Several newspapers in this State have published Rowell's ready made editorial sent them some time ago, charging General Garfield with being the cause of the high price of print paper. We received that circular from Mr. Rowell, but declined to publish it, believing at the time it was a lie. On the outside of this issue of our paper we publish General Garfield's remarks regarding the matter, in the name of representatives. We call the attention of those Republican brethren who were trapped into publishing Rowell's circular, wondering what they are going to do about it—either own or kick.

J. C. McNaughton, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, hearing that his mother was dangerously ill, started for Pennsylvania Tuesday to see her.

Nace Cochran who has been west for a month or two in Kansas and on the Republican, has returned home. He does not speak favorably of the crops out that way.

H. C. Lett went down to St. Joe on Monday, and returned Wednesday evening accompanied by his daughter Nellie, who has been visiting at that place for some time past.

J. L. McGee writing from Grafton says, "The Belle will be launched on Tuesday, inspected on Wednesday and go to St. Louis Thursday, and will get started for Brownville by Friday this week."

Friend James Johnson of this city exhibits to us about two dozen heads of "May wheat" plucked from the field of Mr. George Lewis of Aspinwall precinct. The heads and grain are large, and Mr. Lewis will reap about 30 bushels to the acre.

Col. Tom. Majors and his brother Wilson, Peru, returned from the east Tuesday. They took in while absent the Chicago convention. We had the pleasure of meeting Col. Tom. in this city on Friday last, and he looked exceedingly well, and wore, as he said, a Garfield hat. Col. Tom. seems to have recovered entirely from any wounds he may have received in the battle for Grant, or any nausea he may have experienced over a light dish of crow, and he utters the common approval of the ticket, "I think the convention made a wise choice. Garfield is a splendid man, and he'll be elected overwhelmingly." He talked felicitously and enthusiastically, just as do all good Republicans. But the Col. on a "first love" reflection could not suppress the utterance, "but Grant could have carried that for four Southern States."

"Well, Colonel, you've been having some experience amongst the giants—who will the Democrats nominate?" we asked.

"Field—it will be Justice Field."

We deferentially mentioned Seymour's name.

"No—it will not be Seymour. It will be Field—mark the prediction. They like the state rights platform he laid down not long ago in dissenting opinions he delivered on cases testing the constitutionality of some of the reconstruction laws. The South wants Field; and with him they will expect to carry California and other Pacific States."

We admitted the reasoning of the Col., and he left for home.

Of the innumerable accounts of crimes which daily appear in the newspapers of this time we do not remember of reading of a murder more cowardly than those of the two old widow sisters, Mrs. Chidsey and Mrs. Avant, at Avon, near Hartford, Conn. Mrs. Chidsey had her head crushed with a tailor's goose while she lay asleep in her bed, in an upper room, her bible lying by her side. Her sister, Mrs. Avant was killed in the kitchen from a blow with an axe. There was no robbery committed that has been detected, no further outrages committed, and the object of the crime can only be surmised. The women were respectable christian ladies, and quite aged, Mrs. C. being 70 and her sister 73 years old. They lived together and owned the house in which they lived. They were not believed to have much money, but owned property worth perhaps $7,000. We make this synopsis from an account in the Hartford Times of 31st of May, the writer of which sees no other theory than that the two ladies were murdered by some party or parties expecting to become possessed of their property. Our attention has been called to this double murder from the fact that the two old ladies were cousins to our fellow-citizen, C. M. Hayden, of London.

Fish, wirecloth, barbed wire, slates, hoes, bird cages, picture frames, clothes wringers, queensware, whips, flower pots, rope, choice teas, etc., by Stevenson & Cross.

Don't suppose that there will be no where to go on the third. Besides the hot shooting match on the old fair grounds, close to there will be lots of amusements, where everybody can put in good time. The dancing platform and garden will be under the management of the Dutch. DICK

MARRIED.

WEBER-FURNAS—In this city at the residence of the bride's parents, June 16, 1880, by the Rev. Geo. L. Little, of Omaha, Rev. W. J. Weeber, of Osceola, Neb., and Miss Mollie Furnas, daughter of Ex-Gov. R. W. Furnas.

Responding to the kind invitation of Gov. Furnas and his wife to be present at the marriage of their daughter, we wended our way thitherward accordingly. At the door we were affably received and ushered into the spacious parlors already crowded with the anticipating and well wishing friends of the betrothed pair. No threatening cloud darkened a friend; no unkind innovation intruded to cast a gloom, but all was sunshine and glory. While the happy circle of friends await the wedding hour, we shall remove ourselves from the vicinity of promises and prophecies in order to give the readers of THE ADVERTISER a hastily drawn pen picture of the surroundings. The artistic hand of some connoisseur had tastefully manufactured out of vines and delicate flowers a large horse-shoe, symbolical of "good luck," and placed it over the west door. In the drawing-room the same hand had left the imprints of its presence. Upon either wall were nature's blooms and buds worked into handsome designs. Here a wreath, there a shield or harp, while curving garlands and delicately wrought floral chains relieved the intervening spaces. The crowning work of this artistic skill was a handsome marriage bed, suspended from the center of the ceiling, lovely in its fashion yet silent in all its beauty. From the four corners of the room to the bell, converged as many floral chains, each of marvelous beauty and elegance in its formation.

But the anticipated hour striking and the clock on the mantle piece arrives the hour of eleven, summons the assembly to the scene of ceremony. The Rev. Geo. Little takes his appointed position on the right, and the bride and groom with steady tread march in his front and assume their stand directly beneath the marriage bell. A short introduction, a few brief sentences, a prayer and the two are pronounced man and wife according to the rites and ceremonies of the Presbyterian church. Happy in their happiest hour the newly wedded pair now receive the flood of congratulations as it pours in from parents, schoolmates and friends.

The bride, true to her sensible characteristic, avoided the gaudy. She was handsomely attired in a rich brown grosgrain silk, demi-traine and devoid of superfluous ornaments. Her hair was arranged à la Paris and beautified with some elegant orange blossoms. She wore no jewelry. The groom received his share of the compliments, and merited them, too, for to us he never made a better appearance. Dressed in deep black—coat, a Prince Albert, and wearing the contrasting white tie, he was the ideal of a groom.

After the ceremony was consummated, the company was invited to the dining room where a sumptuous repast lay spread before us. Such a banquet would have attracted the taste of the royal braid and no wonder, for if a whispering bird is worthy of belief, the bride figured conspicuously in its preparation and arrangement. At the close of these festivities, those present busied themselves in regretting the parting and wishing a bon voyage.

At 2 o'clock Rev. and Mrs. Weeber took the train for Omaha, from whence they go to their future home, Osceola, where we commend them to the friendship and society of that little city. THE ADVERTISER extends its congratulations, and wishes the happy pair abundant success and pleasure in their new field of labor, and as they journey down the stream of time may their little bark never be endangered by the winds of adversity.

Looking through the card receiver, we observed the regrets of the following persons who were unable to be present:
