A Great Cause of Human Misery Is the Loss of

MANHOOD

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and radical cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhea, induced by self-abuse, involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Neuritis, and all Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacities, etc.—By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., author of the "Green Book," etc.
The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgical operations, bleedings, instruments, rings, or cordials; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain, and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself privately, cheaply, and radically.
This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post-paid, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps. We have also a sure cure for Tape Worms. Address

NEBRASKA ADVERTISER

The greenbackers of New York will hold their annual powwow August 25.

We should naturally think that this nation has had enough of the "black horse" affliction.

Coinage in the various mints for May, $12,228,250, of which $2,900,000 were silver dollars.

June 1st 4,500 immigrants arrived in New York, 287 of whom were Mormons on their way to Salt Lake.

Gen. Grant's baggage was recently robbed on the train after he left Little Rock, while on his way home from Mexico. He lost some badges and jewelry, and what other loss is not mentioned.

Simon Cameron very truly says of the Conkling-Garfield embroglio: "The public cannot in the present state of mind judge of the act dispassionately. The clamor is always with the man who controls the gifts."

Russian police have arranged to send agents to track Russian socialists in all the principal cities in Europe. Four will go to London, four to Paris, four to Geneva and two to the capitals of each of the other European states.

This exhibition of nerve and backbone will be gladly witnessed by the country.—St. Joe Herald.

Amen, say we, if this exhibition of nerve will redound to the glory of the Republican party, instead of its overthrow.

A petition 80 feet long. That's pretty good for a man to get in one locality in a State where the sentiment is nearly all (!) against him. Several such monster petitions have reached Albany in behalf of those deserted and lonesome gentlemen.

He will fight those who fight him.—St. Joe Herald.

That is the way it looks. Letters of introduction for the man who advised different to his ideas and refuse to consent to his nominations. His great strength is admitted. He may pull down the temple but will himself be crushed. That will be a sorry victory for a brilliant young man like Mr. Garfield. We have a sincere sorrow that he has not a better prospect ahead than simply fighting those who fight him.

Senator Ingalls, who was in college with the President and is one of his friends and defenders in his present trouble, recently spoke freely to a newspaper man about the New York squabble, and amongst other things said: "In my opinion the original nomination of Robertson was a mistake," and that afterward the President himself discovered that he had made a mistake, but fearing the criticism of lack of firmness he would not correct his mistake—we call it not firmness but stubbornness. THE ADVERTISER has blamed the President with precisely what his friend Ingalls admits; and we have been taught that a greater display of firmness cannot be made amongst men of sense than to correct a known mistake or recede from an error.

Bebout is the name of Guilmette's Kidney Pad agent. This Bebout is a swindler to our personal knowledge; and the proof from what we learn is a first water fraud. A tow string around the waist would serve equally as healing a purpose, and be less expensive. Bebout, the liar and swindler—pass him around.—Brownville Advertiser.

If the Bebout referred to above is A. J. Bebout, the Toledo, O., advertising agent, we know him to be a swindler, a fraud of the first order. We had a circular from him not long ago, but never knowing him to be engaged in any legitimate business of any kind—and we have known him for the past twelve years—of course we declined his proposition.—Humboldt Sentinel.

That's the fellow—A. J. Bebout. The Tecumseh Torchlight copies our notice of the scamp and adds the following:

Bebout is what he calls himself, and says his office is in Toledo Ohio; but we remember when a certain firm sent him a bill for advertising, he did not happen to B-a-bout.

A Curious Parallel.

The Inter Ocean relates a case strangely parallel to that which is now absorbing public attention. It marked the crowning point in the career of Henry Clay. In 1842 President Tyler, Secretary of State Webster, and Senator Clay occupied relations similar to those existing between Garfield, Blaine and Conkling, with the same rivalry, the same distrust, and similar dissensions, caused by the nomination of Clay's personal enemies to office. Stung by what he considered ingratitude, rather than submit to what he considered insult to himself and his devoted friends, he resigned his seat in the senate, and in his farewell speech resented the imputation that he had tried to act the part of "dictator" toward the administration. On reaching home he was received with great consideration by his friends. The whigs nominated him in 1844 for the presidency, and he was beaten by frauds in Louisiana and defection of anti-slavery whigs in New York. He was returned to the senate, and died in the public service, honored as a patriot, admired as a statesman, and beloved as a man.—Omaha Republican.

And there were journalistic puppies in those days that howled in the rear of Henry Clay just as the perpetuated breed are now howling at the great New Yorker.

NEW RAIL ROAD PROJECT.

Brownville, Neb., and Burlington Junction to be Connected by a Narrow Gauge Rail Road.

Rook Port Journal.

We are reliably informed that a project is on foot to build a rail road from Brownville, Nebraska, to Burlington Junction, Missouri. The enterprise is not only talked about but is in the hands of men who will push the matter to a successful result. The plan at first contemplated was to build a narrow gauge road, but the projectors are not yet advised but what they may build a standard gauge. The eastern terminus of the road has not yet been definitely settled and much will depend upon the action of the people along the line of road. The distance to Burlington Junction and Blanchard, Iowa, are about the same, the latter place having the advantage of an easy grade. The former route would be of the greatest benefit to the people of the eastern part of the county, and who have not as good advantages as that part of the county deserves.

"Conkling had already received ten important offices."—Exchange.

That is a sample of the style of argument constantly used by Conkling's traducers. They are determined to not do him justice or tell the truth about him. Now the truth is that Conkling had solicited the appointment of no one; and that while some of those named by the President may have been Conkling's friends, he was opposed to the whole batch of the presidential nominees because it displaced many efficient officers whose places, like the collectorship of New York, were not yet vacant, and no good reason could be given for ousting them. Conkling had not ten offices he had not one—had not asked one. It is wonderful how many who claim to have a plain case, resort to exaggeration and fiction to sustain it.

He wished to deal fairly by all and to unite the whole party.—St. Joe Herald.

And we have no doubt that had it not been for Blaine's influence he would have dealt fairly with Mr. Conkling, and avoided ruining his future prospects and jeopardizing the very life of the party he is obligated to nourish and protect.

A Monster Petition.

New York, June 1.—An Albany special says a monster petition in favor of the late senators arrived from Auburn, Woodin's district. It is eighty feet long and contains over two thousand signatures.

That was a severe rebuke to Woodin, who had made a savage speech against the Senators.

Before Robertson was appointed, however, Garfield had appointed seven New York Conkling men to important offices.—St. Joe Herald.

Very well, but that does not justify him in doing something he had expressly agreed not to do.

A Blizzard.

DOUGLAS, June 4th, 1881.

DEAR ADVERTISER:—Please indulge me in "airing" a few facts and ideas from this part of the county. Farming will pay this year notwithstanding the drawbacks of a late season, bad seed corn and cutworms. Grain and all sorts of vegetation are growing luxuriantly, and with the prospects of good crops, a railroad boom and plenty of money, the outlook ahead is firm and business like.

Business in Sheridan is good, but the town has come to a standstill, and property owners are anything but cheerful and happy. The prospective "boom" at the new town of Akron, only a mile and a half away, is what's the matter. Sheridan will be near enough, however, to maintain a nice appearance and a few small business houses; but that big, beautiful court house square—what good purpose can it be put to? A court house will never adorn it. It would be a nice place for a college building, or a nice course. Sheridan might be made an attractive suburban village, but it will take capital to make it such.

The recent district lodge of Good Templars was a very interesting affair; Mr. J. B. Finch the great temperance evangelist being in attendance rendered the occasion unusually so. An incident occurred during Mr. Finch's public address that was worthy of note by any newspaper men present; yet I have looked in vain for any mention of it in any of our home papers. Possibly there was no reporter there except the Post's, and that being the case we could not expect an editorial notice of the matter, which was this: During the lecture Al. Ewan, who is always on the alert to put in clingers, asked Mr. Finch to state what was Hon. Church Howe's character amongst leading temperance men, as a temperance legislator. Mr. Finch in answer to this question indorsed Mr. Howe in the most positive language, and said those who had the prohibition and temperance questions in hand had trusted Mr. Howe to attempt to carry through their wishes, and that they had never in any case or under any circumstances found him faltering or deviating from the line of work laid out; and that they would trust him again to any extent in championing the cause. Higher compliment for efficient work and fidelity of purpose could not well be paid a public servant than Finch bestowed upon Mr. Howe, in his peculiarly terse and earnest manner of making a point and an impression. Everybody in the big audience so far as could be observed, except, always, the Post men, enjoyed this unequivocal vindication of their only true and brave representative, by the leader of leaders of prohibition, and highest official in the order of Good Templars. It was, too, a most scathing rebuke to the editors of the Post, made as it was amongst the supporters of that paper at its home, and whilst there was yet fresh in the memories of the people the substance of an article that had most falsely and ungenerously attacked Mr. Howe's record as a temperance legislator. It was then due Mr. Howe that he should have the benefit of Mr. Finch's remarks in the columns of that paper, it would have been mainly for the Post editors to have accorded such to him. But they did not. They durst not. The owner of those editors will not allow them to do a manly act, tell the truth or accord justice toward Mr. Howe. One of the editors of the Post recently confessed to a prominent temperance man that he knew he had not treated Mr. Howe fairly, but that he could not do otherwise—that his "hands were tied." And, by the way, while Mr. Finch was talking about the Nemaha legislators, he made some allusions that opened the eyes of the people to the perfidy of some of the other Nemaha statesmen who "carry water on both shoulders."

Regarding the deplorable quarrel between the president and Roscoe Conkling, THE ADVERTISER seems well grounded in its position that Garfield is to blame for forcing a fight in a state and with a man that imperils the future success of the national Republican party; but I think the less said about it the easier mended. The people always take an interest in the positions of the old ADVERTISER, hence the necessity of building upon the bed rock of truth, logic and reason.

BLIZZARD.

Telegrams from Washington state that President Garfield will neither listen to nor read criticisms upon his official course. One of his secretaries reads all the papers, cuts out flattering articles, and lays them upon the President's table. In this way he manages to avoid self-reproach, anxiety, and remorse. It may be a good method to secure peace of mind, but a poor one to obtain a true idea of what the people are thinking.—Inter-Ocean.
