The Boston Post tells the following

"Such a fame as Taft's makes dinher parties as innumerable as they are inviting, and it would be unse-countable on the doctrine of chance alone, if there and not now and then at his cozy quarters, but a sly wink strictest incognito or all the parties concerned. It happened on the tuned to the event which was celebrated. Eight marri d gentlemen of emand d suppointment which the physic horse piwer saw-will, worth about all tested the said of cooks the world wanted. Preparations began fortuwith, and all the resource a and appliances of lait's cuisine were brought into requisition.

"But meanwhile the wives of the eight gentlemen got wind of the af tair They learned to their just indignation that their husbands were to fight it constantly to wave their preparing for a grand feast for their edification, and that eight plates only were to be laid on their table. Without waiting for an explanation, they dispatched a mes-enger to Taft's and dupt cated their husbands' order, to be served in a separate dining room. The bills of far were to be identical. with the exception of cigars, and the strictest stience was enjoined. Not even a hint or whisper was to pass between the husbands and the landlord. The hour appointed for the two din ners cone, and the husbands at down to their dinner, and their wives to theirs.
