ern Christain writers have rejected But as the origin of races has in our tay assumed an important scientific levelopment, as very many able seintists held to a variety of original stock, it is interesting to know that lose views have been held before, and upon supposed biblical grounds. But are there no more questions about Cain? Does no one wish to know his wife's name? Does no one wish to know what the Lord affixed to Cain? Does no one wish to know how Cain died? Questions must be scarce to leave such points untouched. If Cain is to be raised, he surely ought to be
