IRISH COQUETRY.
Stranger—"Why! what say you don't smoke?"
Mr. Colfax—"No, I don't smoke."
Stranger—"And you don't drink?"
Mr. Colfax—"No, I don't drink."

Mr. Colfax—"Not having an immediate reply ready, the stranger abruptly left him in disgust."
A LAUGHABLE LOVE STORY.
A rich old gentleman had an only daughter, possessed of the highest attractions, moral, personal and pecuniary. She was engaged and devotedly attached to a young man in every respect worthy of her choice. All the marriage preliminaries were arranged, and the wedding was fixed to take place on a certain Thursday. On the Monday preceding the wedding, the father called on his daughter and said to her, "What do you think of the wedding?"
"I think of it as a very good thing," she replied.
"I don't think you are, but I'll be glad to see you on the day," he said.

CRONICLES OF WEDLOCK.
In 1853, the owner of a thrifty little farm in the luxuriant region of Kentucky, known as the blue grass country, was a widower whose increased wealth and improved condition had tempted more than one matrimonial pretender to ferret out his inheritance. He had decided to marry again, and had selected a young woman of high standing in the neighborhood for his bride. The wedding day had arrived, and the bridegroom and his bride were seated at the head of the table. The bridegroom, in a fit of nervousness, had ordered a glass of champagne to be brought to the table. The waiter, in a fit of nervousness, had ordered a glass of champagne to be brought to the table. The waiter, in a fit of nervousness, had ordered a glass of champagne to be brought to the table.

GETTING OUT OF BED.
Dr. Hall does not approve of the old doctrine which was formerly in vogue, that the mind of children is so susceptible of impressions that they will retain them for ever. He says that up to eighteen years of age the mind is so susceptible of impressions that they will retain them for ever. He says that up to eighteen years of age the mind is so susceptible of impressions that they will retain them for ever.

HOW'S YOUR FAMILY.
From the Clyde (Ohio Independent).
It is well known that some men, when away from home will go by assumed names, and that sometimes they will even go by the name of some of the kindred of the fairer sex. A man named 'John' was one of the kindred of the fairer sex. A man named 'John' was one of the kindred of the fairer sex.

SELECTED RECIPES.
Cucumber Pickles.—The small, long kind are the best for pickling, and those that half-grow are over the full-grown. Let them be freshly gathered; pull off the blossoms, but do not rub them; pour over them a strong brine, boiling hot; cover close, and let them stand all night. The next day put your hand in the jar or tub and stir them up; add salt and drain on a sieve, and then dry in a cloth. Make a pickle with the best cider vinegar, adding spice in the following proportions: To each quart of vinegar put half an ounce of black pepper, the same of ginger and allspice, and one ounce of mustard seed. If the flavor is agreeable add four shalis, and two cloves of garlic, and cover close. When this pickle boils up, throw in the cucumbers, not make them boil quite as possible three or four minutes. Put them in a jar with the boiled vinegar, and cover close. When cold, put a sprig of dill, the seeds of dill, if you like it. Made in this way, they will be tender, crisp, and green. If the color is not quite clear enough, pour off the vinegar the next day; wash and pour over the cucumbers, cover perfectly tight.
Melon Preserves.—To make an excellent preserve from unripe melons, the green part of water-melons and citrons, in imitation of preserved ginger, boil in alum water—a tablespoonful to each quart of melon—until they are all yellow—put in a few slices of lemon, and lay in water for twenty days, and take out the alum taste. The pieces should not be quite soft, but likewise cucumber pickle. Dr. in well, make a sirup of sugar—a pound to each quart of melon—put in a few slices of lemon, and lay in water for twenty days, and take out the alum taste. The pieces should not be quite soft, but likewise cucumber pickle.

Removing Grease Spots.—Make a paste of quicklime, washing soda, and water as thick as possible, put it on the grease spots, when you have to do with an old wood. It may have to be rubbed with a brush, or even a stiff cloth, but it will remove the grease. Take two tablespoonfuls of the powder and repeat the operation. Some liquid ammonia may finish the job if the heat does not fully clean it all up.
Cream Beer.—It is an effervescent drink but pleasant than soda water. Instantly when you do not have to your life to get your money's worth, the effervescent being much sweeter. Two ounces tartaric acid, two pounds water, the juice of one lemon, three pints of water. Boil to the consistency of a thick cream, and add the acid to the water. Some liquid ammonia may finish the job if the heat does not fully clean it all up.

Case of Wakes after Bathing.
The Journal of Health says the cause of the wakeness after bathing is sitting at the wrong time; too great bathing; too long continued bathing. When one is made weak by a bath, the cause is the wakeness after bathing is sitting at the wrong time; too great bathing; too long continued bathing.

SPARKS AND SPLINTERS.
A Spark Speech—Ask papa: Ill-gotten gains—Doctor's fees. Always going to the dogs—Bonas. County fairs will be the next affairs. A Criminal Court—Flirting with married men. What's relation is a door to a mat?—A step-father. Can a butcher's be sold to be a joint-stock business? Croquet has been defined as "billiards on grass." When is a thief like a reporter?—When he takes notes. How to make a tall man short—Ask him to lend you $3. On which side of a donkey?—The outside. As soon as his victim threw stones at him an Indian quit playing ghost. An exchange alludes to an editor's goose quill "cackling notes of warbling." We are told that nothing is made in vain. But how about a pretty girl? Isn't she made vain? Somebody advertises for "a good girl to cook." We have seen some that looked good enough to eat raw. Our young ladies are forever behind the fashions; but the fashions are very much behind the young ladies. A dandy asked a barber's boy if he had shaved a monkey. "No, sir," answered the boy, "but if you will, I will." A Missouri lady advertises for the person who is in the habit of serenading her, to stand nearer the house, so that she can see him. A Terre Haute girl thinks it about time some young fellow should, as she has been bride-maid eight times, and has been trilled-maid eight times. A prudent match-making mamma gave the following candid advice to her daughter—"Oh, marry the man you love, girl, if he is as rich as Croesus." A wag in what he knows of farming gives a hint to farmers and stock raisers, he says a good looking man has only to say, "Will you?" and they will. "How does that look, eh?" said a big-fisted Wall street man to a friend, holding up one of his brawny hands. "That," said the friend, "looks as though you'd gone short on your son." The girl of this age is unfit to be made to understand how to make a good dinner. And the man is a dunce who a party of his friends don't understand cooking coffee and steak. A story is told of one asking another whether he would advise him to lend a certain island money. "What, lend him money?" you might say, "but an emerald he'd be worth it." A country girl, coming from a morning walk in the woods, looked as fresh as a daisy kissed by dew, to which she innocently replied, "You have got my name right; Daisy; but his isn't Dew." The latest advocate of Darwinism proclaims it that the bird-nesting position shows the ancestral monkey to plunder the homes of the feathered tribe. Says—says that Vermont is famous for four staples—men, women, maple sugar and horses. The first are strong the last three are weak. The second and third are exceedingly strong, and all are uncommonly hard to beat. "What is that children?" asked a young pastor, exhibiting to his Sunday-school a magic-lantern picture of a poor sinner clinging to a cross towering out of stormy waves in mid-ocean. Robinson Crusoe" was the instant reply. "Sir," said a little blustering man to his wife, "I am going to the city to see what she does for me. I long for it." "Well, I don't exactly know," replied the other, "but to judge from your make-up and appearance I should say you belonged to a class called 'sects'.

Best Way of Roasting Chestnuts.
The south of France chestnuts are first put into a pan of cold water, placed on the fire, and boiled until nearly soft. They are then taken out, each chestnut receiving a sharp slit on the side with a knife, after which they are put into a large flat pan (an ordinary frying pan would do) and tossed over a glowing fire until they become dry and mealy—Mittels Refractor.
Oleum Beer.—Sassafras, allspice, yellow dock, wintergreen, orange each; wild cherry bark and coriander 2 ounces; hops, 1 ounce; molasses, 3 quarts. Put boiling water on the ingredients, and let them stand for 24 hours. Filter, and add pint beer yeast. Leave again 24 hours, then put in an ice cooler, and it is ready for use. It is a wholesome drink, if it is used in moderation.
Blueberry Cordial is made as follows:—To one quart of blackberry juice, add one pound of white sugar, one ounce of cinnamon, one of nutmeg. Boil all together fifteen minutes; add a wineglass full of brandy or good whiskey; a little white hot and a corking and seal on. It is a wineglass full for a bottle; half for a child.
Paste that will Stink.—Take 4 pounds of fine wheat flour and make a batter with cold water; take out all lumps, then add boiling water till you have almost a puddle. This is made by taking a pint of water, and pouring it into a bucket of flour, and then stirring it up with a stick, and then pouring it into a bucket of flour, and then stirring it up with a stick.

Whoooping Cough Remedy.—Take plain water; wash and bruise them well; now strain through a cloth, and sweeten with honey; for an adult one tablespoonful is a dose. The above remedy is what I used thirty years ago, and it acted like a charm.—M. A. E.
A Western settler.—The sun at evening gave a golden glow to the sky, and the stars were beginning to appear. The moon was in the zenith, and the air was cool and refreshing. The children were playing in the yard, and the old man was sitting on the porch, smoking his pipe. The old man was sitting on the porch, smoking his pipe. The old man was sitting on the porch, smoking his pipe.
