THE FOUR SPANIARDS.

In 1828 I was second mate of the brig Isabel. We had been freighting for six or eight months among the West India Islands, and picking up a good deal of money. At last the hot weather came on, freights grew dull, and we made ready to sail for home. In the meantime there came on board four Spaniards, who wished to engage passage to the North, and being able to accommodate just that number, we accepted them. They were all sinster-looking fellows, and and one in particular was so much so, that I wondered why Captain Hill-
