BY GEORGE P. MORRIS. The following ballad is founded, in part upon a thrilling story of the West, related

The shades of evening closed around The boundless prairies of the West As, grouped in sadness on the ground, A band of pilgrims leaned to rest; Upon the tangled weeds were laid, The mother and her youngst born And thus the weary night went on.

When on the morning winds there came The Teton's shrill and thrilling cry,

The sun seem'd rising through the haze, But with an aspect dread and dire! The very air appeared to blaze! Oh, God! the prairie was on fire!

Around the centre of the plain, A belt of flame retreat denied. And like a furnace glowed the train That wall'd them in on every side: And onward rolled the torrent wild-

Down knelt the mother and her child, And all-save one-shricked out, "We

"Not so!" he cried-"help-clear the sedge! ting terms the unqualified and "Strip bare a circle to the land!" That done, he hastened to its edge, And grasped a rifle in his hand; Dried weeds he held beside the pan, Which kindled at a flash, the mass! Now "fire fight fire!" he said, as ran

The forked flames among the grass.

On three sides soon the torrent flew, But on the fourth no more it raved! Then large and broad the circle grew, And thus the pilgrim band was saved ! The flames recoded far and wide; The mother had notiprayed in vain! God had the Teton's arts defied!
