Let us in starting, take a retrospec tive view of the popular vote. In the election of 1860, the popular vote was divided as follows: Lincoln, 1,866,-542; Douglas, 1,375,157; Breckinridge, 847,953; Bell, 590,631. But in the electoral vote Mr. Lincolu had 180, Mr. Douglas 12, Mr. Breekinridge 72, and Mr. Bell 39. In 1868, the whole vote was 5,716,788, and Grant's

In 1868, the maiority for Seymour over Grant, in Kentucky, was 76,323-nearly four to the free-love tendency of his late edione over the Democratic majority today. In 1869, the majority for Tate, the Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, was 57,848. In 1870, the aggregate Democratic majority on Congressmen was further reduced to 31,684. This year there is a still further reduction to from 15,000 to 20,000. One more effort, there is good reason to hope, will lift the gallant old State out of the slough of Democratic despond, and assure her a brilliant future on the right side. Our amiable and gallant young friend of the Democral, is meanly striving to shift the responsibility of torials concerning the Reed-Keeling controversy to the shoulders of young Davis and Dr. Page, late of Brownville, but now of Falls City. The Reed woman has left this propinquity and so the Demooral goes back on her in quite an ungentlemanly manner. Our young friend ought to have been quite sure that she would not return to Brownville for it would be too humiliating to his southern chivalry it she should compel him to rewrite and review his article of last week and acknowledge squarely his part in the matter. If she ever does come back there will be a "fellow feeling" be tween our neighbor and the clerk of
