Mr. Ward Talks Good Sense.

LAFAYETTE, June 12, 1881. Mr. Editor :- THE ADVERTISER of last week was read with unusual interest by its Lafayette readers; and because every sentence in its columns was fairly teeming with fearless sentiments, expressed in a frank and manly manner, yet free from the arroyance so characteristic of some of the other papers of the county. But while I admire the honest expression of THE AD-VERTISER's sentiments, I do not wish to be understood that I think as it does concerning the Garfield-Conkling issue, now of such absorbing interest to the Nation. My sympathies are entirely with the administration, believing it to be in the right. But my idea is hereevery newspaper man should have sufficient nerve to free himself from all prejudice, tear off the harness girdling him by Iscariot politicians, and come out squarely on every issue of local and National interest, thus proving himself true blue, and worthy the confidence of the reading public. No man can be a true editor and sit on the fence. His work must be comprehensible, clearly defined, sincere, bear the stamp of conviction, and yet deferential to the opinions of his readers and contemporaries. Without these essential elements clearly traced and discoursed throughout the pen pictures of the editor, his work is a failure, and such an one had better retire from the field, for he will soon lose the respect of his patrons and the world at large. And here, permit me to say, no editor who respects his manhood and dignity will tie himself to the strings of any politician unless the principles of the one he attemps to carry accord with his conceptions of right and party principle. It is pleas. ant to know that Nemaha has one jourial that stands unfettered and fearless in every position it takes, for if time should prove it wrong, an explanation or acknowledgment will set it right, and in consequence it will gain rather than lose in prestige. But, on the other hand, while other brains than the editors control the columns of a paper there is no escape, and as a result, it is impossible for it to avoid public con-

Noticeable among many of the good things found in THE ADVERTISER, of and cheapest last week's issue, was the article from the booby of patent Wright notoriety. To be plain. Mr. Finch's vindication of Church Howe stamps them as willful and malicious ---, for it has been sitive knowledge, Howe defeated the prohibition bill and came very nearly defeating the measures for high license. And more, the Post has fathered the sayings of those old political blisters and misrepresentations. Now, if the Post was governed by true journalistic spirit, or even desired to be just between man and man, its issue immediately following John B. Finch's temperance lecture in Sheridan, would have contained his impartial statement of Howe's work in the temperance cause during the session of our legislature last winter. The friends of Church Howe in this precinct are gratified to learn of his loyalty to principle through ducers will not be forgotten, especially that little knock-kneed crow eater of the Post. But I don't wish to run my pen into him any further at my present writing, for I don't wish to be "arrested for cruelty to animals;" and besides, he is most too diminutive and really can't stand more than a prod. "Shake," Bro. "Blizzard," for in you I see a strong writer, a clever correspondent, and one who stands on principle and moral worth, because he believes in the right More Anon,

MR. WARD.
