A St. Louis paper gives an account of a most singular freak of nature. It is that of a boy six years old whose head, and legs from the knees down, including the feet, are exactly like those of a rooster. The head has bill. comb, wattles, and feathers which extend to the shoulders. The other parts of his body are human in shape, but his hands are abnormally large. This curious thing came from Vicksburg to St. Louis accompanied by its father and mother.

The taking of testimony in the Ol- they went cheap, dog cheap. ive murder trial at Hastings terminated on the 14th. The testimony for the defense consisted in inquiry into Olive's character, which many witnesses swore had been good, and the impeachment of Dufrand's testimony, by proving that he had on several occasions declared that he did not know or recognize any of the men who lynched Mitchell and Ketchum. No attempt was made to impeach the testimeny of Brown; but a motion was made to set his testimony aside on the ground that he was under indictment for the same offense. Motion overruled.
