A clergyman from Pennsylvania delivered a temperance lecture in St. Louis the other day, and in the course tributor to the revenue of Great Britof his remarks, he informed his audience that half a million people die drunkard's deaths in the United States every year. This is not the first time the Journal has taken note of this wild and foolish assertion.

According to the tables of mortality, the average length of life in the United States is nearly forty years. This gives the annual number of deaths in the United States for the past ten years at just about one million. Of these, one-half die in early childhood, and consequently cannot very well die drunkards. Of the reernment to send them to Manitoba, very well die drunkards.
