GLUCOSE MUST GO.

Amber Cane Sugar the Latest Idea—Its Manufacture Can be Made More Profitable Than Glucose.

A capitalist of Dubuque has offered to erect a sugar and syrup works in that place if the farmers contiguous to that city will assure him that they will grow and furnish sufficient amber cane for the manufacture of 400 gallons of syrup per day. The agricultural bureau at Washington has been investigating the merits of this new variety of sugar cane and speaks very favorably of it. Professor Hinrich, chemist of the State University, has analyzed some of the sugar made of this cane, and pronounces it as good as the best southern or West Indian.

At the recent convention of the Mississippi Valley cane growers association, the following points were established from the experience of the members in attendance:

Of the orange and early amber cane the opinion was: 1. That both varieties are rich in cane sugar. 2. That the early amber is the richest in cane, and the orange in grape sugar, and as grape binders cane sugar from crystallizing when in solution with it, in proportion to its amount, it follows: 3. That the sugar in the early amber syrup will more readily crystallize, other conditions being the same, than in the orange syrup. 4. That the orange yields a greater amount of juice per acre, and if all the sugar in both varieties could be crystallized, a greater amount of sugar also. 5. The safest way to secure the full benefit of either the early amber or the orange crop for sugar, is to begin cutting the cane when the seed is in the "hardening dough," and to grind them as soon as possible after cutting. 6. The cane sugar of the plants changes into grape sugar after the stocks are once cut off, slowly when under the shelter and rapidly when exposed.

GENERAL CONCLUSIONS.

First—From the results above given it appears that crystallized sugar can be obtained from the early amber and orange cane of as good quality as that of the ordinary brown sugars found in the market. And from trials made it appears that good white sugar can be made from raw sugar by refining.

Second—To insure the production and the best yield of cane sugar, the juice must be treated with lime. If, after skimming, the lime be neutralized with sulphuric acid or sulphate of alumina, the syrups obtained will be of light color, otherwise the excess of lime will cause the syrup to be dark.

Third—From the proximate analysis of the canes it appears that one acre of the orange produces 2,549 pounds of cane sugar. Of this amount we obtain 710 pounds in the form of good brown sugar, and 285 pounds were left in the 727 pounds of sugar drained from the brown sugar. Hence 62 per cent, of the total amount of sugar was lost during the process of manufacture. This shows that the method of manufacture in general use is very imperfect.

Fourth—The 710 pounds of sugar at 8c per pound would be worth $568. The molasses at 25c per gallon $18.75, or the product of an acre would bring $75.55, leaving out of the question the value of 30 bushels of seed, which some claim to be worth the cost of manufacture. The cost of manufacture would, of course, vary with the amount manufactured and the distance of the cane from the mill, etc., so that no definite figures can be given. There is no question but with more perfect machinery the above yield could be increased one-third.

Colonel Coleman offered the following resolution:

Resolved, By the Mississippi Valley Cane Growers' Association, that it will promote the best interest of our great enterprise for each state to establish in connection with the state agricultural college a first-class sugar mill for the purpose of educating experts for settling all doubtful questions by experiments.

—Arkwright & Curzon, of Brownville, will next week open up a good stock of clocks, watches, jewelry, etc., in the store of Walling Bros. & Jordan.

—C. C. Donald, Director of the Nemaha City school district, has finished taking the census of the school children. He reports that there are 160 children of school age in the district,—80 boys and 80 girls. According to the new school law, Nemaha City can now elect a school board of six members, if so disposed, and grade the schools.

—An Omaha merchant was fined $10 the other day for violating postal law. And this was the offense: He wrote a note on an account and mailed it in an unsealed one-cent envelope. The writing is what played the deuce, and got Furay after the writer. It made it first class matter.
