See the advertisements under the head of "For Sale." Doubtless you will find there something of interest to you.

We understand that there has been some good skating on the river, but we advise the boys and girls that it is a very poor place to go to get it.

We have had neither rain nor snow to speak of this winter as yet, but from last Sunday evening for about twenty four hours it was cold enough for any body.

Thanksgiving passed off very quietly in our city. Business houses with few exceptions were closed, services were held in the churches, and the day was observed commendably by our people as a National Sabbath.

A petition is being circulated in town for the repeal of the U. S. two cent revenue tax on bank checks, as this is the only remnant of the revenue tax on documents, and one in which the inconvenience far outweighs the advantages derived from it, as compared with other methods of taxation.

There are twenty performers of Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels—all white men; and a white man, you know, can beat a negro in the Minstrel business, clear out of sight.

Our marksmen had two shooting matches last week, on Wednesday and Saturday. Turkeys were won as follows: On Wednesday, S. Bowen, 3; J. Cochran, 2; Charley Arnold, 1.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisements of the publishers of Harper's Brothers to be found in this paper—the Monthly, the Weekly, and the Bazar.

Several day laborers with a wife and children came down from Lincoln during the cold weather a week or two ago and put up at the Sherman House, while their money lasted, and to avoid being turned out one cold night, gave their checks for their trunks, which were in the depot, to the landlord as a pledge.

They are truly in a suffering condition and if any one having work would give them an opportunity it would be an act of charity and humanity. They live now in the Dick Harper property below town.

Mr. George Neff of St. Deroin lost over a year ago two colts and had given up entirely all hopes of their recovery until recently. It seems that during the summer Mr. A. L. Stiers, of Aspinwall, saw a horse swim the Missouri river to the Nebraska shore and as it appeared to be a stray he took it up and posted it as a stray. Subsequently a young man giving his name as A. W. Sanders, in company with one Harris of Council Bluffs, came here proved the property by his own oath to be his own. Mr. Neff, hearing of the circumstance and the description of the horse, recognized it as his own and went immediately to Council Bluffs and there recovered both of his colts. We understand that no arrears have yet been made. It is seldom that stolen horses are recovered after that length of time.

It seems to be an open question now whether it is necessary to pay the usual commencement fee on the commencement of cases in the district court since the New Constitution is in force. We understand that Judge Grant has expressed his opinion to be that the statute is still in force. The old Constitution required the legislature to provide by statute for the payment of commencement fees to constitute a fund for payment of Judges, which the legislature did. The new constitution does not contain the provision but provides for the payment of the Judges in another manner, and is now in force. Is the statute enacted in pursuance of the old constitution where the fund is no longer needed still in force? It would seem to us not, unless it be that the Judges still hold under the old constitution and are to be paid out of the fund provided as herebefore. If this is true, and it is not unlikely, the statute will be in force until the Judges elected under the new constitution are installed in office. Then, as the reason of the statute and the necessity for it will cease, it will doubtless be repealed by reason of its repugnancy to the new constitution.

Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels have traveled twenty-four consecutive years, and are acknowledged to be the most interesting Minstrel troupe in the United States. The headquarters of the troupe is at New Orleans, and they are but recently from the South. A Mobile paper of recent date, gives the troupe the following very complimentary notice, but it is not more eulogistic than papers everywhere speak of them:

Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels returned to their old friends in Mobile last night, and collected an audience far larger than has been the rule this year. They are recognized as the "legitimate" in burnt cork; and their various acts are done with a thorough finish that is always artistic. The various comic scenes were wildly absurd, and call forth constant laughter; the banjo of W. Edwards was much applauded; and Mr. Kent's "wench business" was clever. But Fox and Ward are the trump cards Mr. Duprez holds. Their songs and dances in character are truly admirable; and in brilliant clog dancing they beat the world. Their time, grace and originality in this have never been excelled here.

At the beginning of the new year we will "turn a new leaf" in regard to our subscription list. We have subscribers who have been taking THE ADVERTISER for years, and not paid a cent for it. The names of such of them we intend to strike off our list. Those of them who pay their honest debts will pay us, but many will never pay us; while it will be considerable loss to us, it is better to draw a black mark across their names now, than to continue to sustain loss by their refusing to pay. We are determined to stop taking subscribers without pay in advance, and old delinquent subscribers who want our paper after the first issue in January '76 must settle up with us before that time, and make advance payment for the future. Now friends, you who owe us subscription, we ask you to pay us—very directly and unequivocally but very respectfully "duh" for our money.

In adopting the advance payment system we know it will benefit us while it cannot be a detriment to our patrons, but it will be in one respect an absolute benefit to them. It will enable us to furnish a good paper without embarrassing us to do so. Our paper and ink and all our material and work costs us cash, and we can't make arrangements to pay when subscribers and advertisers pay us. We have to pay on demand, and we have often to borrow money at the bank to buy paper to deal out to these delinquent subscribers we are talking about. We know, as every sensible person, knows, that that is not the proper way to do business, and we intend to stop it at the time above named.

Now, old and new subscribers we solicit you, every one, to make your arrangements so as to pay up and renew your subscriptions by January first. We want you all to continue to be our readers and patrons, and we promise you a good paper promptly as heretofore, sound and firm as a rock upon questions tending to affect our common interests locally or nationally.

The Music and Tableaux.

One of the best entertainments of the kind ever held in this city was the one given last Wednesday evening at McPherson Hall, for the benefit of the M. E. Sabbath School. It certainly was deserving of the very liberal patronage that was given it, and the unanimous expressions of pleasure from those who witnessed it is sufficient proof of its excellence. Among the music we might notice the male quartette, "Sweet Genevieve," as being a very sweet production, and well rendered. The duet, "Golden Day," by Miss Fannie Arnold and Mrs. A. W. Nickell, was all that was expected from these talented and cultured ladies, and did them great credit. The duet, "Music and Her Sister Song," by Misses Minnie Locke and Florence Bailey, pleased all, and the young misses may congratulate themselves on having made a good impression. "Tuscan Girls Crowning the Sea," by Misses Clara Mercer and Lu Arnold, "Your Mission," by Stella Hetzel, and "Mother Kissed me in my Dreams," by Miss Eva O'Pelt, were all very good selections and creditably rendered. The duet, "A Slight Difference," was almost fearfully well rendered by Eva O'Pelt and Dooker Chadwick. If they can differ as seriously in drama, how can they do in good sober earnest? "I Love the Songs my Mother Sang," by Master Charles Gaede, of Peru, was a very sweet song, and in Charles' clear soprano voice—remarkable for its clearness—it was deserving of special mention.

The "Opening Rose Bud" was a beautiful fairy scene. Maud Ebricht looked a veritable fairy queen, if fairies are verities, and one could almost imagine that the glittering troupe would disappear at the waive of her magic wand.

The tableaux "Maud Mueller" were a decided success. The characters were well selected, and the maid who "raked the hay" deserves credit for the good taste she displayed in her personification.

The "Soldier's Dream of Home" was characteristic. Stella Hetzel as the guardian angel was a beautiful character.

The statutory was quite unexceptionable. It was, however, too transient to give a proper conception of the representations, but perhaps as complete as the nature of the subject would admit.

"Blue Beard's Wives" was a good tableau of the familiar nursery tale. "The Attack," and "Rise and Fall of Dry Goods," were good sells. "Darkness, Dawn and Day" was a very tasty tableau, and combined well the shades of night with the light of the more perfect day.

The most interesting tableau of the evening was "Paul Before King Agrippa." Mr. Church as King and Mrs. Handley as queen, had a royal air. Rev. Mr. Richards as Paul, in chains, and the attendants, soldiers, scribes, &c., and maids of honor to the Queen, presented a striking as well as brilliant court scene under the colored lights.

We are glad to notice that the entertainment was a success financially. Mrs. A. W. Nickell and Miss Fannie Arnold deserve great credit for the labor and care bestowed upon the arrangement of the tableaux and the preparation of the music.

The Festival by the Good Templars of Nemaha City.

On Monday evening the Good Templars had quite a pleasant time at the school house in Nemaha. A number of visitors from surrounding lodges were present, and many who are not members of the lodge were invited and met with them in the banquet hall to assist them financially and to help eat the abundance of good things which their tables afforded. The object of the occasion was to raise money to pay off an indebtedness the lodge had contracted. We did not learn what the receipts of the evening amounted to, but judging from the number of people present, and the price charged for supper, that it was a financial success, and that sufficient was realized to clear the lodge of debt.

The entertainment consisted of extemporaneous addresses, reading essays, instrumental music by "Excelsior Band," and Miss Crother on piano, songs, etc. and supper. Every part of the programme was well executed and appropriate. The essay on "Liberty," by Miss Crother and that by Judge Church were carefully and ably prepared papers. Judge Church's remarks appear elsewhere in our columns to-day. The tables were splendid, and loaded with cake, pie and all sorts of sweet things, and rich pastry, together with great pots of oyster soup, making a supper that was irresistibly tempting, but of which no truly temperate man in "all things" will stuff himself at that time of night—as brother Lake did. And we are not mad either because brother Lake's bread basket is so much larger than ours.

After the programme at the hall had been exhausted, the young folks who delight to sing the light fantasie repaired to the residence of Capt. Henderson, and enjoyed the balance of the night in that way. The occasion was deemed by all participants, as very enjoyable and a perfect success. May the G. T.'s of Nemaha live and prosper forever.

A Valuable Medical Treatise. The edition for 1876 of the sterling Medical Almanac, known as Hostetter's Almanac, is now ready, and may be obtained, free of cost of druggists and general country dealers in all parts of the United States and British America, and indeed in every civilized portion of the Western Hemisphere. It contains the most practical advice for the preservation and restoration of health, a large amount of interesting and amusing light reading, and the calendar, astronomical, etc. are prepared with great care, and will be found of daily use. The best of Hostetter's Almanacs for 1876 will probably be the largest edition of a medical work ever published in this country. The proprietors, Messrs. Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., will send a copy of the Almanac, with a receipt of two cent stamp, will forward a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood.

An Unanswerable Argument. The strongest argument in hard times is economy. Louis Lowman is prepared to sell goods lower than ever. His prices are below anything ever reached in Brownville. Practice true economy—buy his goods, and you will be sure to buy.

AN ADDRESS. By J. S. Church, Delivered on the Occasion of the Festival at Good Templars Hall, Nemaha City, Monday Evening, Nov. 29.

What are the fundamental conditions of the greatest civilization attainable for mortals on earth? and to what extent may a well organized government be influential in building up such a commonwealth? As legal voters, as young men who will soon become such, as intelligent women whose silent moral influence is their only weapon of political power, we all are, or should be, deeply interested in the solution of the above question. I assume that a large majority of me and the women as we find them in this country desire to live on this higher plane, and would support that civil code which wisdom and statesmanship could formulate into constitutions and laws in aid of such a social and national growth, could they but find the path which leads to such a consummation. To such as do, I have written and will read these few thoughts for their reflection.

Let us first consider if there is any ground for hope for a speedy realization of our desires under the administration of our present code of laws. That we are progressing from generation to generation is more credible to our better feelings and nobler impulses than attributable to any assistance emanating from the political forces of the State.

I will lay down here a few general principles, the truth of which I will not now stop to discuss, but trust they will commend themselves to your intelligence and better judgments as axiomatic formulas which need no demonstration in their behalf:

First. That state of society is good, which, considering the imperfections incident to humanity, enables all men and women to stand as near on the same plane of intelligence, wealth, culture, and moral power, as is possible in this world of ours; and that that society is the best which attains the highest perfection of the masses, with the least differences in their general culture, in the same special department of thought or industry.

Second. That government is good which aids in producing the results first above mentioned; and that that government is the best which encourages and contributes most powerfully toward it.

Third. The more nearly equal the attainment of the masses, and the higher they all stand in the scale of intelligence, wealth, and moral power, the less expensive must be the modes of executing the public will of such a people.

Fourth. The laws which they would enact would each year become fewer in number and simpler in detail. Their violations would be rare, and resorts to legal tribunals for the adjustments of rights of person and property rarer still.

If you are willing to concede the correctness of the foregoing propositions, then you are compelled to admit that their converse are equally true, as follows:

First. That that society is bad in which there is an inequality among the masses in intelligence, wealth, culture, and moral development; and that that society is the worst in which this inequality is the greatest.

Second. That that government is bad which results in the one; and that that is the worst which results in the other.

Third. That the wider this difference is, the more expensive must be the machinery of government, and the more intricate must be the laws by which the rights and privileges of these two great classes are fixed and defined, so that the stronger shall not oppress the weaker; so that the weaker, in its moments of passion and frenzy, shall not send the oppressor to the guillotine, untied and unbound, as was the case in France scarcely a century ago.

Fourth. Violations of law in such conditions of society must be frequent, and the resort to petit and grand juries, courts, and other expensive process, still more frequent.

We come back, in view of all these fundamental truths, to our first proposition, and again enquire, what are the primary conditions of the grandest civilization attainable for mortals on earth? Did time permit, we would take great pleasure in discussing this matter fully, in all its bearings upon society; but on this occasion we must confine ourselves to one point, to-wit: How does our license system affect society? And here, too, for want of time, we can only mention the principles without discussing them.

It is clear that the saloon and the trade adds not a dollar's worth of wealth to the community in which it is situated. We think it equally clear that it is a destroyer of the wealth which others, were it not for them, would accumulate. It certainly takes from those who patronize the bar more or less of their yearly income, thus producing an inequality in wealth between those who do and those who do not indulge in the habitual use of the beverage thus sold. Bear in mind that we do not say that this buying and selling is chargeable with all the inequalities between individuals which everywhere exist; but do wish to be understood as saying that it is the most prolific source of the vast differences, which a good government ought to avoid, that are known to our records. The evidences and personal experiences in proof of this are accumulating annually, at a fearful rapidity. Again, it is clear that in so far as it does produce an inequality of wealth between him who does and him who does not do it, it deprives the man who does of the means of educating himself and family to the same extent as the man who does not dissipate. Now it may not be as equally clear, but it is undeniably of undoubted proof, that the drinking man has not the same desire, and does not feel the same pressing need of education as the same man would had he never been a slave to Nemaha Notes.

Levi Johnson is having a new roof put on his hotel and otherwise repairing and improving it.

Clover & Huffman, it is conceded by all who have work done at their shop, are the best blacksmiths ever in Nemaha. They do their work well and at the very lowest prices.

There was a nice dance at the Johnson House on last Friday evening. Several ladies and gentlemen from Brownville were in attendance.

The Nemaha folks have seen the "snow fly" this fall but haven't seen that railroad in operation yet. But the large number of ties being constantly piled along the line gives them good reason to believe that the road will be in operation ere long.

Next Saturday experts with the rifle will have a chance to demonstrate their skill at this place. A large number of turkeys, we understand, will be brought in to be shot for.
