The giver in the gift.

Ye change to weary burdens The helps that should uplift. Ye lose in form the spirit,

Who called ye to self-torment To fast and penance vain? Dream ye Eternal Goodness Has joy in mortal pain?

Who counts his brother's welfare As sacred as his own, And loves, forgives, and pittes, He serves me alone.

I loathe your wranglingfeouncils, I tread upon your creeds: Who made ve mine avengers Or told ye of my needs?

No more in ark or hill grove The Hollest abides: Not in the scroll's dead letter The eternal secret hides.

What if the o'erturned altar Lays bare the ancient lie? What if the dreams and legends Of the world's childhood die?

My Gerizini and Ebal Are in each human soul. The still, small voice of blessing And Sinal's thunder roll,

The stern behest of duty, The doom-book open thrown, The heaven ye seek, the hell ye fear, Are with yourselves alone.

A WIFE'S CONFESSION.

I did not marry for love. Very few people do, so in this respect I am neither better nor worse than my neighbors. No, I certainly did not Mr. Cartwright simply because he asked me.

This was how it happened. He was the rector of Doveton, and we lived at the Manor House, which was about ten minutes' walk from the church and rectory. We had daily service at Doveton, and I nearly always attended it, and it came to pass that Mr. Cartwright invariably walked home with me. It was a matter of custom now, and I thought nothing of it: it pleased him, and on the whole it was away? rather pleasant to me also.

I must confess, however, I was rather surprised when, one morning as we got to the avenue which led up to the Manor House, Mr. Cartwright asked me to be his wife.

I have never been able to find out why I said yes, but I did; perhaps I thought it a pity to throw away so much love; perhaps it was because he was so terribly in earnest that I dared not refuse him; perhaps I feared his pale face, and his low, pleading voice would ever haunt me if I rejected his love; or, perhaps, it was because he only asked me to marry him -he did not ask me if I loved him, for I think he guessed I did not; per-Peace and Quiet haps it was all these reasons put together, but anyhow I said yes, and in due tilne we were married. I ought to have been very happy for he was a most devoted husband, but I was not, and though I did not notice it then, I know now that for the first six months after our marriage | Cartwright. he was not happy either.

It was all my fault-I either would not or could not love him; I accepted coure, but I made no effort to return it; and I am sure he had found out that he had made a mistake in marrying a woman who did not love him. One morning, about six months after our our marriage, he told me at breakfast that he intended leaving me alone for a few weeks, to stay with his mother, who was not very

When I got home the house looked so dreary and empty and there was no one to meet me; presently one of the servants came for the chawls, and with her Nero, Mr. Cartwright's retriever, which, when he saw I was alone, set up a howl for his master.
