The man who drinks and swears at play, And leads frail people out of the way And be a pious pattern bright,

And shine like any gospel light, In the end. But the man who goes to church and sigh And hypocritically cries

I thank thee for my moral worth, I'm not like other men of earth,

When death the saber shall unsheath, He then may be compelled to stand, Among the goats at the left hand

The man whose soul is filled with cheer, And who to music lends an ear Tho' he may slowly jog along,

But the man whose soul is filled with hate, Shall never enter at the gate, 'Til he has knelt and prayed and waited, Until his soul is saturated

I sat me down beneath a tree, And fell into a reverie

How vain is all this world of toys, And how our sorrows with our joys

I saw the wealthy and the poor, Stand at the great Creator's door And Peter came in haste to see, And drawing forth a ponderous key

Then for a moment stood aghast, Some men there before him stood, Who never did a peck of good

Then from among the motely crowd About a dozen poor and blind, Who came.

And Peter took them by the hand, And lifted them upon the stand Then said, "These brethern please me well The rest of you may go to h-grass And burn."

We are constrained once more to protest against the way in which the Washington. Him whom the Omaha 1856 OLDEST & BEST 187 Herald acknowledges to be the "bravest, the purest, the ablest and best" man amongst us all, has been snubbed again, and is determined not to submit to it without a manly struggle to show the world how merit is trampied under foot in the United States

The way of it was substantially as follows: It is the rule in the Senate to elect chairman, members of the standing committees. Out of courtesy to the party in the minority, it is customary to give it a minority representation on each committee. Hence at the commencement of the first session of each Congress, the two parties hold caucuses and nominate the number of Senators for each committee that custom allows them. This time there was a little difficulty to get the "Liberals" disposed of as neither party wanted them in their were not broad enough to cover three political organizations. Finally the matter was pretty amicably settled by the agreement between the Republicans and Democrats, that the Repub-lican caucus should have the privilege of "placing" the Liberal outfit, and all would agree to its decision. This was done and was acquiesced in by all but our Tip.

Thomas W. Tipton of Nebraska, when he found out what kind of committees the Republican Congress had placed him on, flew on the wings of the wind to the Democratic managers and implored their protection. He had no home with the Republicans, he had been imposed upon by them, and he asked the Democrats to take him into their fold, and apportion him in their share of the committees, the same as though he were regularly branded as a sheep of the Bourbon

The Democrats felt their bowels yearning for Tip's woes and consented. Then their caucus put him on the tail of the committee on Mines Mining, and the tail of the committee on Public Lands.

We regret to say that Tip is no better satisfied with his fate as decided by the Democrats. He is indignant. When Tip is indignant somebody had better look out for he is a severe cuss. It is believed that Tip will get this matter submitted to one of the neutral powers for arbitration.
