Paper in the State. ]	BRC	WNVILLE, NEBRASI	KA, THURSDAY, AUG	UST 3, 1871.	VOL. 15NO. 42.	OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE COUNT
SOCIAL DIRECTORY.	BUSINESS CARDS.	From Harper's Weekly. Gone with a Handsomer Man.	A Man's Temptation.	my time. I did it all myself till you	sort of way, toward her house; went	Hans Christian Andersen.	puppets and dolls, began to find a
LODGES.	HOTELS.		a dua tan 🙃 tahodhar	were old enough to help me, and	on, until he saw a slender figure coming as if to meet him, under the		pressions in writing, and, before
Permas Council No. 3, R. & S. M	SHERMAN HOUSE C. M. Kauffman, Propris-	JOHN. I've worked in the field all day, a-plowing the	John Osgood let down the bars for the tired oxen, with which he had	I hands, John. Still, may be James	leafless elm boughs, over the dead	The Banish Story-Teller.	finished his schooling, he was writi stories and dramas; and just before
h month, immediately after the Chapter INC, BLAKE, T. I.G. M. T. A. CREDOR.	Thoroughly remodeled and returnished. Feed su- ble in connection with the house. Stages for all	"stony streak " Pye solided my foam fill Pro bears. The transf	been plowing all day, to go through them, and seek on the cool hillsides		and rustling leaves which lay thick	The stories of Andersen, which we all read and speak of, sometimes as	the passed his last examination, wh att Carmel Commandery Knight Tem-	points west and oronibuses for all trains.	till my legs are weak ;	their night's pasturage. They turned	1 "I don't feel satisfied, father, to be	dream he moved forward. He had	fairy tales, sometimes as legends, or	brought out a collection of poet plar No. 3 Meets in Masonic Hall on the	A Front street, between Main and College. Good Ford and Livery Stable in connection with figs	105)	their heads and looked at him with their great mournful eyes, as if ex-	to do something more with my life	meant to pass her with just a good	simply as stories, are, in the Danish language, called eventyr, a word that	and one of his plays was acted at si (Sim, Joo, BLANE, Becorder,	House,	When the plow-p'nt struck a stone and the handle punched my ribs.	pecting a word, for they were used to	a You could here a man to do all 1 do	out to him, and he looked into her	had the same origin, perhaps, as our	Denmark is a little country, but
Revenuelle Chapter No. 4. R. A. M.	DRUGGISTS.	Pressenting and active	the sound of his voice, the slow, pa-	want to see what I'm worth some-	fair, still face, the words came before	adventure. The meaning is not the same, however, for the eventy's are	old nation inhabits it; and hence Juny BLANE, M. E. H. P. RUFUS T.	M. Stationery, Elc., No. 72 Main street, Brown- ville, Nob. Full assortiment of Denas, Paints, Of a.	If ye put my team in the barn, and rubbed then sweatly coats;	much as dumb beasts always do the	where else."	"I have seen it tall in the paper,	adventures or seenes which have	thing like a great family. Every mahn Valley Lodge No. 4, A. F. &	Books, Stationary, etc., on hund, and sold at whole- sale or retail.	I've fed 'em a heap of hay and half a bushel of onts	voice of a kind master. But to-night	t lence. The mother finished washing	Angie, and I am so sorry."	something wonderful about them.	knows every one, and personal aff
A	GUN SMITH.	And to see the way they eat makes me like eatin feel,	up the bars again when they had		ruin hlm."	something out of the common line of incidents; and when Andersen pub-	or artist, or actor, is at once taken ere samrday night, JOHN BLAKE, Servery Phrasen, Serve,	WM. F. CHADDOCK, Gun Smith & Lock Smith.	And Jane won't say to-night that I don't make out	gone through, and leaned heavily against them.	down between her son and her hus-	"And you! I thought most of you.	lished his "Eventua fortable for Born."	hand; people not only talk ab
Brewnville Lodge No. 5, I. O. O. F.	Nebraska, Guns made to order, and repairing done promptly at cheap rates.	a meal,	A May sunset was flushing earth	hands shaking a little. After a	SOOH,	he meant to say that these were strange stories of storks, of tops and	him and tell him what he ought
A J. MUFALL, N. G. R. W. BENNETT, Secy.	RESTAURANTS.	Well said ! the door is locked ! but here she's left	and sky. The new springing grass	while the old man reached out and took one of the trembling hands into	"Not to him," she said hurricdly,	balls, of mermaids princes and prin-	do Sociate thara la a village too.
CHURCHES.	RANK RESTAURANTGeo. Daughariy, Pro-	the key, Under the step, in a place known only to her and	feathery leafage was on all the trees,	nis own.	months ago. i had never loved him.	been published a volume, which he	who had come up from noverty a Presbytering Church, - Services Cash september (1999) a. m., and 750 p. m. Prayer , Stadteening evenings, Sabbath School [	D prietor. No. 37 Main street, Brownville, Neb. Meabat all hours. Board by the day or week.	I STATUS IN THE STATUS	and a few of them, near and cherry	he said, trying to speak cheerfully.	It was vanity that made me consent	calls "The Story of my Life :" and in	was besides a young man ignorant.
A state, J. T. BAIRD, Pastor.	BLACKSMITHS,	Dell-mell :	The Western sky was piled high	What he feels isn't unnatoral. Oth-	and gallant, and he promised me all	he wished to say, that in looking heak	files and in the early days of his and the second s	A STATE OF	But here's on the table a note, and probably this will tell.	with crimson clouds, with close to	er young men say the same. Very few of them are contented now-a-	the good things of this life. But I	upon his life, it seemed to him as	thorship had to struggle hard to ms
A W. Manrix, Paster,	of work in fron, on short notice, and at prices in keeping with the times.	[5] S. A. T. HARD, P. M. R. S. W. W.	reflected brightness finished the East	days to live their father's fives over	them would pay me for myself; and	tures, but they were not such as fell	commanded attention and respe
a present to the second s	J. W. & J. C. GIRSON, Blacksmiths and Horse Shoers, Firststreet, belween Main and Atlantic.	A 11 DELET BESTS. " GOOD-DY for PRESSOUTH ANALY	with a soft, roseate hue which spread	again. Only, it's come sudden. Don't	1 told him the trath. <sup>22</sup>	to the ordinary lot of man. Some	monto began to see that he had wi
Marine at Liseona scheck p. m. Sundhy	Brownville, Neb. Work done to order and satisfac-	a start of the good bas internet, a data, said no the	new birth of a new world. A sense of	lair and right-only sudden."	tones, or the swift color that stained	stowed gifts upon him, and brought to	things for which he was at first bla
And a ministered on the first Sunday and South free, G. R. DAVIS, Hector,	BOOTS AND SHOES.	But I'm going away to day with a handsomer man	wonderful beauty and mystery thrill-	John got up and went up stairs.	her cheek, or her shy, half-veiled	hia:, born in poverty and observity,	ed-his naivele and childishness -
Implied Church. Corner Fourth and At-	A LEX. ROBINSON, Boot and Shoe Maker, No. 28 Main street, Brownville, Neb. Has constant-	than you."	tions. He had no words for such a	His mother's pale silence, his father's attempt at cheerfulness, seemed more	good courage, and he said, holding	know. Thus he begins the fairy tale	good qualities in literature.
there is each mouth, at 10% o'clock A. M.,	ly on hand a good assoriment of Gent's, Lady 4, Missee' and Children's Boots and Shore. Coston	A handsomer man than me ! Why, that ain't much	scene, no clearly defined thoughts	I than he could bear. He went away!	her hand still-	of his life :	From that time to this he has he
The strategies of the second s	work done with nextmess and disputch. Repairing	to say: There's handsomer bien than bie go past here eve-	eves, and quickened his pulses, and	to his room and sat down by the win- dow. Over across the fields a light	good things of this life to promise	and full of incidents. If, when I was	ple, such as "The Improvisators the sine ( haveh, LondonDivine ser-	HARDWARE.	ry day. There's han'somer men than me-I alo't of the	seemed to flood his life with a rush of	burned steadily. He knew it was	you, Angie, that I dared not tell you	a boy and went forth in the world	which is a pleture of Italy, and "
e servery rublish at 11 a. m., and in the	SHELLENBERGER BROS., Dealers in Hard- ware, Stoves, Thware, Carpenter Tools, Black-	han'some kind;	How beautiful this world was!	the lamp in Angeline Wilmarth's parlor. Was she worth all this that	should. You seemed too bright and	met me and said. "Choose now thy	groups are Danish He has been a Month - Priseonal - Peru - Service	shuth Farminings, Etc., No. 74 Main sirect, Brown ville, Neb.	But a bonin'er man than I was I guess abe'll never and.	There were some men, he had heard,	he was making these two old people	fair to settle down here, as the wife	course and the object for which thou	great traveler, also and among
-dubicocloud p. m. Rev. R. C. TALBOTT.	DEUSER & SHIRTS, Hardware Merchants, No. 79 Main stress, Brownville, Neb. Dealers in		others who wrote poetry about them	suffer? Would she ever love him as they did? Was he sure that she	"But if I like that best?" she said,	will strive; and, then, according to the developments of thy mind, and	Portugal, Sweden, Halv, Greece a
1. 15. Church, London. Services every	Sloves, Tinware, Etc.	Curse her! cursd her! I say, and give my curses wings!	-others who set them to music, like	would love him at all? And in this	softly, and her hand stayed in his.	as reason requires, I will guide and	the Orient. He is Danish to the co it is threeh, Perg. Servicesevery Sab	the second second state of the second s	May the words of love T've spoke be changed to	waves. What was his part of all	untried life, this great world where so many failed, how did he know that	heart's desire.	fate could not, even then, have been	the wild sand-hears of Jutland, t
MARTIN PRINCIPALD, Pastor,	CHARS, HAUBOLDT, Merchant Tailor, No. 62 Mathematical, Brownwille, Neb. Has on hand a	On the filled my heart with his, she constant my	this? Was that all life held for him?	he should succeed? What was he go-	There are some souls I like to think	directed more happily, more prudent-	beech-trees, the bright, quarrelson
6. f. Church, Nemaka City,-Services	Spiescial slock of Goods, and will hake them up in the balant styles on short notice, and here and her	heart of doubt,	other meaning, if he could only grasp	ing to do? How vague all his pur- poses were-just a dream, born of a	Father, who learn easily the lessons	will say to the world what it says to	city life, the fresh, frank hospitalit
CITT OFFICALS.	SALGONS.	And now, with a scratch of a pen, she lets my heart's blood out :	it. If he had no part or lot in all	soft Spring night and Angie Wil-	He sets them; who do not need over	me-There is a loving God who di-	little stories that have wen him
City Council, Mosts the First Monday is	La sur a	Come hard over herd work is not	Just then he heard horses' feet, and	marth's fair face! And for it he was going to overturn the whole frabric	lowest seat at feast or synagogue there	The beginning of this lively fairy	nown. They were comething so he and pleasing that they became at on
W. D. L. de, F. E. Johnson C. Neldmirdt, L.	9 Joon, No. 47 Main strept, Browny He, Neo. The J has Minas and License least on bund.	Curse hert curse hert say I; she'll some day rue this day;	looking in the direction whence it	of his life. No, he would not be so	is a Divine and approving tender-	tale was a birth in a poor shoemaker's	general favorites with young and of
Transfer, 3, W. Middleton, Police Judge,	DICHARD HARPSTER, Albambra Billiard St.	she'll sometime learn that hate is a game that two can play ;	came. Angeline Wilmarth was	mad. This Summer, at least, all should go on as before. He would	come up higher."	nonse at Odense, a town in Denmark, on the second of April, 1805. Ander-	and in the theatres, instead of poelt
	De torm, No. 19 Main street, Brownville, Neb. The best Writes and Elquorsconstantly on hand,	And hour before the distribution rieve she ever was	gallant beside her. How like a part	take time to consider. By Autumn i		sen was born in the one room which	Tin Soldies," "The Top and Ball
	CONTRACTOR OF A	born: And Ulinbury hor mercendia have such as a second	of the sunset beauty she looked, with	he should know better what to do,	. VALLANDIGHAM'S REASON,	his father and mother occupied, which	or "The Swineherd," Thorwaldse

COURT, 1st. JUDICIAL DIST.	CHADGE C CTADES	And I'll plow her grave with hate, and seed it down	its rose upon her cheek, its radiance	and whether he could bear to leave	The following extracts from the	served allike for house and shop; his	the famous sculptor, was a Dane, and
	GEORGE G. START,	to scorn !	in her eyes and hair. Her long, blue	that old father and mother-five of	Dayton correspondence of the Cin-	father, a young man of poetic mind,	was delighted with Andersen's sto-
SPRING TERM.	CASIL DEALER IN		habit falling low, and swinging to	whose treasures the churchward held.	einnati Gazette will be fonnd interest-	always hungering after a richer life	ries. In his company he wrote "Oh-the reaction of the second of the liter stonady in	0 1 0 4 1 11 11 11 11 11	As sure as the world goes on, ther'H come a time	the motion of her cream-colored	and whose all he was-quite alone.	ing . "Shortly before Mr. Vallandig-	than that spent in making shoes; his	Shut Eye," and "often," says Anderin the character of Noncolma on the second Monday	Intain & Antiputtinal Implements	when she	horse, her white feather streaming	He began to think that this very fact	ham left home for Lebanon to engage	mother, a simple, superstitions, affec-	sen. "in the twilight, when the famiorum et ngrissertarar impromonto	Will read the devilish heart of that han'somer man	back on the wind, her little hands	that he was their all laid on him an	in the defense of Tom Melichan, in-	tionate woman. In this room he be-	Ity sat to the open earden parlor. Thotin the Country of Highurdson, on thesecond Wed-	And Storage, Forwarding and	than me:	with the dainty gauniets on them-	obligation that was not to be evaded	dicted for the nurder of Tom Movers	gan his life, and his carliest recollec-	waldsen would come softly behind, a sugginardire.	Commission Merchant.	And there'll be a time when he will find, as others	so much youth and grace and heauty.	-that no success purchased at such	at Hamilton last Christmas eve, the	tions furnished him with scenes	and clapping me on the shoulder.
in the trends of Fiscance, on the needed Monday	ASPINWALL, NEBRASKA.	do,	And the "city chap," as John Os-	selfish expenditure would be worth	arout for a life insurance company.	which afterward he wove into his	would ask, "Shall we little ones heat investing:		This see who landse to one can be the same with	borne called him, by her side, did uot	having. At any rate he would wait.	here asked Mr. Vallaudigham to per-	stories.	env tales to night or or inductions of Johnson, on the first Friday,	J. W. APPLEGATE,	C 14 (C)	mar the picture. A handsome, cav-	And so sleep came to him, and the	mit him to write him up a policy for	"Out little room," he says, "which	When he began writing his stories, the private	IDARITROS & DRUBTOL		alierish looking man, there was no	morning brought him strength and	about ion thousand dollars on his life.	was almost filled with the shoemak-	The sought only to tell over again old
the rest of the rest of the second of the se	AND MALE AND	And when her face grows pale, and when hereyes	denving that he showed well beside	calmness, and seemed to give him	With is omite anneceessary " roulled	(crabenell, the bed, and my crib, was	Incends of Denmark, which he had
" I to the of Difference was the first Monitory	BRUNNILLI & DURLULIII	grow diffs,	Angie ; but what is he here so much	back his old self again.	Mr. Vallandigham. "I come of a	the abode of my childhood; the	heard as a child; but as his interest derested and an and	Brownville, Nebrashn.	She'll do what she upstit to have done, and could	for? They swept by, Augie's low.	"Will you see James McCormick	long lived mee. My father and fath-	walls, however, were covered with	increased he invented his stories, and billie (out) of Saline, on the first Thursday	STATE IN STATES OF DETENDING OT	count the cost;	silvery laugh tinkling a response to	to-day ?" his father asked, at break-	or's father and their provenitors, for	pictures, and over the work-bench	soon every Christmas hought a new
Tomba	1 pare Plans, Draw Designs, and Farneth Spen-		something her companion was say-	fast, with an anxiety he strove to con-	by hong period wors have lived ; and it	was a cupboard containing books and	volume of stories from him. I think · · · FALL TELM.	ffeations. Satisfaction permuteesi, Job Work of	she has lost.	ing; and a little cloud of dust which	ceal.	Inherit their longevity. I feel that I	songs; the little kitchen was full of	one reason why, he wrote these stoto the County of thee, on the first Monday in Ser-	Street, between Main and Atlantic. 20-H	and the second	the hoofs of the horses beat up behind	John smiled cheerfully.	Ishall live to be an old man. My vital	shining plates and metal, and, by	ries, which he did not publish until events and a second sec			them filled John's eyes, and choked	"Not to-day, father ; not at present.	provide no se vicerons as ever and	means of a ladder, it was possible to	he was known as the author of "The during Nampy of Gage, on the second Monday	JACOB R. BERKLEY. MRGHAEL * WITZES.	her mind,	his threat, and added bitterness to his		I am to-day as hopeful as when I was	go out on the roof, where, in the gut-	Improvisatore," was, that he was
	BERKLEY & SWITZER,	And she will mouth and cry for what she has left	prood.	too sudden to be wise. I have given	twenty-five years old. No, doctor,	ters between our house and the neigh-	heartily tired of the perpetaal criti-
In the Doubty of Johnson, on the first Friday	DIMMINIC OF PROTECTION	behind:	He elanced down at his hard	it up, for a time, at least. I will car-	there is no use for me to take out a	bor's, there stood a great chest filled	ciam which the people were pulling in the results of Destance on the flast Wednesday	STR O Manuta ma TPa Trany	And mayby she'll sometimes long for me-for me-	horny hands, his coarse toil-stained	ry on the place a while longer."	policy of life insurance," The doc-	with soil, my mother's sole garden,	of blos and whiled to do nonethlast the rest of the net of the net of the second second	AA SOON & FELLINGER SEELS	6046 110 1	clothes How well be would look at	The old man's face cleared, but he		where she grew hor vegetables. In in the County of Bicknedson, on the first Monday	0	I've blotted her out of my heart, and I will not have it so.	Angeline Wilmarth's side! And yet	did not speak-only John Osgood's	ham was absent a good deal from	my story of the "Snow Queen" that	without forever explaining what they aller.			he had loved her in a vague sort of a	mother go up and silently kissed him.	home, and traveled extensively by	garden still blooms."	liked and what they did not like. For
In the County of Neuraha, jon the second Friday	TOT A ATTOM DE TRATE	And yot in how delich hand there was consulted as	way, whose meaning he had just be-	No young lips could have been more	rallway, it would be a matter of pre-	He grew into a tall, ungainly lad,	the first time he found blosself in .a.
a tydica.	BLACKSMITHS.	other she had	gun to find out, ever zsince he could	fond-could any be more dear ???	contion. In the way of provision for	as shy as a girl, and yet to simple-	wholly congental effete; his qualit-
WINTER TERM.	COLLECE STRPPS	That fastened a man to he, and was nt enrirely had:	remember. Life would not have	Two weeks after that news came to	his family to have his Bfe insured for	hearted that he was ready to confide	est fancies pleased, and were not jeer-
In the County of Oloo, on the first Monday in De-	Conneon statisti	And she loved mea little I think although it did at	such a savar he thought without	him of Angeline Wilmarth's betroth-	a considerable amount, ofr. Vallan-	to the utmost in any one who scalled	red at.
- annex	BROWNVILLE, - NEB.	lost:	her. And yet, she would be no fit	al to her cousin-ine city-bred young	dichara confied: "You know, dec-	on him. At a charity action he learn-	Anderson was never pratried, and
		But I mustn't think of these things-I've buried	farmer's wife, and that was just what	man whom he had seen riding beside	tur, that I came of Calvanistic stock.	oi just a little, but that little so care-	lives a monolling sort of life, some-arrival and Deporture of Mails.	CUSTON WORK	'em in the past.	he was-a farmer. Then the ques-	her in the May twillght. This was	and that I am thoroughly indoctrina-	lessly that long afterwards he suffer-	times in Conchingen, But oute as of Northern Delig, by Railrend-Arrives H a. m.	The second part of the part of the second se		tion came again which had haunted	an unexpected blow, something	ted with Calvauism. If I am not to	ed for the lack of such common	ton traveling in Soula, Switzerland,
Southern - Daily, by Rathrond - Arrives 200p.m.	and manner which will guarantee satisfaction.	I'll take my hard words back, nor make a bad mat.	him before-could he be nothing else?	which, knowing the man was her	go that way, or any other way, why,	knowledge, even as how to spell. It	Franco and Holland, Ho is a great Manufactoria Contactory Fielder Amelians Venue The	Mr. Berkely does the Wood Work, and Mr. Saduer	ter worse ; She'll have trouble enough ; she shall not have my	Did fate doom him, did God ask him	cousin, he had never feared. The	then, it is so ordained, and I will not	was now, too, that he began to asso-	favorite at various courts, but his true
[1] S. J. M.	the Backsulthing and the Iron Work, and profess- es to be a seperior hand at	ettrae ;	always to go in and out on these old	news sank into his heart with a dull,	insure against Providence, But I	cinte more with others, and, like his	distinguion consists in the fact that Fouriers - Un Normana City, Dally-Arrives 5		But I'll live a life so square-and I well know that	ways-to plow and plant, all summer,	dumb pain. She never would have	have no fears la that direction. Con-	companions, to go through the cate-	every home is oven to hint, and tho
Without Via Tommer in Hentrice-Daily:	HORSE SHOEING.	That she always will sorry be that she went with	and go back and forth between the	cared for him, then-never had. It	sider the changes I have run the past	chism, preparatory to confirmation.	poor as well as the rich, know his
The second secon	#TrGivens went, 25 im	that han somer man.	homestead and the woodlot all win-	was well he had not gone away and	ten years. It is not probable that	He tells a little story here of himself.	ictudly nature. He himself, in "The
We want to wat them. Departs Motelay at 7 a. m.			ter? If his father and mother were	left those who did love him to mourn.	now, when I have got into fair sail-	which shows where 'The Red Shors'	Story of my Life," relates a bright
Nothers dern to the un, Samply endy -Ar-	GEO. S. PHILLIPS,	Ah, here is her kitchen dress! it makes my poor	getting old, if he was all they had-	After all, perhaps this existence of	ing dangars plain or biblion will that	cause from,	little scene. He was away from home,
					T date to a table of the strategies the state of the table of the state and the		I TILLING PARTIALS, TAKE WARE IN THAT AND A PARTIAL PARTIALS
<ul> <li>Southerman, and Probley hit Summ.</li> </ul>	Lyon Lord & Luchanna Ctables		did that settle the mutter? Some one	plowing and planting was all he was	tiply in my course. Resides I feel	"An old female tailor affered my	at Hamburg, we belleve, and, in com-
A monthly and Friday in Found, response trong the training for Type me, Sum Provident Linguist Trong the training to Markov P. M.	i very, Feed & Exchange Stables	Hassener, when I look at that, as if 'twis holdin' her. And here are her week day shors, and there is her.	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them,	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right-	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform	"An old termie tailor affered my deceased father's great coat into a	at Hamburg, we believe, and, in com-
<sup>4</sup> Jacobia and Friday is Faint, 1997 Statement from Ta. in, 1077 p. m. Sun Source of the same W. A. POLOCK, P. M.	I YEIY, FEED, & EXCITATING STADIES	Hassenge, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' her. And here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat,	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough	good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the	"An old female tailor affered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be-	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speekter, the elever artist who has illustrated his stories,
<ul> <li>A. Downand, and Product al Faunt.</li> <li>Description in the product of the pr</li></ul>	I VERT FERTI AT FYTTATISE ATABLES	Hassener, when I look at that, as if 'twis holdin' her. And here are her week day shors, and there is her.	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career	good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in	"An old female tailor affered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat."I had,	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his stories, was setting out for the operahouse.
BUSINESS CARDS.	Brownville, Nebraska.	Hassenna, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' Lier. And nerv are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat. And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'at take that.	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to	"An old female tailor affered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his stories, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came BUSINESS CARDS.	I YEIY, FEED, & EXCITATING STADIES	Hassenna, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' Lier. And nerv are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat. And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'at take that.	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Augeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share.	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis-	"An old female tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat."I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex-	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his stories, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came
BUSINESS CARDS.	Brownville, Nebraska.	Hassenna, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' Lier. And nerv are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat. And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'at take that.	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds	tiply in my course. Besides I feet that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I	"An old female tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his stories, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came
BUSINESS CARDS.	Brownville, Nebraska.	Hassenna, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' Lier. And nerv are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat. And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'at take that.	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East.	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance."	"An old lemmic tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and,	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his stories, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter. "a wealthy family lives here.
BUSINESS CARDS. A TTOMNEYS. MATTOMNEYS.	Brownville, Nebraska.	Hassenna, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' Lier. And nerv are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat. And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'at take that.	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted.	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance."	"An old female tailor affered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of who and friends of your BUSINESS CARDS. ATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS. MATTURNEYS.	J. BLAKE, DENTIST	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her" dearest dear."</li> <li>And said I was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want aman to sense the pains of hell.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Augeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance."	"An old lemmic tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend." sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your storles; the children will be hanty."
BUSINESS CARDS. ATTURNEYS. ATTURNEYS. ATTURNEYS. MARKAR STREAM	Brownville, Nebraska.	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is here week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this morphy she came and called me here" dearest dear."</li> <li>And said I was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want amon to sense the pains of hell.</li> <li>Before you plich him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields. John Osgood's mood exchang-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY.	"An old lemmin tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend." sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera " sold L
BUSINESS CARDS. A TTURINELYS. A TTURINELYS.	J. BLAKE, DENTIST	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is here week-day shoes, and there is here week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this morphy she came and called me here" dearest dear."</li> <li>And said I was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want among to sense the pains of hell.</li> <li>Before you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANX. One evening a lady who belongs to	"An old lemmin tailor affered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold L "Only for two minutes." returned
BUSINESS CARDS. MATTORIAL STREET, AND W.A. POLOCK, P. M. BUSINESS CARDS. ATTORNEYS. MATTORNEYS. MATTORNEYS. MATTAL N. LAVAS, Attorney and Connector at Mattal Science 1. Chancers, Brownellie, Sar Harts of a Million D. Chancers, Brownellie, Sar Harts of a Million D. Chancers, Brownellie, Sar	J. BLAKE, J. BLAKE, DINTIST Monorations Per- formed in the kest meaner. OFFICE:	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is here week-day shoes, and there is here week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this morphy she came and called me here" dearest dear."</li> <li>And said I was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want among to sense the pains of hell.</li> <li>Before you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields. John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina-	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead-	"An old lemmin tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men-
BUSINESS CARDS. MATTORIAL AND WARDLOCK, P. M. BUSINESS CARDS. ATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINEYS. MATTORINESS COMPONENT OF AN AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND	J. BLAKE, DENTIST	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is here week-day shoes, and there is here week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this morphy she came and called me here" dearest dear."</li> <li>And said I was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want among to sense the pains of hell.</li> <li>Before you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields. John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal-	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been	"An old lemmin tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," soid T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of
BUSINESS CARDS. BUSINESS CARDS. ATTORNEYS. ATTORNEYS. MARCHARGES SAllowers and Connector at MARCHARGES SAllowers and Connector at MARCHARGES SAllowers, Brownellies, MARCHARGES, Microsophic Sallowers, MARCHARGES, Microsophic Sallowers, MARCHARGES, Microsophic Sallowers, Marchard, Sallowers, Sallowers, Sallowers, Sallowers, Marchard, Sallowers, Microsophic Sallowers, Sallowers, Marchard, Sallowers, S	J. BLAKE, J. BLAKE, DINTIST Monorations Per- formed in the kest meaner. OFFICE:	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is here week-day shoes, and there is here week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her weddin' gown; I wonder she did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this morphy she came and called me here" dearest dear."</li> <li>And said I was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want among to sense the pains of hell.</li> <li>Before you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late	"An old lemmin tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me.
BUSINESS CARDS. BUSINESS CARDS. BUSINESS CARDS. ATTURNEYS. MATTURN	J. BLAKE, DINTIST MORTING DIST	<ul> <li>Hessenna, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here' are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'at take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaltation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in	"An old female tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con-	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant hoase." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said I. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now fell has a tale." and the
BUSINESS CARDS. BUSINESS CARDS. BUSINESS CARDS. ATTORNEYS. ATTORNEYS. MARKED STRUCTURESS ATTORNEYS. MARKED STRUCTURESS MARKED STRUCTURESS ATTORNEYS. MARKED STRUCTURESS ATTORNEYS. MARKED STRUCTURESS ATTORNEYS AND COMPACTING STRUCTURESS ATTORNEYS AND COMPACTING STRUCTURESS ATTORNEYS AND COMPACTING ATTORNEY AND	J. BLAKE, J. BLAKE, DINTIST Monorations Per- formed in the kest meaner. OFFICE:	<ul> <li>Hessenna, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here' are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'at take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly with	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from	"An old female tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," said the; "only one."
<ul> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>ATTURNEYS.</li> <li>MARCHART AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND</li></ul>	J. BLAKE, DINTIST MORTING DIST	<ul> <li>Hessenna, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here' are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'at take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He wenthome, slowly, with heavy footsteps.	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort.	"An old termite tailor attered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with ford. I would hear or for an or for a set of the form.	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," said he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away
<ul> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUS</li></ul>	J. BLAKE, DINTIST MORTING DIST	<ul> <li>Hessenna, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here' are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'at take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>Fill worship no worsan again; but i guess Filleara to nearly.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired. Johnny?" his mother	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort.	"An old termite tailor attered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with ford. I would hear or for an or for a set of the form.	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold F. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold the; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatre.
<ul> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUS</li></ul>	J. BLAKE, DINTIST MORTING DIST	<ul> <li>Hessenna, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here' are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'at take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>Fill worship no worsan again; but i guess Filleara to nearly.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he came into the	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing	"An old female tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant hoase." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said I. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the citcle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," said he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatre.
<ul> <li>ATTORNEY and MARKAN AND TAXABLE AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND</li></ul>	J. BLAKE, DINTIST MORTING DIST	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If work that death had severed us two here;</li> <li>Must here;</li> <li>And here here;</li> <li>And here as you used to kneet before you run howay.</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my werdson here on there;</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cange into the kitchen. Somehow, the words yeved	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots."	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," said he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I.
<ul> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>ATTURNEYS.</li> <li>MARCHART AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND</li></ul>	J. BLAKE, DINTIST MORTING DIST	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tiol? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Cood-by? I wish that death had severed us two hard.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here—you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>Wo we lost a worshiper here—you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>And incel as you used to kneel before you run hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my wordson heaven hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my wordson heaven hover.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said L. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely
<ul> <li>A DESING AND FRANCE FORMATION IN THE ADDRESS OF A DESING AND A DESIGNATION AND A DESIGNATION</li></ul>	GEO. DAUGHERTY, PROPRIETOR.	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise level.</li> <li>Oh field 'ff you want amon to sense the pains of here.</li> <li>Good-by! I wish that death had severed us two specifies.</li> <li>Good-by! I wish that death had severed us two here.</li> <li>You we lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>Wo we lost a worshiper here-you've sense is a hovin' heart.</li> <li>And ineed as you used to kneet before you run hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my wordson heaven hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I was had some little folloence there, I would pray that I might be if it only could here.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANX. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep-	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex-
<ul> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>ATTURNEYS.</li> <li>ATTURNEYS.<!--</th--><th>J. BLAKE, DINTIST MORTING DIST</th><th><ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise level.</li> <li>Oh field 'ff you want amon to sense the pains of here.</li> <li>Good-by! I wish that death had severed us two specifies.</li> <li>Good-by! I wish that death had severed us two here.</li> <li>You we lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>Wo we lost a worshiper here-you've sense is a hovin' heart.</li> <li>And ineed as you used to kneet before you run hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my wordson heaven hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I was had some little folloence there, I would pray that I might be if it only could here.</li> </ul></th><th>did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now.</th><th>plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that</th><th>tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANX. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brocklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the</th><th>"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that</th><th>at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children</th></li></ul>	J. BLAKE, DINTIST MORTING DIST	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise level.</li> <li>Oh field 'ff you want amon to sense the pains of here.</li> <li>Good-by! I wish that death had severed us two specifies.</li> <li>Good-by! I wish that death had severed us two here.</li> <li>You we lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>Wo we lost a worshiper here-you've sense is a hovin' heart.</li> <li>And ineed as you used to kneet before you run hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my wordson heaven hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I was had some little folloence there, I would pray that I might be if it only could here.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now.	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANX. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brocklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children
<ul> <li>Andread and Predering and Same.</li> <li>Andread and Predering and With Polycock (P. M. 1998).</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>ATTURNEYS.</li> <li>ATTURNEY</li></ul>	GEO. DAUGHERTY, PROPRIETOR. No. 37 Main 58.	<ul> <li>Hessens, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' her.</li> <li>And here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Not you lost a warshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>The worship no workan again; but I guess Fillearn to rang.</li> <li>And here i as you used to kneel before you run away.</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my wordson heaven to sense.</li> <li>And if I thought I want if it is future to here; I would pray that I might be if it only could here.</li> <li>As happy and as gay as I was a haif an hour ago.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANX. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you	"An old lemmic tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him carnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was saized with a desire to go to Cop- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subl. Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," said he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children were full of Andersen and his stories.
<ul> <li>Marine and Product and Same.</li> <li>Marine and Product from A. II. 1977, p. m. Sum</li> <li>Marine and A. M. ANDERSKI, P. M.</li> <li>Marine and A. M. ANDERSKI, P. M.</li> <li>MARINE CARDS.</li> <li>ATTIMINETS.</li> <li>ATTIMINETS.</li> <li>ATTIMINETS.</li> <li>ATTIMINETS.</li> <li>ANDERSKIP AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND</li></ul>	GEO. DAUGHERTY, PROPRIETOR.	<ul> <li>Hessens, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' her.</li> <li>And here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise here, 'dearest dear."</li> <li>Oh tool ' if you want amon to sense the pains of here.</li> <li>Oh tool ' if you want amon to sense the pains of here.</li> <li>Cood-by ' I wish that death had severed us two specific</li> <li>Good-by ' I wish that death had severed us two here.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a lovin' heart.</li> <li>Fit worship no worsan again; but i guess Fitteara to tay.</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my wordson heaven to be any.</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my wordson heaven to be any.</li> <li>And if I thought I was is a thirt be if it only could here.</li> <li>A bays (calcring).</li> <li>Why, John, what a hitre here! you've thrown things at a not if the word of the sould be you've thrown things at a more ' is a word of the word of here.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth,	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the effreshing breeze after a day s toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone?" said he, as, the boat neared	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless,	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said L. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance
<ul> <li>Marine and Product Form. W. A. POLOGA, P. M.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>BUSINESS CARDS.</li> <li>ATTURINEYS.</li> <li>MARINE AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND AND</li></ul>	I VEIV, FUCU, & EAUIIdilge OldDies Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DENTIST MOPERATION OFFICE: Over City Drug Store. Tool Foom. GEO. DAUGHERTY, PROPRIETOR. BANK RESTAURANT No. 37 Main St. EROWNVILLE, NEB.	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is her did'inticke that.</li> <li>Twastonly this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And solid if was makin' for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God? hy? I wish that death had severed us two space.</li> <li>You we lost a worshiper here—you've erushed a form;</li> <li>You we lost a worshiper here—you've erushed a form;</li> <li>And showl as you used to kneet before you run away.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my werdson heaven a specifier of the sense intro of a sense little toducnes there, it would be an a sense if a sense little toducnes there.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my werdson heaven a sense in a sense if a sense if the indivense there.</li> <li>Marif I thought I could briev my werdson heaven there.</li> <li>Marif I though I was is was a hear of the sen.</li> <li>Marif I though I might be. If it only could be so, as happy and as go as I was a hear of our ago.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He wenthome, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he came into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old !	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANX. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the bont neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady,	"An old female tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said f. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to <ul> <li>ATTURENETS.</li> <li>ANTIRENETS.</li> <li>ANTIRENE</li></ul>	I VEIV, FUCU, & EAUIIdilge OldDies Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DENTIST MOPERATION OFFICE: Over City Drug Store. Tool Foom. GEO. DAUGHERTY, PROPRIETOR. BANK RESTAURANT No. 37 Main St. EROWNVILLE, NEB.	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here.</li> <li>And here are her week-day shoes, and there is here week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is here did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twastanly this mornin' she came and called me her" dearest dear."</li> <li>And said I was makin for her a regular paradise here?</li> <li>Oh God! if you want aman to sense the pains of hell.</li> <li>Before you plich him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> <li>Good by? I wish that death had severed us two hour.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here—you've srushed a houras.</li> <li>You've hears.</li> <li>We worship no woraan again; but I guess Filtearn heaven?</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my werdson heaven houras.</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my werdson heaven heave.</li> <li>And if I thought I was a was a half an hour ago.</li> <li>JANE (calcring).</li> <li>Why, John, what a litter here! you've thrown things all at word?</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes. I'm fired." he answered dog-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on earth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANX. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying therefreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone !" said he, as the bont neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady, and without further Interruption.	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could say was, that people have an	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary dait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenty makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van;
<ul> <li>ATTURENETS.</li> <li>ANTIRENETS.</li> <li>ANTIRENE</li></ul>	GEO. DAUGHERTY, PROPRIETOR. No. 37 Main 58.	<ul> <li>Here, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' here, are her week-day shoes, and there is her did'inticke that.</li> <li>Twastonly this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And solid if was makin' for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God? If you want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God? hy? I wish that death had severed us two space.</li> <li>You we lost a worshiper here—you've erushed a form;</li> <li>You we lost a worshiper here—you've erushed a form;</li> <li>And showl as you used to kneet before you run away.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my werdson heaven a specifier of the sense intro of a sense little toducnes there, it would be an a sense if a sense little toducnes there.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my werdson heaven a sense in a sense if a sense if the indivense there.</li> <li>Marif I thought I could briev my werdson heaven there.</li> <li>Marif I though I was is was a hear of the sen.</li> <li>Marif I though I might be. If it only could be so, as happy and as go as I was a hear of our ago.</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He wenthome, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes, I'm tired," he answered, dog- redly.	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil-	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the effreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone?" said he, as the boat neared the slip. "No, sir," said the hely, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could sny was, that people have an inimense deal of adversity to go thro'	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatre. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenty makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van; ished i. That is of itself like a fairy
ATTURINETS.         ATTURINETS.         ANTI AN ANA ANA MOUNDAIRS and Connectors of the same in the chancers, Brownwitte, same interaction, New York, Same interaction, Same interactinteractintereaction, Same interactintereactintereactint	John L. Carson, Banker,	<ul> <li>Hessens, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' her.</li> <li>And here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise her?</li> <li>Oh tool? If you want amon to sense the pains of her?.</li> <li>Before you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two heart.</li> <li>You you lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>Wo you lost a worshiper here-you've studed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>Mu breed as you used to kneet before you run away.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my wordson heaven to be any.</li> <li>And if I thought I was inset in the before you run away.</li> <li>Mul if I thought I was inset in the before you run hover.</li> <li>Mul if I thought I was been still be before you run hover.</li> <li>Mul if I thought I was been still be before you run hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I was the before you've thrown there a here.</li> <li>Why, John, what I might be if it only could here.</li> <li>Mul and a gay as I was a half an hour ago.</li> <li>Tayst (calcrose).</li> <li>Why, John, what the matter new? and what 've you here or found?</li> <li>And here any futher here, new iting for supper, here.</li> <li>Pyre been neriding with him-her's that "handsomer mathin you."</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He wenthome, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes, I'm fired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on earth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav-	tiply in my course. Besides I feet that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the boat neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped off. "I thought you were not alone,"	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an immense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenty makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van- ished i. That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain
ATTURINETS.         ATTURINETS.         ANTI AN ANA ANA MOUNDAIRS and Connectors of the same in the chancers, Brownwitte, same interaction, New York, Same interaction, Same interactinteractintereaction, Same interactintereactintereactint	I VEIJ, FUCU, & EAUIIdilge OldDies Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DINIST Michael In the kest manner. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dist room.	<ul> <li>Hessens, when I look at that, as if 'twos holdin' her.</li> <li>And here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called me her "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise left;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If you want amon to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh fiel? If wish that death had severed us two here;</li> <li>You you lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>The worship no worsan again; but I guess Filleara to tay.</li> <li>And here as you used to kneet before you run hover.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my wordson heaven to be and.</li> <li>As happy and as gay as I was a haif an hour ago.</li> <li>JANE (calcrowy).</li> <li>Why, John, what if ther here! you've thrown things at at you?</li> <li>Data or found?</li> <li>And here any father here, newaiting for supper, here.</li> <li>Pre been a-riding with him-int's that "handsomer manthing you."</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes, I'm fired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot can o' tee all	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- en, he was at peace also with his own	tiply in my course. Besides I feet that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentheman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the boat neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped off. "I throught you were notalone," said the fellow, stepping to her side	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an immense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant hoase." "We must first go in here, dear friend." sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold L "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatre. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," sold he ex- altingly. "Only think, the children, were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van; ished! That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividly in their remembrance."
<text></text>	I VEIJ, FUEU, & EAUIIdilge Oldbies Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DENTIST Millowerations For- formed in the kest manner. OFFICE: Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Town room. GEO. DAUGHERTY, PROPRIETOR. MARY Main St. EROWNVILLE, NEB. John L. Carson, Banker, BROWNVILLE, NEBRASEA.	<ul> <li>Hessenna, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' her? Introducts are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'introke that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called meher "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise large.</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' hy? I wish that death had severed us two apact.</li> <li>You you heart.</li> <li>Bebree you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two hown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>And here a syme used to kneet before you run hown's.</li> <li>And if I thought I could brieg my wordson heaven a speet of the you?</li> <li>And if I thought I might be. If it only could be so, As happy and as gay as I was a haif an hour ago.</li> <li>JANE (calcring).</li> <li>Why. John, what a litter here! you've thrown things all at wod?</li> <li>Come, what's the matter now ? and what 've you lost or found?</li> <li>And here's any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here and its wod."</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He wenthome, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he came into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes, I'm fired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- en, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his	tiply in my course. Besides I feet that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the effreshing breeze after a day's toll, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the boat neared the slip. "No, sir," said the hely, and without further interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped off. "I thought you were not alone," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I arm not," replied the lady.	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never before had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was extremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of conscience that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed film earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cepenhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an inimense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she conscited; for she	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," subd Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," said T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," said I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only think, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenty makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van- ished i. That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain
ATTURINETS.         ATTURINETS.         ANTI AN ANA ANA MOUNDAIRS and Connectors of the same in the chancers, Brownwitte, same interaction, New York, Same interaction, Same interactinteractintereaction, Same interactintereactintereactint	I VEIJ, FUCU, & EAUIIdilge OldDies Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DINIST Michael In the kest manner. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dist room.	<ul> <li>Hessenna, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' her? Introducts are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'introke that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called meher "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise large.</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' hy? I wish that death had severed us two apact.</li> <li>You you heart.</li> <li>Bebree you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two hown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>And here a syme used to kneet before you run hown's.</li> <li>And if I thought I could brieg my wordson heaven a speet of the you?</li> <li>And if I thought I might be. If it only could be so, As happy and as gay as I was a haif an hour ago.</li> <li>JANE (calcring).</li> <li>Why. John, what a litter here! you've thrown things all at wod?</li> <li>Come, what's the matter now ? and what 've you lost or found?</li> <li>And here's any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here and its wod."</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he came into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes, I'm tired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little."	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- en, he was at peace also with his own	tiply in my course. Besides I feet that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the boat neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped off. "I throught you were notalone," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I am not," replied the lady. "Wily, I don't see any one-who is	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an immense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she consented; for she was poor, and poor people's boys of-	at Hamhurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant hoase." "We must first go in here, dear friend." sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold L "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatre. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," sold he ex- altingly. "Only think, the children, were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van; ished! That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividly in their remembrance."
<text></text>	I VEIJ, FUCU, & EAUIIdilge OldDies Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DINIST Michael In the kest manner. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dist room.	<ul> <li>Hessenna, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' her? Introducts are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'introke that.</li> <li>"Twas only this mornin' she came and called meher "dearest dear."</li> <li>And said i was makin for her a regular paradise large.</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want a man to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' hy? I wish that death had severed us two apact.</li> <li>You you heart.</li> <li>Bebree you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell?</li> <li>Good-by? I wish that death had severed us two hown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>Wown's heart.</li> <li>And here a syme used to kneet before you run hown's.</li> <li>And if I thought I could brieg my wordson heaven a speet of the you?</li> <li>And if I thought I might be. If it only could be so, As happy and as gay as I was a haif an hour ago.</li> <li>JANE (calcring).</li> <li>Why. John, what a litter here! you've thrown things all at wod?</li> <li>Come, what's the matter now ? and what 've you lost or found?</li> <li>And here's any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here any father here, newaiting for supper, 100.</li> <li>Pye here and its wod."</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he came into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes, I'm tired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on earth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- en, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness into his life.	tiply in my course. Besides I feet that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Broaklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the effreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the bont neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady, and without further interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped off. "I thought you were notalone," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I am not," replied the lady. "Why, I don't see any one—who is with:you?" "God Almighty and the	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never before had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was extremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of conscience that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cepenhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an inimense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she consented; for she was poor, and poor people's boys of ten hyae to begin to care for them-	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only thick, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van; ished! That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that with remain vividly in their remembrance." "I myself was amused by it."
<text></text>	I VEIJ, FUCU, & EAUIIdilge OldDies Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DINIST Michael In the kest manner. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dist room.	<ul> <li>Hereima, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' here are her week-day shees, and there is her week-day shees, and there is her week-day hat, 'And yonler's her week-day shees, and there is her did'nt take that,'</li> <li>Twas only this mornin' she came and called meher 'dearest dear.' And said I was makin' for her a regular paradise here; 'Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-ot here;'</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've erushed a hovin' hear;'.'</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've erushed a hovin' hear;'.'</li> <li>And hereif as you used to kneel before you run hovay.'.'</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my werdson heaven to seen;'.'</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my werdson heaven a set want if I thought I had some little influence there, I would pray that I might be. If it only could be so, As happy and as gay as I was a half an hour ago.''</li> <li>IANE (catering).''</li> <li>Why, John, what a litter here! you've thrown thins at or found?''</li> <li>And here's my father here, newaiting for supper, here.''</li> <li>Too: a riding with him -inc's that "handsomer man than you.'''</li> <li>The' ha!' Pa, take a sent, while I nut the kettle one had not things ready for tes, and hers my dear oid John.'''</li> <li>Why, John, you look so strange!'' Come, what has '''</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He wenthome, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he care into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes, I'm fired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat impatiently. Tea ! What notions	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on earth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- én, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness finto his life. He could not think of Angeline	tiply in my course. Besides I feet that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the effreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the bont neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped off. "I thought you were notalone," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I am not," replied the lady. "Why, I don't see any one-who is with:you?" "God Almighty and the angels, sir-I are never alone !"	"An old termine tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was seized with a desire to go to Cep- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an inimense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she consented; for she was poor, and poor people's boys of- ten hyae to begin to care for them- selves when no older. But first, she	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," sold he ex- ultingly. "Only thick, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van; ished! That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividly in their remembrance." "I myself was amused by it."
<text></text>	I VEIJ, FUCU, & EAUIIdiige Oldules Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DENTIST DENTIST Millowerations For- formed in the kest manner. OFFICE: OVER CityDrug Store. Town Council BANK RESTAURANT No. 37 Main St. EROWNVILLE, NEB. John L. Carson, Banker, MROWNVILLE, NEB. Store Store. Dentists and sold on all the principa cities. Also dealer in. Gold and Silver fech. Gold Dast, and Govern ment Honds.	<ul> <li>Hesema, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' here here are her week-day shees, and there is her week-day shees, and there is her week-day here.</li> <li>And yonler's her week-day shees, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>Twas only this mornin' she came and called meher 's dearest dear.'</li> <li>And widt I was makin' for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've erushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've erushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here you've erushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>You've lost a systemation is an indicate pains.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>Maxay.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>Maxay.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>JANE (caternes).</li> <li>Why, John, what a litter here! you've thrown things and and and?</li> <li>Come, what's the matter now? and what 've you had of found?</li> <li>And here's ary father here, newaiting for supper, here.</li> <li>You been ariding with him-inc's that "handsomer man than you."</li> <li>The here.</li> <li>Why, John, you look so strange! Come, what has crossed your track ?</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He wenthome, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old! "Yes, Pm tired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat impatiently. Tea I What notions women had! He looked at his moth-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inelina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved nim their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- én, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness into his life. He could not think of Angeline Wilmarth without pain. There	tiply in my course. Besides I feet that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the boat neared the slip. "No, sir," said the hely, and without further interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped off. "I throught you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I am not," replied the lady. "Wisy, I don't see any one-who is with you?" "God Almighty and the angels, sir-I are never alone." "You keep too good company for me,	"An old lemaic tailor altered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never be- fore had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was ex- tremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my tronsers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of con- science that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed film earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was saized with a desire to go to Cop- enhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could say was, that people have an inimense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she consented; for she was poor, and poor people's boys of- ten hyae to begin to care for them- selves when no older. But first, she seut, in her superstition, for a so-called	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold T. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only thick, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van; ished! That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that with remain vividly in their remembrance." "I myself was amused by it."
<text></text>	I VEIJ, FUCU, & EAUIIdiige Oldules Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DENTIST DENTIST Millowerations For- formed in the kest manner. OFFICE: OVER CityDrug Store. Town Council BANK RESTAURANT No. 37 Main St. EROWNVILLE, NEB. John L. Carson, Banker, MROWNVILLE, NEB. Store Store. Dentists and sold on all the principa cities. Also dealer in. Gold and Silver fech. Gold Dast, and Govern ment Honds.	<ul> <li>Hesema, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' here here are her week-day shees, and there is her week-day shees, and there is her week-day here.</li> <li>And yonler's her week-day shees, and there is her did'nt take that.</li> <li>Twas only this mornin' she came and called meher 's dearest dear.'</li> <li>And widt I was makin' for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'f ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>Oh God 'ff yon want arman to sense the pains-of here;</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've erushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here-you've erushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>You've lost a worshiper here you've erushed a hovin' heart.</li> <li>You've lost a systemation is an indicate pains.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>Maxay.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>Maxay.</li> <li>And heart.</li> <li>JANE (caternes).</li> <li>Why, John, what a litter here! you've thrown things and and and?</li> <li>Come, what's the matter now? and what 've you had of found?</li> <li>And here's ary father here, newaiting for supper, here.</li> <li>You been ariding with him-inc's that "handsomer man than you."</li> <li>The here.</li> <li>Why, John, you look so strange! Come, what has crossed your track ?</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully aud slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He wenthome, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old! "Yes, Pm tired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat impatiently. Tea I What notions women had! He looked at his moth- cr as he had never looked at her he-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacifies better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-daty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- én, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness into his life. He could not think of Angeline Wilmarth without pain. There would always be la his heart for her	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resort to Hie insurance." TOO COOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Broaklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing brease after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the boat neared the slip. "No, sir," said the hely, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she stepped off. "I fingent you were notalone," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fam not," replied the lady. "Why, I don't see any one-who is with you?" "God Almighty and the angels, sir-I and never alone!" "You keep too good company for me, madam-good night," and he shot	"An old female tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never before had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was extremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of conscience that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was solved with a desire to go to Coperhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could say was, that people have an inimense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she conscited; for she was poor, and poor people's boys often hyae to begin to care for themselves when no older. But itrst, she sent, in hersuperstition, for a so-called wise woman, who professed to be able	at Haminup, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the clever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold I. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "It told one and then bastened away to the theatre. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "And excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," sold he ex- ultingly. "Only thuk, the children, were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van- tehed I. That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividily in their remembrance." "I myself was annused by it." The Nebraska Anventration rakes its appearance this week under the charge of the new firm of Hacker & Caifrey. It will be continued as an
<text></text>	I VEI, IGEU, & CACHAIRE OIDDIES Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DINIST Constant of the first of	<ul> <li>Historia, when I look at that, as if 'twas holdin' here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day has,</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day has,</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'attake that.</li> <li>Twas only this morthly she came and called metars dear?</li> <li>And and I was makin for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>On God' ff yon want arman to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>On God' by 'I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>You ve lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a lovin' hear.</li> <li>Historia, and as you used to kneel before you run away.</li> <li>And if I thought I could briev my wordson hereon apart.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I could briev my wordson hereon through any that I might be if it outy could here.</li> <li>Mathin Y and a graves is little influence there, hered a love of the grave is graven.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I could briev my wordson hereon hereon.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I could briev my wordson hereon in away.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I could briev my wordson hereon.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I could briev my wordson hereon.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I could briev my wordson hereon.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I could briev my wordson hereon.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I could briev my wordson hereon.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I had sense little fullence there, hereon and a grave is a hair an neur ago.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I had sense little fullerer of your mathing and is grave as I was a hair an inear ago.</li> <li>Mathin I thought I had sense little fullerer ago.</li> <li>Mathings a fuller more?</li> <li>Mathings a fuller more?</li> <li>Mathings a could be avein?</li> <li>Mathing a could be avein?</li> <li>Mathings a fuller here, newaiting for support, here.</li> <li>Mathings ready for tea, and kiss my dear old John.</li> <li>Mathings ready for tea, and kiss my dear old John.<td>did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully and slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old! "Yes, Pin tired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat impatiently. Tea ! What notions women had! He looked at his moth- cr as he had never looked at her be- fore.</td><td>plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- en, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness into his life. He could not think of Angeline Wilnarth without pain. There would always be la his heart for her the tenderness a good man feels to-</td><td>tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, fu His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resert to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone?" said he, as the bont neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady, and without further interruption, when the boat touched, she supped off. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side again, stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side</td><td>"An old temale tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never before had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was extremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my tronsers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of conscience that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was saized with a desire to go to Cepenhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an immense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she consented; for she was poor, and poor people's boys often hvae to begin to care for themselves when no older. But first, she sont, in her superstition, for a so-called wise woman, who professed to be able to tell fortunes.</td><td>at Haminup, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the clever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold I. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "It told one and then bastened away to the theatre. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "And excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," sold he ex- ultingly. "Only thuk, the children, were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van- tehed I. That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividily in their remembrance." "I myself was annused by it." The Nebraska Anventration rakes its appearance this week under the charge of the new firm of Hacker &amp; Caifrey. It will be continued as an</td></li></ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully and slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old! "Yes, Pin tired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat impatiently. Tea ! What notions women had! He looked at his moth- cr as he had never looked at her be- fore.	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- en, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness into his life. He could not think of Angeline Wilnarth without pain. There would always be la his heart for her the tenderness a good man feels to-	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, fu His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will resert to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dailies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brooklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone?" said he, as the bont neared the slip. "No, sir," said the lady, and without further interruption, when the boat touched, she supped off. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I fineight you were notatione," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side again, stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side again. Stepping to her side	"An old temale tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never before had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was extremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my tronsers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of conscience that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was saized with a desire to go to Cepenhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an immense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she consented; for she was poor, and poor people's boys often hvae to begin to care for themselves when no older. But first, she sont, in her superstition, for a so-called wise woman, who professed to be able to tell fortunes.	at Haminup, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the clever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family fives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold I. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "It told one and then bastened away to the theatre. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "And excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," sold he ex- ultingly. "Only thuk, the children, were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van- tehed I. That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividily in their remembrance." "I myself was annused by it." The Nebraska Anventration rakes its appearance this week under the charge of the new firm of Hacker & Caifrey. It will be continued as an
<text></text>	I VEIJ, FUCU, & EAUIIdiige Oldules Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DENTIST DENTIST Millowerations For- formed in the kest manner. OFFICE: OVER CityDrug Store. Town Council BANK RESTAURANT No. 37 Main St. EROWNVILLE, NEB. John L. Carson, Banker, MROWNVILLE, NEB. Store Store. Dentists and sold on all the principa cities. Also dealer in. Gold and Silver fech. Gold Dast, and Govern ment Honds.	<ul> <li>Hissima, when I hook at that, as if 'twas holdin' here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day has,</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'attake that.</li> <li>Twas only this morphy she came and called me here 'dearest dear.''</li> <li>And said I was makin' for her a regular paradise here,'</li> <li>On God' ff yon want aman to sense the pains of here.'</li> <li>Before you pitch him in just keep him in heaven a spell.</li> <li>Good-by! I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>You ye lost a worshiper here-you'ye crushed a torin' heart.</li> <li>Fit worship no wonaan again ; but I guess Fit learn to targ.'.</li> <li>And there as you used to kneel before you run away.</li> <li>And if I thought I could bries my wordson heaven to be enr.</li> <li>And iff I thought I could bries my wordson heaven to seen.'.</li> <li>Jaxa (caleron).</li> <li>Way, John, what a fitter here! you've thrown things at at used?</li> <li>Mathematical is used?</li> <li>Mathematical in the hore, newaiting for support, too?</li> <li>New shale the matter new? and what 've you heave function for the aver?</li> <li>Mathematical in the hore, newaiting for support, too?</li> <li>New half a look set and him -inc's that "handsomer manthing you.''</li> </ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully and slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old! "Yes, I'm fired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat impatiently. Tea! What notions women had! He looked at his moth- er as he had never looked at her be- fore. "Mother, "said he, with a hitter-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some beal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- en, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness fato his life. He could not think of Angeline Wilmarth without pain. There would always be la his heart for her the tenderness a good man feels to- ward a woman once beloved; but	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will reserve to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brocklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the bont neared the silp. "No, sir," said the hely, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she supped off. "I thought you were notalone," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I am not," replied the lady. "Why, I don't see any one-who is with you?" "God Almighty and the angels, sir-1 are never alone?" "You keep too good company for me, madam-good night," and he shot for a Fulton avenue car, then nearly a block away. The heroic woman	"An old temale tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never before had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was extremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of conscience that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was solved with a desire to go to Cepenhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an immense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she consented; for she was poor, and poor people's boys often hyae to begin to care for themselves when no older. But first, she sout, in her superstition, for a so-called wise woman, who professed to be able to tell fortunes.	at Hamhure, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the elever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend," sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold I. "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold I. "An excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," sold he ex- ultingly. "Only thuk, the children, were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one story to them himself, and then, is gone I van- tehed i. That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividly in their remembrance." "I myself was amused by it." The Nebraska Apprentices makes its appearance this weak under the charge of the new firm of Hacker &
<text></text>	I VEIL, IEEU, & CACHAIRE OIDHES Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLARKE, DINIST Monorations For- instance. OFFICE: Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dever CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dever CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dever CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dever CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dever CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dever CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dever CityDrug Store. Over CityDrug Store. Dever CityDrug Store.	<ul> <li>Hissenna, when I hook at that, as if 'twas holdin' here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day has,</li> <li>And yonder's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'attake that.</li> <li>Twas only this morphy she came and called me here 'dearest dear.'</li> <li>And said I was makin' for her a regular paradise lared.</li> <li>On God' ff yon want a man to sense the pains of here.'</li> <li>Good-by! I wish that death had severed us two apart.</li> <li>You ve lost a worshiper here-you've crushed a lovin' heart.</li> <li>Fit worship no wonaan again ; but I guess Fit learn to tray.'</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my wordson heaven hover.'</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my wordson heaven hover.'</li> <li>And theel as you used to kneel before you run away.</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my wordson heaven to form.'</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my wordson heaven hover.'</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my wordson heaven to form.'</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my wordson heaven hover.'</li> <li>And if I thought I could brier my wordson heaven to fount.'</li> <li>Max (might a morphy).</li> <li>Why John, what a litter here! you've thrown things at a word?'</li> <li>And here's my father here, newsiting for support, too.'</li> <li>Pre been a riding with him-inc's that "handsome" mandian you.''</li> <li>If a ha! Pa, take a sent, while I nut the kettle on a lost of found?''</li> <li>We have it taken to strange! Come, what has a tot.''</li> <li>We and here's only father here, new iting to take it have.''</li> <li>We and here's my father here.'' that "handsome" mandian you.''''''''''''''''''''''''''''''''''''</li></ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew moturnfully and slowly across the fields' John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy foolsteps. "Tired, Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old ! "Yes, I'm fired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat impatiently. Tea! What notions women had! He looked at his moth- er as he had never looked at her be- fore. "Mother, "said he, with a bitter- ness he hated himselt afterwards." I	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on carth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- én, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness into his life. He could not think of Angeline Wilmarth without pain. There would always be la his heart for her the tenderness a good man feels to- ward a woman once beloved; but whether she was his or another's, he	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will reserve to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dalies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brocklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone?" said he, as the bont neared the silp. "No, sir," said the hely, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she supped off. "I thought you were notalone," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I am not," replied the lady. "Wity, I don't see any one-who is with you?" "God Almighty and the angels, sir-I are never alone?" "You keep too good company for me, madam-good night," and he shot for a Fulton avenue car, then nearly a block away. The heroic woman was permitted, "to keep to the right,	"An old termite tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never before had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was extremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my tronsers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of conscience that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed Him earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was saized with a desire to go to Cepenhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an inimense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she conscited; for she was poor, and poor people's boys often hvae to begin to care for themselves when no older. But first, she sout, in her superstition, for a so-called wise woman, who professed to be able to tell fortunes.	at Haminup, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the clever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend." sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your storles; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold L "Only for two minutes," returned he, and drew me into the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "I told one and then bastened away to the theatre. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold L "And excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," sold he ex- ultingly. "Only thick, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to been himself, and then, is gone I vang lehed I. That he of fisch like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividly in their remembrance." "I myself was annused by it." The Nebraska Anventuments in the charge of the new firm of Hacker & Caffrey. It will be continued as an exponent and advocate of Republi-
<text></text>	I VEI, IGEU, & CACHAIRE OIDDIES Brownville, Nebraska. J. BLAKE, DINIST Constant of the first of	<ul> <li>Hissenna, when I hook at that, as if 'twas holdin' here are her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day shoes, and there is her week-day hat.</li> <li>And yohler's her week-day shoes, and there is her did'attake that.</li> <li>Twas only this morphy she came and called metars "dearest dear."</li> <li>And axia I was makin' for her a regular paradise here;</li> <li>Oh God' if yon want aman to sense the pains of here;</li> <li>Oh God' by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Good-by 'I wish that death had severed us two spell;</li> <li>Ma is a good used to kneel before you run away.</li> <li>And if I thought I coald brieg my werdson herven to tray, and is good as good as good as the set to all easy of the matter new? and what 'we you base of found?"</li> <li>Maker is a day and?</li> <li>Maker is a day and?</li> <li>Maker is any father hore, newaiting for suppor, too:</li> <li>N'w bein ac'd ing with him-inc's that "handsomer matching you."</li> <li>Way, John, you look so strange! Come, what has errorsid your track?</li> <li>Maker things roady for tea, and kess my dear old distance.</li> <li>Why, John, you look so strange! Come, what has errorsid your track?</li> <li>Maker thing if this shaff a joke, with rather a bitter is haven as if 'I dook to strange! Come, what has a strain the shaff a joke, with rather a bitter is h</li></ul>	did that settle the mutter? Some one could be hired to do as well for them, and he—he believed he had enough in him to go away and make a career which Angeline Wilmarth would not scorn to share. The crimson had died out of the West, the rose hue out of the East. A low wind had risen and blew mournfully and slowly across the fields: John Osgood's mood exchang- ed with the face of the night. The exaitation forsook him, and some- thing hard, stern, sullen, alien as it seemed to his generous, hearty na- ture, entered in and took possession of him. He went home, slowly, with heavy footsteps. "Tired," Johnny?" his mother said, cheerily, as he cance into the kitchen. Somehow, the words vexed him. She had said them often enough before, but they had never struck him just in this way till now, Johnny! If she would only remem- ber that he was twenty-two years old! "Yes, I'm fired," he answered, dog- gedly. "Well, draw right up to the table. I've got a nice hot cup o' tea all ready for ye. That'll rest ye, and brighten ye up a little." John Osgood threw down his hat impatiently. Tea! What notions women had! He looked at his moth- er as he had never looked at her be- fore. "Mother, "said he, with a hitter-	plowing and planting was all he was good for. Fate had placed him right- ly-gauged his capacities better than he could have done himself. So he settled back into the old grooves with a grim resignation which was not yet content. Still he felt himself at odds with the life which did not offer what he wanted. When Autumn came and it was time for him, if at all, to make the change he had planned in Spring, he was surprised to find that the inclina- tion to make it was gone. Some heal- ing ministry, call it of nature or of grace, God knows, had been at work in his soul; and, unconsciously to himself, through the long Summer days and swift, short Summer nights he had been learning the sweetness of duty pure and simple-duty done for its own sake. He had begun to ask himself, not what he wished, but what he ought to do; and he felt that in the very fact of his being to those two who loved him their all on earth, God had called him to certain duties on which he would never again feel tempted to turn his back. Reconcil- ed at last to the appointment of heav- én, he was at peace also with his own soul; and a new light came into his eyes, a new vigor and manliness into his life. He could not think of Angeline Wilmarth without pain. There would always be la his heart for her the tenderness a good man feels to- ward a woman once beloved; but whether she was his or another's, he could reck on her loss or gain among	tiply in my course. Besides I feel that I have a great work to perform for the Democratic party and the country, and I believe that God, in His Providence, will preserve me to accomplish it. When I begin to dis- trust Providence, it is possible that I will reserve to life insurance." TOO GOOD COMPANY. One evening a lady who belongs to the editorial staff of one of the lead- ing dallies in New York, had been detained by office duties until a late hour. Living on the Heights in Brocklyn, but a short distance from Fulton ferry, it was not much of a venture to go home without escort, so she started. On the boat, standing outside, enjoying the refreshing breeze after a day's toil, she perceived a gentleman in rather close proximity to where she was leaning over the guards, but said nothing. "Are you alone!" said he, as the bont neared the silp. "No, sir," said the hely, and without further Interruption, when the boat touched, she supped off. "I thought you were notalone," said the fellow, stepping to her side again. "I am not," replied the lady. "Why, I don't see any one-who is with you?" "God Almighty and the angels, sir-1 are never alone?" "You keep too good company for me, madam-good night," and he shot for a Fulton avenue car, then nearly a block away. The heroic woman	"An old termite tailor aftered my deceased father's great coat into a confirmation suit for me; never before had I worn so good a coat." I had, also for the first time in my life, a pair of boots. My delight was extremely great; my only fear was that everybody would not see them, and, therefore, I drew them up over my trousers, and thus marched through the church. The boots creaked, and that inwardly pleased me; for thus the congregation would hear that they were new. My whole devotion was disturbed; I was aware of it, and it caused me a horrible pang of conscience that my thoughts should be as much with my new boots as with God. I prayed film earnestly from my heart to forgive me, and then again I thought about my new boots." When he was fourteen years old, he was saized with a desire to go to Cepenhagen, having a vague feeling that there he should see the wide world and become famous. It was a restless, ignorant sort of expectation; all he could shy was, that people have an inmense deal of adversity to go thro' and then they will be famous. He begged his mother eagerly to let him go, and at last she consciented; for she was poor, and poor people's boys often have to begin to care for themselves when no older. But first, she sout, in her superstition, for a so-called wise woman, who professed to be able to tell fortunes.	at Haminurg, we believe, and, in com- pany with Otto Speakter, the clever artist who has illustrated his storles, was setting out for the operahouse. "On our way," he says, "we came to an elegant house." "We must first go in here, dear friend." sold Speck- ter; "a wealthy family lives here, friends of mine, and friends of your stories; the children will be happy." "But the opera," sold L "Only for two minutes," retarned he, and drew me but the house, men- tioned my name, and the circle of children collected around me. "And now tell us a tale," sold he; "only one." "It told one and then bastened away to the theatro. "That was an extraordinary stait," sold L "And excellent one; one entirely out of the common way," said he ex- ultingly. "Only thus, the children were full of Andersen and his stories. He suddenly makes his appearance amongst them; tells one slory to them himself, and then, is gone I van; ished I. That is of itself like a fairy tale to the children, that will remain vividily in their remembrance." "I myself was annused by it." The Nebraska ADVENTIONE makes its appearance this week under the charge of the new firm of Hacker & Casifrey. It will be continued as an exponent and advocate of Republi- can principles, and by the way it

ever beforr. Caf-

pany. It was not a safe thing to say to a frey's clitcrials have the ring of true mother, yet, sard enough, years after-This don't hear?
We find lying before us the Nebrasian di traite server and to ally printed sheet, belind the data unit a set politiked and nearly printed sheet, published sheet, belind the and nurse, and nearly printed sheet published sheet, bet shearts. Yes, I've had troubles the thory of the thirty of the the thirty of the the server with mother is but just mothers with mother.
We find lying before us the Nebrasian di traition server sould server the the Nebrasian di traition server the server troub server to s

LATD ACENTS. IN CONNECTION WITH THE HOUSE. I more she don't good Lord: I hope that they This don't go any deeper than that leave with Heaven. This House has been remodeled and refurnit WELL, Real Datate and Tax Paying cell Block, corner Eirst broughout, and allorus introvening public. It is con-brough to the found and traveling public. It is con-rulty located, Stages for the West, and Oronflueses for all trains, go from the Sherman House. Fol-fer all trains, go from the Sherman House. Folthe model of the star of the second started V. HUGHES, Revi Fidate Agent and ". Office in scinnaford & McFall's W. B. WELGHT, FLEAM II. HORAVER, flori Potnic and Tax Wholesale and Retail A south Collins in District Court Root have eligentism to the sube of Real 4 Dealer in QLD KENTUCKY ment of Taxes throughout the Nematia HIGHNA IND HOHOI GRAIN DEALERS. AND LIQUUND MBIJUIJ WARTERING, Perwarding and Coronis-lication, and Dealer to all Rinds of Grain by Produce, Office and Wirefoom, No. Brod, Brownville, Neb. Pure Wines, Elitters, &c., 63 MAIN STREET, MERCHASDISE. BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA. <sup>10</sup>HEILSON, Deuler in General Merch-Salei vacue in Mellierson Block, No. 65
 <sup>10</sup>Brownville, Neo. 1845
 <sup>10</sup>NeoN & CO., Dualers in General Merch-ass, 72 Main super. Brownville, Neb. Alexander & Lange, REAL ESTATE AGENTS, A E T. DEN, Dealer in General Merchan MERIDIAN.

d Forwarding and Commission Merchest market price paid for Hides, Pelts, intry Produce.

"RI/HIT, Notary Public and Conveyances inth street, sceam floor, Brownville for the Equitable and American Ton

JUSTICES.

NOTARIES.

1010 AN, Vr. bate Judge and Justice of the 75. Office at Court House Building, Brown-

COUNTY SURVEYOR.

US GILBERT County Surveyor, Postoffic

SADDLERY.

M. ER, Harness, Bridles, Collars, Elc., No. <sup>10</sup> alreet, Brownyllie, Neb. Mending done Scitzaction Guaranteed.

BRIDGE BUILDING.

Witcheld, Erides Builder and Contractor, sensitive Sole rook agent for R. W. Smith's Transfield in transfer and beet modes

No. 56 Main St.

Waldter & Lemmon.

House, Sign and Carriage

vice.

CARPENTER'S TOOLS

FULL ASSORTMENT. AT WM. D. SHELLENBERGER'S.

city of Brownville. The first-named member of the firm is our Major Caf-frey, and were it not for the fact that world's good things. You haven't we spoke of him a short time since, any graves, where you feel as if your and that he is proverbially modest, heart was shut in and smothered, and we would say that he is a tip-top jour- for bein' tired and mopin' I do think

GILDING preacher, who was bent on the propa-gation of his peculiar calling, "Si-lence gives consent, so i'll preach in with a crash. For a fall minute it nothing he could do-be could not with a crash. For a fall minute it nothing he could do-be could not nothing he could not speak but the fall winds scattered, as they was there."

pass the money box around after ser- could. I never liked to have any ing to her any more? strangers working on the old place in Still he went on, in a purposeless, whickey, "

He had heard in the Summer that we would say that he is a up-toppion-nalist-just such a one as a growing, enterprising town needs, and will find it to its interest is keep. Maj. Caffrey's salutatory appears in the number (Jaly 6) before us, and is in we wast congratulate him on hav-ing so excellent a prospect before him. Then hasta his superry in gilance nalist-just such a one as a growing, enterprising town needs, and will find it to its interest to keep. Maj. Caffrey's salistatory opport in the drew up his chair to the

 We must congratulate time on this, ing so excellent a prospect before him, for a lucrative and honorable career. Chicago Sun. I'm not just myself to night." Then he at his support in silence, that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly to f Angle's sorrow. Poor girl I hour matter is mean ger gravely bade him to preach in the afternoon to rise.
 ed at him and said, "No, you are too that no mean selfishness stalened his soul in that hour. He was honestly to f Angle's sorrow. Poor girl I hour was unuspally charging a place. Don't wurthe that and went out, with some vague hist and went out, with some vague ha was ner reluctantly leaving him to misserable fate.

 Mized Paints
 We must congratulate tim on that a thin go away—that call who wished him to preach in the afternoon to rise.
 I'm and said, "No, you are too that no mean selfishness callend of Angle's sorrow. Poor girl I hour to still or confort her. He took his hour wurthe at a party with a rose hu his so follows: "Miss. John Buchaman with you to oversee him, he could do I'm and said, "No, you are too that hour that," Honese was alway.

swered. "I don't know, John-may be he could. I never liked to have any more? distingtion of the after drivking the odd fancies and quaint make-be-

In the confidence, that he astorished is the formation of the formation of

Mixed Paints FOR SALE GILDING MALTING, ETC. MAL

iefs which had kept him boy withi Subscribe for the And