THE ADVERTISER

G W. MAIRBROTHER. T.C. HACKER. FAIRBROTHER & HACKER. Publishers and Proprietors.

Published Every Thursday Morning AT BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA.

TERMS, IN ADVANCE : .82 00 One copy, one year 1 00 One copy, six months 50 One copy, three months. sa No paper sent from the office antil paid ftr.

READING MATTER ON EVERYPAGE

See

OFFICIAL DIRECTORY.	AUTHORIZED BY THE U. S. GOVERNMENT.	Written for the Advertiser. The County Politician.
District Officers.	First National Dank
8, B, POUND Judge J, C, WATSON District Attorne WILLIAM H. HOOVER District Clerk County Officers.		BROWNVILLE, Sept. 22, 1879 He moves in a soft-soapy way, Ahead, and up to loom; Maneuvers almost night and day, And rides the humbug boom.
JOHN S. STULL. County Judg WILSON F. MAJORS. Cierk and Recorde A. H. GILMORE. Treasure		He has a penetrating nose.
R. V. BLACK Sherif C. B. PARKER Corone JAMES M. HACKER Surveyo PHILIP CROTHER School Superintenden	D 17 0 11 7 040 000	Which scents how to behave, Himself to slip or else bulldose Into the tidal wave.
JOHN H. SHOOK. JOHN H. POHLMAN JOHN H. POHLMAN J. H. PEERY, City Officers.	Authorized " 500,000	His light, he lets it ever shine! No bushel hides its glare!
W.T. ROJERS Mayo	IS PREPARED TO TRANSACT A	He's nosing nearly all the time, And smelling everywhere.
J. B. DOCKER. Cleri S. A. OSBORN. Tressure JOHN, W. LOVE. Marsha COUNCILMEN. L. D. ROBINSON JOSEPH RODY. Ist Ward	General Banking Business	He goes about from farm to farm— From town to town does roam; His love for others is so warm He's not much left for home.
W. A. JUDKINS A. H. GILMORE LEWIS HILL.		He is a greater wonder yet, From his queer calling's birth, Than the famed beast of Holy-writ Whose like is not on earth.
SOCIAL DIRECTORY.	United States and Europe	The beast stands while it can survive,
Churches. Methodist E. Church Services and Sabbath at 16:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m. Sunday School at 2% n.m. Prayer Meeting Thursday evening.		And down at death it lies; But he lies always while alive- And quits it when he dies.
S. P. Witson, Pastor. reshvterlin Church.—Services each Sabhath at 10:30 a.m., and 7:15 a.m., Subhath School after inpriling services. Prayer Mosting Wednesday erenings at 7:15 o'clock. W. J. WEEBER, Pastor.	On approved security only. Time Drafts discount ed, and special accommodations granted to deposit- rs. Dealers in GOVERNMENT BONDS,	Old Temperance he is, of course, Where men like that abound; But, somehow, always gets a boost When whisky men are 'round.
Christ's Chur th. Services every Sunday, a 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 n. m. Sunday School at ? p. m. REV. MATTHEW HENRY, Missionary in charge-	STATE, COUNTY & CITY SECURITIES DEPOSITS	He goes into the church of God.
Hr. Pleasant Comberland Presbyterian Church four miles south-west of Brownville. Ser- vices first Sablath in each month. B. J. Jonx- sox, Pastor.	Received payable on demand. and INTEREST al- lowed on time certificates of deposit.	With reverential mein, But studies how, with party rod, To "lick the platter clean."
Christian Church. — R.A. Hawley, Elder, Preach- ing every Sunday at 11 a.m., and 7.50 n.m. Bible Beading and Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening, Elder Chas, Rowe proaches the second Sunday in every month.	DIREATORS,-wm.1. Den, B. M. Balley, M. A.	And when upon the jury sits, He seems "Old Justice" bare, But as he sees best cancus hits, His verdict does deciare.
Catholic Services every 4th Sunday of each month, at 10 o'cloch a. m. Father Cummisky.	JOHN L. CARSON,	Such instances but illustrate.
Priest. Schools. Brownyllie Union Graded Schools J. M. Mc.	A. R. DAVISON, Cashler. President. J. C.MCNAUGHTON, Asst. Cashler.	His common walk of life, Besides his laying eggs of hate And hatching them to strife.
Kanzie, Principal: Miss Jossie F. Rain, Assid- ant High School; Miss Jossie F. Rain, Assid- pepartment: Miss Alice Hitt, 1st Intermediate: Miss Kato Cox. 21 Intermediate: Miss Emma South, 1st Primary; Mrs. Carrie Johnson, 24 Pri-	ESTABLISHED IN 1856.	When people grow in self command Till soft-sosp goes unthanked, mary.	OLDEST	Then he will be in less demand, And "put to bed and spanked."

ESTABLISHED 1856.

Oldest Paper in the State.

Mabel, ain't dis a Yankee sojer ?'

'Yes.'

the local

BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1879.

'Well, that point yielded. But why ed, we will, with Mabel's consent, Mabel visited Harry daily, supplytaken prisoner, but the second night after escaped by crawling away in the ing him with books and everything do you object to the soldiers. Colonel proceed with the ceremony, with the darkness, and hiding in the brush; possible to add to his comfort. His DeLacy will of course want an escort. exception of substituting myself in A War Incident About General Grant. since then I have wandered about, confinement was less irksome than he 'Why does he need an escort inside place of the intended bridegroom. not daring to approach any dwelling had expected. Squads of rebel sol- his own lines and on such an occasion Chaplain,' continued he, addressing for food until to-day, driven almost diers came and went, little dreaming as this? I shall see enough of the one of his men, 'go on with the cere- when General Grant was in command to despair I determined to go to yond- of the near proximity of a hated soldiers when I am compelled to.' er house and risk the consequence. I Yankee. now throw myself fully upon your His wound healed rapidly, and each the Colonel has no objections. I pre- speechless with rage, 'I utterly refuse headquarters, having a pleasant somercy, pray do not betray me, but If day brought greater strength, till he sume being successful in the major to sanction such proceedings!'

possible assist me to some place of soon began to think of attempting to points he will not be so particular 'Go ahead, "Chaplain,' cried the party to join in a social glass; all but concealment, where I can find rest reach the Union lines. for a few days, and gain strength to find my way back to the federal lines, that quickly matured his half formed you have arrived at so sensible a con- her father. I find she needs protec- The hour passed, and each went his and Heaven will reward you for your plans. One morning Mabel came as clusion in the matter.' usual, but he noticed she was pale and 'And now as I have some business the responsibility transferred to my-kindness,' He sank on the ground almost ex- excited, and her eyes bore traces of matters to attend to I will ride over to self." hausted. Mabel looked carefully in recent tears. Naturally, he asked her the village, and will stop on the way The parties joined hands and the from General Grant to report at headevery direction. No one was in sight. the cause, and Mabel, feeling he and see Colonel DeLacy.'

would sympathize with her, made Mabel withdrew, well satisfied the and wife. Her plan was quickly formed. 'Arise,' she said, 'and follow me, it him her confidant. 'My father,' said interview was over. is a difficult task and fraught with she, 'claims descent from the first Judge Gray called for his horse, and refreshments, which were soon dis- the officer, I believe," for their acdanger to us both, but I will take the families of Virginia. Naturally he is was soon on his way to the confeder- patched, and preparations were hasti- quaintance was slight, "who remark-risk. If you are betrayed, it shall be not a little proud of his lineage. ate encampment. no fault of mine.' She led the way by Among the many confederate officers Colonel DeLacy was elated at his own horse was brought from the sta- drank." The officer modestly ana circuitous path towards the negro that frequently visit us, is one whose success. He winced at some of the ble. Everything had previously been swered that he was. "Then," conquarters in the rear of the Gray Man- father and mine are old time friends. conditions of the agreement, but ac- made ready, so no time was lost. sion. One stood a little bit out from The DeLacys are an old family and cepted the terms with as good grace as Captain Sanborn intended to take I have been looking for to take charge the others and appeared to be the only represent the highest type of Georgi- possible. However it was with a sort the Colonel and friends as prisoners of the Commissary Department, and an aristocracy. Nothing could suit my of grim satisfaction that he sent word of war, but Mabel interceded for I order that you be detailed to that one inhabited. As they approached the door, a father better than an alliance be- to Mabel that he should avail himself them, so after a short consultation duty." He served his country faith-and at sight of them threw up her when Colonel DeLacy proposed for that he might have the pleasure of lease them, taking Colonel DeLacy's was honorably discharged. Years hands in amazement. Mabel motion- my hand he was readily accepted. passing the day in her company. ed silence, and the woman turned But when he asked me to be his wife Matters thus arranged, time passed turn to his army to give the alarm un- President. The officer had settled back into the house whither the two I rejected him, thereby greatly in- rapidly. followed. But once inside her amaz- curring my father's displeasure. He The wedding day arrived.

ment expressed itself in words: 'Fo' encouraged the Colonel to renew his True to his word, Colonel DeLacy the Union lines.

de laws sakes !' she exclaimed. 'Miss suit, and declared I should marry him rode over to the Gray mansion early The little party reached their desti- The trouble on the border between willingly or otherwise. I just as firm- in the morning. Mabel received him nation in safety, wearled with their Texas and Mexico, along the Rio ly declared I would not, and thus courteously, graciously giving him rapid march, but well satisfied with Grande, attracted the attention of matters stood until this morning, her hand, and a smile which raised a their adventure.

THE ADVERTISER

G.W. PAIRBROTHEF. T.C.HACKER. FAIRBROTHER & HACKER,

F. m. R. W. Furnas.

Publishers & Proprietors.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Oneinch, one year. . $10 00 Each succeeding inch. per year. 5.00 One inch, per month 1 00 Each additional inch, per monto. 50 Legal advertisements at legal rates- One square (10thes of Nonpare)], or less)first insertion $1.00 each subsequent insertion. Sec. 25 All transient advertisements must be paid forin advance.

VOL. 24.-NO. 15. OFFICIAL PAPER OF THECOUNTY

HE NEVER DRANK.

In the early part of the late war, mony.' of the army before Vicksburg, a num-

'I will yield to this point also, if 'Hold !' gasped the Judge, almost ber of officers were gathered at his cial time. One of them invited the about the minor. We will consider young man, 'it's all right, Mabel is of one accepted. He asked to be excus-About this time an event occurred the affair settled and I am very glad age and we don't need the saction of ed, saying that he "never drank." tion he is not able to give, and I wish way to his respective command.

A few days after this the officer who declined to drink received a note chaplain soon pronounced them man quarters. He obeyed the order, and was soon in the presence of the Gen-

The servants were ordered to serve eral. Grant said to him : "You are ly made for their departure. Mabel's ed the other day that you never tinued the General, "you are the man stout good-natured negress came out, tween the two families, therefore of her kindness and ride over early, with his men Ernest concluded to re- fully until the close of the war, and word as an officer, he would not re- passed, and Grant had come to be til morning, he left them to keep the down to the duties of private life, Judge company, while they left for and the little incident was cherished as a pleasant memory.

Congress and a commission we

	Tomple of Honor.	DEAT	REVELATION.	wid him here, an' de 'federates com-	Colonel DeLacy called and I refused	higher hope than he had ever dared	Captain Sanborn soon after sent his	dered to ascertain the facts and report.
1		REAL	MABEL GRAY.	in' roun' mos' every day ?'	to see him. My father came to my room, stormed and raved, and finally	to cherish. Mabel had schooled herself for this	of the northern states until the war	Again President grant remembered the man who "never drank," and ap-
	Wm, II, Roover W, Rec.; T. C. Hacker, L. D.	ESTATE	MADLL GRAI.	'That's just what I want you to tell		day, determined in any event what	was over. And when peace once more	nointed him Chairman of the hoard
	Juvealle Temple, meets every Saturday after- boan, Miss Grace Stewart, C. T : Miss Mary		It was a delightful afternoon in	me, Aunt Chloe. I found him down by the brook. You see he is sick and	my 'childish nonsense,' as he called	might transpire, by no word, look or	reigned over the land, he returned to	The place was accepted, and he en-
	Hackar, Sec; Mrs. I. S. Minlek, Supt. Red Ribbon Club	AGENCY	early spring.	badly wounded. Something must be	it, but I must be married within a	action would she betray herself or	his native village, where he settled	tered faithfully upon the work : the
1.1	Monta the first Tuesday of each month. B. M. Bal-	IN NEBRASKA.	The earth had donned its robe of	done for him right away I did not	week. I dislike to disobey my father,	cause a breath of suspicion.	down to business and a happy mar-	report submitted shows the thorough-
	Icy, Pros.; A. H. Gilmore, Sec. I. O. of O. F.		loveliest green, the air, soft and mild, bears its balmy fragrance through the	know what to do so I came to you for		She kept her room the most of the time until the dinner hour. After		ness with which the duty was dis-
	Brownville Lodge No. 5. I. O. O. FRegular	William H. Hoover.	open window to Mabel Gray, sitting	Aunt Chloe was flattered at once.		that she accompanied the Colonel to ing brothers connectfully invited. A. H. Gilmore, N. G. Jas. Cochran, Secy.		half unconscious, gazing pensively at		will remain true to me and I will be	the drawing-room, chatted pleasant-	his hatred of the northern yankees,	made the acquaintance of a gentle-
2	Nemaha City Lodge No. 40. I. O. O. F	Does a general Real Estate Business, Sells	the far off nothingness of the distant	bel, you al'us cum to Aunt Chloe wid		ly, sang for him, and even proposed		man who owned an extensive cattle
	C. Kimsey, R. Sec.	Lands on Commission, examines Titles, makes Deeds, Mortgages, and all instru-		yer troubles ebber since you was a lit-		a walk through the green meadow,
1	Knights of Pythias.	ments pertaining to the transfer of Real Es-	Finally as though influenced by the perfect loveliness without, she arises	tle 'Pick.' Well, I knows jes wat to	length he said : 'Miss Gray, is your	and down by the little brook, Mabel's	tation from Mabel and her husband to	quaintance inspired confidence, and years after, when the Texan gentle-
1 (B)	Wednesday evening in Masonic Hall, Visiting Knights cordially invited, E. Huddart, C.C.	fate. Has a	and throwing a light shawl over her		love for Captain Sanborn sufficient to	some half dozen officers rode over to	make their house his home.	man decided to sell his ranch he
	E. Lowman, K. of R. S.	Complete Abstract of Titles to all Real Estate in Nemaha County.	shoulders, and donning a light straw	I nebber told a libbin' sonl afore.	induce you to leave your father and	join in the coming festivities, but in	He now lives happily with them,	placed it in the hands of the man
	Masonio. Nempha Valley Ladge No. 4. 5. P. & A. W.		hat, she steps out into the garden, and	Dar's Ole Pete's cabin, nobody's libed		compliance with Mabel's request no	has come to look at the above narra-	who "never drank," and during the
40.14	Stated meetings "Saturday on or before the full of each moon " Lodge room open every Satur-	T. A. BATH	slowly follows a well worn path,	dar since de old nig died. In de fust	stand before you and say: 'Mabel, come with me.''	'bated soldiers' were present.		last month he has effected a sale to an
	day evening for between instruction and social Intercourse, J.C. McNaughton, W. M. B.F. Sou-	is now proprietor of the	through the meadow, where the grass is starting fresh and green, and the	of de war wen de darkies was runnin'		board was spread with the wedding	louder or scem to genjoy it more	English company of the ranch of 200,000 acres of land and several
- Carine	Brownville Chanter No. 4. R. A. MStated Brownville Chanter No. 4. R. A. MStated	A'I TH ITH 1 I	sweet-scented flowers are turning	to dis vere ter bide in. I spect you'll		feast before the nuptial knot was tied!		thousand head of cattle for an even
S. S. Marine	Davison, M. E. H. P. R. T. Rainey, Sec.	I'ITT WOOT WOT VOT	their little heads to catch the rays of	tink we ortent ter lowed it, but ye	loves me, but in his blind pride he			million dollars; out of this he gets a
ALL DESCRIPTION	Mr. CarmelCommandery No. 3, K. TStated meetings second Monday in each mouth. R. W. Formas, E. C.: A. W. Nickell, Rec.		the mild spring sun that has warmed	know de ole man an' me stuck by		to be, to the table, feeling that his	A Midnight Vigil.	commission that will be a snug for-
1	Rosen and Lilly Conclave. No. 63. K. R. C. B. & C Mosta at Masonle Hall on the fifth Mon-	onginoachianog	them into life. Past these she slowly walks until reaching a little brook,			hour of triumph was near. Soon the few guests present were discussing	From the Burlington Hawkeye,	tune in these hard times. The com- pany that bought will enter largely
· · · ·	dava, R. W. Furnas, M. P. Sov. E. T. Rainey,	and is prepared to accomodate the	where she sinks upon a mossy bank,			the merits of the repast. And after	The night is dark, the air is raw and	upon packing beef for foreign mar-
1.1.1	Adah Chapter Na. 2, -Order of the Eastern Star. Stated modings third Monday in each month.	public with	and, looking into the clear water, and	knew she could trust the negress, and	Mabel, I owe my life to you, I	a few glasses of his host's old wine	chill and damp, the storm is raging.	kets, slaughtering their meat on their
	the second se	GOOD, FRESH, SWEET	listening to the rippling wavelets,	perceiving that it was growing dark	would lay it down for you if it would		An old and eminently respectable cit- izen, out on North Hill, is sleeping	ranch from their own herds. The su-
	Societies. R. A. Hawley,	Contract and a second second second second	chasing each other over their stony	she left him entirely to Aunt Chloe's	secure your happiness. Listen to my plan which, though it may seem im-	an manaing.	the sleep of the just with the snore of	perintendence; of their business has
	President: John Rath, Vie Prest, S. A. Os arn,	MEAT.	bed, she seems lost in thought. A picture worthy an artist's pencil.	care and hurrled towards home. Aunt Chioe at once turned her at-		witnessed an event that took place	the wicked, and the private clocks, ou	been tendered to and accepted by the man who "never drank," and he goes
1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1. 1	Thomas Bath, Geo, Crow, J. W. Gavit.			tention to the young man. She re-	Mabel heard him through. 'You	within an hour's ride of the mansion,	their respective brackets and mantels	in a few days to his new field of la-
1	Library Association -R. M. Balley, Pres.: A.H. Gilmore, Sec.; W. H. Hoover.	Gentlemanly and accommodating clerks	shapely shoulders, rich brown eyes,	moved the bandage from the wound-		no noura navo boen nat ress juonane	throughout the city, for Burlington has no town clock, are tolling, as well	bor. This takes from Chicago one of
	I WHIN ME, COMA	will at all times be in attendance. Your patronage solicited. Remember the place	rich and beautiful in depth of mean-		I cannot allow you to risk so much		as they know how to toll it, the hour	her most esteemed and honored citi-
199	Prost J. R. Docker, Sec. and Treas	the old Pascoe shop, Main-st.,	ing, clear defined features and grace-	great care, then bidding him lie down	for my sake.' 'But consider. I gain my own free-		of 1:30 A. M.	zens, but it gives one to Texas who will always be found on the side of
	Metronalitan Cornet Rand, -D. T. Smith, Mu- sheal Director, E. Haddart, Treasurer and Basi-	Brownville, - Nebraska.	ful form, a picture any eye would ad- mire, any heart could love.	on her own bed, she set about prepar- ing food, of which he stood greatly in	dom if I am successful, for that I must	with the first approach of night they	A violent jangling at his door bell	order and good government
Y	ness Manator.		Over all the loveliness of this young	need.	run the risk of sooner or later ; as well	emerge, quickly mount their horses,	awakes the eminently respectable cit-	If somewhere we could touch this
1 .	BUSINESS CARDS.	At The	life hangs a cloud of sorrow. A cloud	After Harry had partaken of the		fall in line and at the word of the	izen. Shuddering, he crawls out of bed ;	simple narrative with a bit of senti-
	minimum	Here's second se	that envelopes all the land, and caus-	repast, Aunt Chloe gathered up some	'Well, be it as you say, I will not further oppose you, but exercise the	commander gallop swiftly away. Soon the open road is reached and	muttering, helgropes across the floor.	ment, and give but a word to woman,
	A. S. HOLLADAY, Physician, Surgeon, Obstetrician.	CROCERY AND PROVISION	es thousands of hearts, this same afternoon to be sad and sorrowful.	blankets, and lighting a candle, she lifted a trap door disclosing some rude	greatest caution, and my prayers will	they spur their animals to their best.	Swearing, under his breath, he falls	either as saint or sinner, we would then have the frame-work of a briland the second	Graduated in 1851. Locat d in Brownville 1855. Office, 41 Main street, Brownville, Neb.	U STORE OF	War with all the accompanying	steps leading into a cellar. Motion-	attend you.'	Nor do they halt till within a short	over a rocking chair.	liant romance that would need only
	Sand and an and a second s	T.L. Jones	horrors, has spread its pall-like wings	ing him to follow she descended the		distance of the Gray mansion. Pul-	At last he finds a match, lights a lamp, and descending the stairs opens	the pen of the artist word-painter to and the state	L. L. HULBURD.	is the place to get	over the land and the whole nation		Union lines. Aunt Chloe's 'ole man,' who had gained a pretty good idea of	ing real mey proceed more stowiji	the hall door, and admits a gust of	give it life and inspiration. But as it
	And Justice of the Peace. Office in Court House Hullding, Brownville, Neb.	Groceries,	The poles and tumplt of the strife	moved one of the boards with which the cellar was walled up, behind		a icw yards mouse mouse sicy main,	wind that blows out the lamp and a	is, we can only draw the moral "nev- er drink."-Alliance.
100	CTULL & THOMAS.	Provisions.	at "Chancelorsville" had scarcrly	which a nerrow passage appeared.		fence and cautiously approach the	torrent of rain that drenches him to	er unnkAutance.
	Office, aver Theodore Hill & Co.'s store, Brown	Confections,	ceased, and anxious hearts were long-	scarcely large enough to admit the	path known only to the negroes, that	house.	"What is wanted?" the respectable	Florida Wants a Republican News-
	ville, Neb.	Fine Cigars,	ing for news from loved ones known	body of a man standing upright.	finally led into a ravine, which he as-	All unconscious within, the wed-	citizen aeks.	paper.
1.00	T L SCHICK.		to have been engaged there. Mabel	Along this passage to the cellar un-		ding repast ended, the guests ap- proach the drawing-room to complete
1	ATTORNEY AT LAW. Office over J. L. Mc'iee & Bro'sstore, Brownville.	Canned Goods,	Gray had two brothers, under Stone- wall Jackson, fighting for the "Bon-	der Old Pete's cabin, Aunt Chioe led	him beyond the line of pickets.	the entertainment in witnessing the	property ?" promptly inquires the	A correspondent of the Inter Ocean writes as follows:
	Nebraska.	Fresh Butter,	ny Blue," but this afternoon they	a barrel and gave the blankets to	A little time for reflection sufficed	marriage ceremony.	caller.	Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 8-Know-
1. J. P. P.	S. A. OSBORN. ATTORNEY AT LAW.	Etc., Etc., Etc.	shared but a small portion of the	Harry.	to cool Judge Gray's passion to a rea-	Mabel withdrew to her room to don	"I am," wonderingly replice the eminently respectable citizen.	ing the interest you take in the wel-
1	Office, No. 81 Main street, Brownvile, Neb	We also keep all the best brands of	young maiden's thoughts.		soning point. He was no less deter-	the origin robe, scarcely able to con-	"Were you in bed when I rang?"	fare of the Republican party through- out the country, 1 have taken the lib-
	J. H. BROADY.	four, and everything usually kept in a first class grocery store.	of "gray" to the line of "blue" and	so jes make yourself as comfortable as	mined in the matter, but concluded to	trol her feelings, trembling 'twixt hope and fear. Her toilet at last com-		erty of writing you about the outlook
	OfficeoverState Bank, Brownville, Neb.		the personal safety of a gallent young	times ve kin go up stairs, but ve mus	threats. With this in view he sent	pleted, she descended to the drawing-	spectable.	in Florida. In the first place, to cor- rect the wrong impressions created
1 m	TTT T ROCERS	we have in con- nection with our FEED STORE	officer fighting for the stars and	be mitey keerful. If any body cums	for Mabel to come to him in the li-	room, the hour, aye the moment had	"That was right," cheerfully ex-	by the idea of the "solid South," that
	W. T. ROGERS.		stripes, was the one object of her	dis yere way, jes drop down in de	brary.	come, the clergyman requested the	claims the caller; "that is the place for a man of your age at this time	the entire Republican party of the South is disbanded. The Republican
	Will give deligent attention to any logal business	the second se		hole, take yer beddin' 'long an be suah ye put de bo'd back jes as ye	one weat down at once, and aston-	while and groote to take then places.	of night. I am surprised to see you
1	Willigive diligent attention to any legal business entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown ville, Neb.		White Visiting In the house	outer ye put de bou naon jes as ye		The called a production of the second s
	Willgive diligent attention to any logalbusiness entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brownville, Neb.	THITT	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac-	foun it; it's 'scaped de massa's eyes		the Colonel's arm.	and the second second press	hopeful of carrying the State for the
1 A.	Willigive diligent attention to any legal business entrasted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brownville, Neb.	TUTICS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend-	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de-	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that	ant dreams-"	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters
	Willigive diligent attention to any legal business entrasted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brownville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed	TUTICS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection,	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co-	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help should come	ant dreams-" All is silent after the crash that en-	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote
	Willigive diligent attention to any legal building, entrasted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brownville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER	DIIII	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc-	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy.	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re-	ant dreams-" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes
	Willgive diligent attention to any legal business entrasted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brownville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb.	T.U.T.T.ZS PILLS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came.	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow?	ant dreams-" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain
	Willigive diligent attention to any legal business entrasted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brownville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb. PAT. CLINE,	PILLS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound-	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed	ant dreams-" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press and
	Willgive diligent attention to any legal business entrasted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brownville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb.	PILLS INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real-	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the	ant dreams-" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be ailowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub-
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitbushness entrastedio his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown wille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wille, Neb. PAT. CLINE, PASHHONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER	PILLS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage.	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam-	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be ailowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre-
	Willgive diligent attention to any legitbushness entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brownville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb. PAT. CLINE, PASHIONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him-	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa-	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a bailoon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be ailowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitbushness entrastedio his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown wille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wille, Neb. DAT. CLINE, PAT. CLINE, PASHIONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER MU	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE.	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers!	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitlow diness entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown ville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb. PAT. CLINE, FASHIONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER OF COSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always guaranteed. Repairing neatly and promptly done. Shop, No. 37 Main street, Brown ville, Neb.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE.	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their' love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa-	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a bailoon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ?	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be ailowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and
	Will give diligent attention to any legitbushness entrasted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown wille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wille, Neb. PAT. CLINE, PAT. CLINE, PASHHONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER MU CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownwille, Neb.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTTS' PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE.	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape.	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud voices and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of votera the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi-
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitibusiness entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown wille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wille, Neb. PAT. CLINE, PAT. CLINE, PASHHONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER MU CUSTOM WORK unde to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownwille, Neb. B. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTTS' PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos-	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe.	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene.	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a bailoon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of votera the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitibusiness entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown ville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb. PAT. CLINE, PAT. CLINE, PASHIONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER WWW COSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always guaranteed. Repairing neatly and promitiy done. COSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. B. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTTS' PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS CURE DYSPEPSIA	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene.	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a bailoon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 In one county
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitimethors entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown ville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb. DAT. CLINE, FASHHONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER MU CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. B. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK STOCK BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA. Farmers, please call and get prices; I want	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN AND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE! THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTTS' PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS CURE DYSPEPSIA	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since a ba had heard from her likeldier here	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be-	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg-	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro-	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republic
	Will give diligent attention to any legitimethese entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown ville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb. DAT. CLINE, NEB. BOOT AND SHOE MAKER WWW COSTON WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. COSTON WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. B. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK AROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA. Farmers, please call and get prices; I want to handle your stock.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN AND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTT'S PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS CURE CONSTIPATION.	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue."	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations.	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing: it raises no wheat, no	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitimethors entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown ville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed First street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb. DAT. CLINE, FASHHONABLE BOOT AND SHOE MAKER MU CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. B. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK STOCK BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA. Farmers, please call and get prices; I want	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN AND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTT'S PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS CURE CONSTIPATION.	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by,	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion to thank her again and again for her kindness, and	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold no silver. It is	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitive diligent environmentation is care. Office in the Roy building, Brownwille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. DAT. CLINE, Main street, Brown Aller M. BOOT AND SHOE MAKER CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOKE STOCK BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA . Farmers, please call and get prices; I want to handle your stock.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTT'S PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS CURE CONSTIPATION. TUTT'S PILLS CURE CONSTIPATION. TUTT'S PILLS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion to thank her sgain and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be ailowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was
	Will give diligent attention to any legitimethese entrusted to his care. Office in the Roy building, Brown ville, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown ville, Neb. DAT. CLINE, NEB. BOOT AND SHOE MAKER WWW COSTON WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. COSTON WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. B. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK AROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA. Farmers, please call and get prices; I want to handle your stock.	PHYSICIANS, * CLERGYMEN AND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTT'S PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS CURE CONSTIPATION. TUTT'S PILLS CURE PILES.	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden-	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return.	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate.	ant dreams——" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a bailoon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be ailowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitive diligent environmentation is care. Office in the Roy building, Brownwille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. DAT. CLINE, Main street, Brown Aller M. BOOT AND SHOE MAKER CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOKE STOCK BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA . Farmers, please call and get prices; I want to handle your stock.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVER	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the toesin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap-	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion to thank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.'	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow ? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun-	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government Is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people.	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required.
	Willigive diligentiation to any legitly oblights brown wille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. PAT. CLINE , PAT. CLINE , PAT. CLINE , BOOT AND SHOE MAKER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. DOSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. DUSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. DUSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. B. N. BAILEY , SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK AROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA . Farmers, please call and get prices; I want to handle your stock. Office-31 Main street, Hoadley building.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVER	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion to thank her sgain and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to-	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government Is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaperone fearloss in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the fast Con- gressional campaign 1. In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required.
	Willigive diligent attention to any legitive diligent environmentation is care. Office in the Roy building, Brownwille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. DAT. CLINE, Main street, Brown Aller M. BOOT AND SHOE MAKER CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. CUSTOM WORK made to order, and fits always shop, No. 27 Main street, Brownville, Neb. M. BAILEY, SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOKE STOCK BROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA . Farmers, please call and get prices; I want to handle your stock.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVER	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook.	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.'	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help[should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a bailoon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaperone fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1. In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the coun- try to board a short time ago. He
	Willigive diligentiation to any legitly oblights brown wille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. PAT. CLINE , PAT. CLINE , PAT. CLINE , BOOT AND SHOE MAKER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. DOSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. DUSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. DUSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. B. N. BAILEY , SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK AROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA . Farmers, please call and get prices; I want to handle your stock. Office-31 Main street, Hoadley building.	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. THE GREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE.	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more then re-	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?'	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup-	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a fsw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign : In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the coun- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would
	Willigive diligentiation to any legitly oblights brown wille, Neb. J. W. GIBSON, BLACKSMITH AND HORSE SHOER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. PAT. CLINE , PAT. CLINE , PAT. CLINE , BOOT AND SHOE MAKER Work done to order and satisfaction guaranteed first street, between Main and Atlantic, Brown wills, Neb. DOSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. DUSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. DUSTON WORK made to order, and fits always staranteed. Brown wills, Neb. B. N. BAILEY , SHIPPER AND DEALER IN LIVE STOCK AROWNVILLE, NEBRASKA . Farmers, please call and get prices; I want to handle your stock. Office-31 Main street, Hoadley building.	PILIES INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE BREATEST MEDICAL TRIUMPH OF THE AGE. TUTT'S PILLS CURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS CURE CONSTIPATION TUTT'S PILLS CURE FEVER AND AGUE. TUTT'S PILLS CURE BILIOUS COLIC. TUTT'S PILLS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- ner me for the affect on the service in return.	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.'	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house?' 'It means, Judge	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says : "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing ; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government Is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- greesional campaign : In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMENTAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVER	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help[should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captain of the Union ar-	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government Is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cannot live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a fisw items, incidents of the fast Con- gressional campaign 1. In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessifies of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the coun- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	PHYSICIANS, * CLERGYMEN AND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVER	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the woments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling.	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion to thank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help[should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- cltement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captain of the Union ar-	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a bailoon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government Is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cannot live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a few items, incidents of the fast Con- gressional campaign 1. In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	PURE SICK HEADACHE TUTT'S PILLS CURE DYSPEPSIA TUTT'S PILLS CURE FEVER AND AGUE TUTT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVEN.	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the slarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel-	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've Do objections to his coming	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud voices and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to coutend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- clement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captsin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trambling form of Mabel Gray. 'they	ant dreams—" All is ellent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cannot live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be ailowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign : In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "Lam
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	PURCEASE OF A CONSTRUCTION OF	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and 'their' love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became im pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion to thank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered yon.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonei's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captain of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States A run a run of the Union ar-	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says : "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing ; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. Your cannot live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a fsw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1. In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other conties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	INDORSED BY INDORSED BY INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN TAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERES THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERES THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERES THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERES THE GREATEST MEDICAL THE GREATEST MEDICAL THE GREATEST MEDICAL THE GREATEST MEDICAL TUTT'S PILLS CURE DYSPEPSIA DURT'S PILLS CURE ONSTIPATION TUTT'S PILLS CURE FEVER AND AGUE TUTT'S PILLS CURE FEVER AND AGUE TUTT'S PILLS CURE BILLIOUS COLL TUTT'S PILLS CURE BILLIOUS COLL TUTT'S PILLS CURE BILLIOUS COLL TUTT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MANTY S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MONTY S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MANTY S PILLS CURE TORPID	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's hest blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became im pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonei's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captsin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your service.'	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says : "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing ; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that has to be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cannot live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You can-	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be ailowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign : In one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "Lam
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header> Indorsed By Indorsed By Physicians, Clergymen And The Afflicted everywhere. The Greatest medicate Cure onstination The Spills Cure torpic luves The Kinner of the system Cure torpic luves The Spills Cure torpic luves The Spills Cure torpic luves Cure torpic luves <!--</th--><th>had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the toesin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became im pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, bis face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam-</th><th>nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion to[thank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver</th><th>broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date ; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish</th><th>the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- clement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captain of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your service.' 'These are my men. Your guests are our otherwise and pricenes.</th><th>ant dreams</th><th>hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters -the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the fast Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went 4n swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my poek-</th></section-header>	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the toesin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became im pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, bis face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam-	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion to[thank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date ; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish	the Colonel's arm. Oh! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help_should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- clement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captain of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your service.' 'These are my men. Your guests are our otherwise and pricenes.	ant dreams	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters -the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the fast Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went 4n swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my poek-
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header> PILLES INDORSED BY INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN AND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE BREATEST MEDICAL THE BREATEST MEDICAL THE BREATEST MEDICAL TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILIOUS COLC TUTT'S PILLS CURE BILIOUS COLC TUTT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MARSSH MARSSH</section-header>	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became impos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam- ishing with hunger'	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injuno- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered yon.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn.! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver soldier cannot be found, search the	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date ; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish to intrude, and as to the hour, the	the Colonel's arm. Oh ! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow ? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captuin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your service.' 'These are my men. Your guests are our enemies and prisoners. I heard of what was about to take place	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cannot live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You can- not live upon that which you have to support."	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters -the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the fast Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went 4n swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my pock- etbook, and I want some money; and
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header> INDORSED BY INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN TAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE: THE GREATEST MEDICAL TUTT'S PILLS CURE DUSPEPSIA. THT'S PILLS CURE ONSTIPATION CURE PILLS CURE PILLS CURE PILLS CURE PILLOUS COLIC THT'S PILLS CURE BILLOUS COLIC THT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MIDT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MINDY'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MIDT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MIDT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MEMARY APPETITE MIDT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MIDT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MIDT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER MIDT'S PILLS</section-header>	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam- ishing with hunger' 'I will befriend you as far as I am able,' answered she ; 'but first tell me	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injuno- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver soldler cannot be found, search the army through.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date ; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from 'your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish to intrude, and as to the hour, the few that will be present will take	the Colonel's arm. Oh ! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow ? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- clement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captuin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your service.' 'These are my men. Your guests are our enemies and prisoners. I heard of what was about to take place this evening, and being myself in love	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says : "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing ; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cannot live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You can- not live upon that which you have to support." A teacher defined conscience "as	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper-one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went in swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my pock- etbook, and I want some money; and I shall bring the pup home."-Boa-
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<section-header> INDORSED BY INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN TAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN TAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN TAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE BREATEST MEDICAL THE BREATEST MEDICAL TUTT'S PILLS CURE DYSPEPSIA. TUTT'S PILLS CURE PINER CURE TORPID LIVER DY ADATS PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER CURE TORPID LIVER<th>had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became impos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam- ishing with hunger' 'I will befriend you as far as I am able,' answeredshe ; 'but first tell me who you are and how you came to be</th><th>nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injuno- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tofthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered yon.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver soldler cannot be found, search the army through.'</th><th>broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date ; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I'vé no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish to intrude, and as to the hour, the few that will be present will take their departure immediately after, and I shall not have to stand such a</th><th>the Colonel's arm. Oh ! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow ? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud voices and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- clement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captsin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your service.' 'These are my men. Your guests are our enemies and prisoners. I heard of what was about to take place this evening, and being myself in love with your daughter, who promised me long ago to one day he my wife. I</th><th>ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cound live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You can- not live upon that which you have to support." A teacher defined conscience "as something within you that tells you when you bave done wrong." "I bad</th><th>hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a few items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessifies of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the coun- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went in swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my pock- etbook, and I want some money; and I shall bring the pup home."—Boa- ton Globe.</th></section-header>	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became impos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam- ishing with hunger' 'I will befriend you as far as I am able,' answeredshe ; 'but first tell me who you are and how you came to be	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injuno- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tofthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered yon.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver soldler cannot be found, search the army through.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date ; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I'vé no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish to intrude, and as to the hour, the few that will be present will take their departure immediately after, and I shall not have to stand such a	the Colonel's arm. Oh ! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow ? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud voices and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- clement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captsin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your service.' 'These are my men. Your guests are our enemies and prisoners. I heard of what was about to take place this evening, and being myself in love with your daughter, who promised me long ago to one day he my wife. I	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cound live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You can- not live upon that which you have to support." A teacher defined conscience "as something within you that tells you when you bave done wrong." "I bad	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a few items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other counties the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessifies of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the coun- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went in swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my pock- etbook, and I want some money; and I shall bring the pup home."—Boa- ton Globe.
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN TAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES THE SILLOUS COLCI TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER TUTT'S PILLS TUTT'S PILLS	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became in pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam- ishing with hunger' 'I will befriend you as far as I am able,' answered she ; 'but first tell me who you are and how you came to be here in this condition.'	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injunc- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tojthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered yon.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver soldier cannot be found, search the army through.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- stred it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date ; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish to intrude, and as to the hour, the few that will be present will take their departure immediately after, and I shall not have to stand such a running fire of congratulations, and	the Colonel's arm. Oh ! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow ? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captuin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your guests are our énemies and prisoners. I heard of what was about to take place this evening, and being myself in love with your daughter, who promised in eong ago to one day be my wife, I	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved ? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says : "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing ; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a mucket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You cannot live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You can- not live upon that which you have to support." A teacher defined conscience "as something within you that tells you when you have done wrong." "I had it one a "ank a use a your, or the support."	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other connies the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went in swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my pock- etbook, and I want some money; and I shall bring the pup home."—Eos- ton Globe.
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	<text></text>	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became im pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam- ishing with hunger' 'I will befriend yon as far as I am able,' answered she; 'but first tell me who you are and how you came to be here in this condition.' 'My name is Harry Ashburn, I was	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injuno- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tofthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver soldier cannot be found, search the army through.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- sired it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied the 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to bis coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish to intrude, and as to the hour, the few that will be present will take their departure immediately after, and I shall not have to stand such a would-be criticisms, which are well	the Colonel's arm. Oh ! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help[should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow ? Her brain recled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers ! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- cltement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captsin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your service.' 'These are my men. Your guests are our enemies and prisoners. I heard of what was about to take place this evening, and being myself in love with your daughter, who promised me long ago to one day be my wife, I have come here to offer my objections to her union with Colonel DeLacy.	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You counct live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You can- not live upon that which you have to support." A teacher defined conscience "as something within you that tells you when you havedone wrong." "I had it once," spoke up a young tow-head of six summers, "but they had to send	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other connies the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went in swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my pock- etbook, and I want some money; and I shall bring the pup home."—Eos- ton Globe.
	<text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text></text>	INDORSED BY PHYSICIANS, & CLERGYMEN TAND THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE THE AFFLICTED EVERYWHERE TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES THE SILLOUS COLCI TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE FILES TUTT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER TUTT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER TUTT'S PILLS CURE TORPID LIVER THE AFFETTED THE A	had met Ernest Sanborn. Their ac- quaintance soon ripened into friend- ship, and that to a holier affection, which at last was acknowledged by both and'their love vows exchanged. But scarcely had they plighted their troth ere the tocsin of war sound- ed the alarm that called the nation's best blood to the field of carnage. Mabel was called home, and Ernest was the first to enroll his name with the country's defenders. A true and noble man, he proved a true and brave soldier. At first, Ernest found means for occasional communication with Mabel, but finally this became im pos- sible, and now a year had passed since she had heard from her "soldier boy in blue." Reclining on the mossy bank, un- conscious of the moments passing by, until the sun was fast sinking behind the western hills, Mabel was sudden- ly aroused from her reverie by the ap- pearance of a man from a clump of bushes on the opposite side of the brook. He was young, scarcely more than a boy, was dressed in Union-blue, his face was pale and haggard, and he carried his right arm in a sling. As Mabel started to her feet, he stepped across the brook, and kneel- ing before her he cried : 'Lady, in Heaven's name pity my condition. I am weak from loss of blood, and fam- ishing with hunger' 'I will befriend yon as far as I am able,' answered she; 'but first tell me who you are and how you came to be here in this condition.' 'My name is Harry Ashburn, I was	nuff times, I reckon ye will be safe nuff ef ye keep yer eyes peeled.' Harry promised to obey her injuno- tions, and she departed the way she came. Harry surveyed his new quarters with satisfaction, hardly able to real- ize his good fortune. He knew not how long he would be compelled to re- main there, but didn't trouble him- self. Here he could sleep, with a sense of security he had not felt since his escape. Mabel came over the next morning and was conducted by Aunt Chloe, through the secret alley. She found Harry revived in looks and spirits be- yond her expectations. He took occasion tofthank her again and again for her kindness, and hoped he might sometime be able to render her some service in return. Mabel assured him that the pleasure of assisting one in trouble was ample compensation for the act. 'And you may be able,' added she, 'to give me information that will more than re- pay me for the slight assistance ren- dered you.' 'I have a very dear friend in the Union army, from whom I have not heard for over a year. His name is Ernest Sanborn.' 'Ernest Sanborn! Why, he is my captain, and a better man or braver soldier cannot be found, search the army through.'	broached the subject uppermost in his mind, by replying that if he de- stred it she would consent to wed Co- lonel DeLacy. 'You are well aware of my feelings toward him,' she'said, 'but I have considered the matter and will not set my heart will against your wishes. I only request a bride's right in nam- ing the day, and that Colonel DeLa- cy troubles me with his presence as little as possible till then, furthermore that he bring 'none of the hated sol- diers with him.' 'Very well,' replied ther 'father, 'if in the first request you do not name too late a date ; Colonel DeLacy's reg- iment has been ordered south and of course it must be before he leaves.' 'Suppose the time be one week from to-night?' 'That will do. His command leaves next day.' 'Well, then, one week from to- night, at say 10 o'clock.' 'But why so late an hour?' 'It is my wish.' 'I am afraid the Colonel will demur at being banished from your presence so long.' 'I've no objections to his coming any time that day, but you know the time is so short and I've so much to do to prepare by that time. I'm sure he will be reasonable, and not wish to intrude, and as to the hour, the few that will be present will take their departure immediately after, and I shall not have to stand such a running fire of congratulations, and	the Colonel's arm. Oh ! the agony, the suspense of that moment. What if help'should come too late. Would she have the courage at the last instant to brave all and re- fuse to consummate the vow ? Her brain reeled, the room seemed whirling around. She clung to the Colonel's arm to keep up. Then she heard loud volces and steps in the hall, the door burst open, and the room was full of Union soldiers! She sank into a chair, but with an effort she railied her scattered senses enough to comprehend the scene. Colonel DeLacy grasped his sword, and the other officers followed his ex- ample, but seeing the numbers they had to contend with they realized the fruitlessness of resistance, and gave up their arms quietly and yielded to their fate. 'What means this intrusion ?' thun- dered Judge Gray, as soon as the ex- citement abated, and he recovered from his astonishment enough to speak. 'Why am I thus beseiged in my own house ?' 'It means, Judge Gray,' replied a young man in the uniform of captuin of the Union ar- my, and who was now supporting the trembling form of Mabel Gray, 'that I am Captain Ernest Sanborn, of the United States Army, at your guests are our énemies and prisoners. I heard of what was about to take place this evening, and being myself in love with your daughter, who promised in eong ago to one day be my wife, I	ant dreams—" All is silent after the crash that en- sues, save a mocking smile that dies away in the distance. The fragments of the lamp that are revealed on the sidewalk by the coming of the dawn indicates that either the lamp fell out of a balloon at the height of about twenty-nine miles, or was hurled at some object with great force. When will the mystery be solved? Colonel Robert Ingersoll has a pointed way of putting things. In a recent letter on the currency question he says: "We are told, however, that the Government can create money. This I deny. The Government pro- duces nothing; it raises no wheat, no corn, it digs no gold, no silver. It is not a producer, it is a consumer. The Government is a perpetual pauper that hasto be supported by the people. It is constantly passing the contribu- tion plate. The man who passes it I admit has a musket with him, but at the same time the Government is sup- ported by these contributions. You counct live upon the promise of your own Government any more than you could live upon the notes of your hired man—any more than you could live upon a bond issued by occupants of the county poor-house. You can- not live upon that which you have to support." A teacher defined conscience "as something within you that tells you when you havedone wrong." "I had it once," spoke up a young tow-head of six summers, "but they had to send	hopeful of carrying the State for the Republican candidate in 1880. We have the necessary number of voters —the important question being whether we can be allowed to vote, and, after voting, whether the votes cast can be fairly counted. To attain the desired end, we recognize the great importance of the press, and herein is our greatest need. We need a good, strong and active daily Repub- lican newspaper—one fearless in pre- senting the cause of the party, and bold enough to expose the tricks and frauds of the Democratic party in the State. There is not a single such pa- per in the State. As an evidence of the great necessi- ty of such a paper, I will give you a faw items, incidents of the last Con- gressional campaign 1 in one county of the State there were 2,000 Republi- can voters, who could not get their names put on the registration list, and consequently their votes were lost to the Republican candidate. In other connies the Republican party was more or less affected as the necessities of the Democratic party required. A small boy was sent to the conn- try to board a short time ago. He promised his mother that he would write a good long letter describing his trip and boarding-place, etc. A week went by and his poor mother was nearly distracted when she got the following letter from him : "I am here and I swapped my watch for a pup, and he is the boss pup; and I went in swimmin' fourteen times yesterday, and a feller stole my pock- etbook, and I want some money; and I shall bring the pup home."—Eos- ton Globe.