There are a few ideas I would like to advance in regard to having exhibitions in places of worship ; but I will forbear, fearing it may be thought I have particular reference to this one, which is not the case. I believe, with Solomon, there is a "tline to pray and a time to dance," and I believe, too, there is a place suited for these different exercises. A taste for the comic and ludicrous and a craving for things sacred may both be right in their place, but they ought not to be "toe much mixed." But of this some other time.
