

only one who took me wholly in his seized them as suitable costume for I remember but one of these letters themselves, though superfluous for entirely the tamest and shortest one. Indian women. The next day the But that one, no doubt, is quite squaws appeared bareheaded, but each enough. It had no date or postmark, warrior was tricked out with a bon- and was signed Merinda only, with a net, not on his head, but as a panier. small initial letter. The name was Nor could any disinterested spectator as followed by many stars, the signiffail to confess that the fashionable icance of which is too well known to