WANTED-" A MILLION MORE."

Oh! yes, we are wanting a million more,

That Nebraska will take a million or so.

And tell the people wherever you go.

Then ring out the news from shore to shore,

But a million or so of fine good looking girls.

Why, we are two to one just now as we stand,

And that's what's the matter all over the land;

Whilst men from taking of cold are sneezing,

And bach's by night in their beds are freezing,

Good old Father Time cries out as he passes,

" Do please send on a million more lassies!"

And yet some women are never confeat.

For when we go hunting a wife, just then

Or is it your beauty you wish to enhance?

prairies.

Do you wish to sell us all out under the hammer

I'll tell you we'll never consent to such trades,

And brings us a cargo of Erin's fair daughters,

Whilst a million of men are wasting their lives,

In the bootless search for a million more wives ?

And say we're in need of a million more nurses, boats. Says Mr. Stone: Probably no person has received so much praise, and deserved it so little as Robert Fulton. A man of no practical ingenuity-of no power of conceiving, much less of executing an original mechanical idea-his friend Coedon, has succeeded in persuading the public that to him alone is due the successfu! navigation of our rivers by steam. The facts however, as I gathered them from the late Bishop Potter of Penusylvania, who in turn received them from Chancellor Livingston himself, of New York, and are as follows: Thirteen years before Fitch experimented with his steamboat on the Collect, in New York. He had as is well known, run a little steamer on the Delaware, between Philadelphia and Rordentown, with great success, During that period he had experimented with various kinds of propelling power-the screw, the side-wheel, and sweeps or long oars. The most primitive thing about his vessel was the boiler, which consisted simply of two potash kettles rivited together. Mr. Livingston, who was greatly interested in the success of Fitch's experiments, seized the opportunity when Minister to France, to visit the workshops of Watt & Bolton, in England, where for the first time he saw how was he to introduce it into the United States unless , which was then
