Not long since we heard a "professed" temperance man say that "the temperance work in Brownville was a failure." Well, it does look that way to a certain extent; for, before the temperance element gained control of our city affairs, whisky and beer were sold by the glass, mostly. But since, they are sold by the gallon, keg and barrel. I am told that whisky is imported from the Missouri side of the river by the barrel (syrup) and by the can (oysters). Well, considering the political status of that State wheat will reach a dollar and forty or I believe this to be true, and that beer a dollar and fifty cents before next is imported from Hamburg and Nehome consumption, let alone foreign.
