Many years ago a friend of mine had a dozen apple trees that were bearing heavy crops of apples every other year. He wished to have fruit every year, so he took a long polea heavy beating on the side, or half of the tree, just as the fruit was about several years, that these trees bore plain "Bill," laconically replied with tree. The result was, as I saw for heavy crops on one side one year, and the next year a heavy crop on the wait a minute," interupted the young other side, so that for many years he had plenty of apples for home use every year. His trees stood in a rich soil that was annually cultivated-no grass sod to cover the roots. It is now about time to try the experiment.

> To render any enterprise successful, we must be willing to work earnestly, patiently, continually. Spasmodic effort never did, and never will, lead to triumphant success. When we embark in any new enterprise, we must be prepared to work and waitwait for the reward of our labor. The farmer must plow, and plant, and till, waiting through long days of unfolding, for the bloom and ripening of the grain, ere the harvest may be gathered. In every department of life it is the same. Then, if we find no pleasure in the work we do, but count it hateful drudgery looking forward with weary, longing eyes, to the faroff harvest time only for reward, how many miserable, unhappy days we must endure.
