NEBRASKA ADVERTISER

The growing wheat of Dakota promises at present to yield well.

Mr. Jacobs, for whom the Democrats have been voting at Albany, has declined to have his name further used as a candidate for Senator; and Clarkson N. Potter has been chosen to fill the vacuum.

Senator Conkling's sudden perception of the distressful situation of the people under the grasp of corporate monopoly comes most inopportune for that gentleman.—C. C. Courier.

His perception may have been sudden but it is not recent. Mr. Conkling has always stood for the people as against oppressions of monopolies.

Secretary Windom remarked while in Chicago that no man regretted more deeply than President Garfield the Republican controversy in New York.—Exchange.

Yes—and such talk is twaddle of a very disgusting sort, in view of the fact that the president forced the controversy, and is supported by minions with bribe money in their pockets to defeat the stalwarts.

Recently the Lincoln Globe charged Mr. Cropsey with having forged the names of Judge Weaver, Hon. Jim. Laird, and county treasurer Helmer, to a telegram regarding the Lincoln postoffice. And now come the honorable gentlemen above named, each and everyone of them and over their own names show that the globe simply indulged its perverse disposition to slander its betters.

On the 25th of May, F. B. Thurber, the leader of the reform transportation movement in New York, and the leader of the anti-monopolists of the United States, wrote as follows to Gen. Sharpe, speaker of the Assembly in New York:

Amid all the corruption of public life, Senator Conkling has remained poor but pure. No subsidy of Credit Mobilier stigmas attached to him. He could have made fortunes by "standing in" with the monopolists as Mr. Blaine and others have done, but he has declared his independence and opposed their candidates for supreme court and other offices. They now seek to crush him. Will the Republicans of this state permit this?

The convention for the improvement and utilization of the Missouri river, which met at Council Bluffs on the 21 inst., was represented by a large number of gentlemen of business and brains from various localities in Nebraska, Kansas, Dakota, Missouri and Iowa. Senator Saunders was present, and opened the speech making by an exceedingly pertinent address. The organization of a company or association was effected by the election of Hon. L. Van Horn, of Kansas City, president; Thos. Gibson, of Omaha, and E. H. O'dell, Council Bluffs, secretaries. From the sort of men this convention was composed of, we would think it the beginning of a great project that will lead to immense benefits to the people of the upper Missouri valley.

There are those who cry that it is "the country against one man" and that Senator Conkling. It would be well for the republican party if it was so, but it is not. Roscoe Conkling has staunch friends in the republican party and ones who will follow his fortunes by tens of thousands not only in the Empire State but in the whole country. He has been a leader too long to be ignored by a breath, and whether re-elected or not, he will be a power in American politics as he has been for many years.—Omaha Telegraph.

Conkling now has more and warmer friends than he ever had before. Thousands formerly not particularly friendly toward him and only admirers of his great ability and pure political life, have been driven to his side by the ungenerous and vindictive manner in which he has been treated by the man whom he so greatly assisted to power. And while persecution has turned men to him it has cemented and crystallized the positive friendship of others. So the Telegram truly says that he is yet destined to be a power in politics whether re-elected or not.

Since our predictions regarding the Advertiser's probable intentions were put in type, we are handed a subscription paper which is being circulated by Al Ewan, soliciting subscriptions and patronage for Fairbrother & Co., from the very people against whom he has ever been kicking, the paper to be printed in the new town of Calvert. On what grounds they presume to solicit all this, the people already know, and we are pleased to note that a majority, if not all of our reliable business men stand firm, and in a decided voice say, "we will not support a man who has been forever and eternally fighting us and our interests."—Post.

The transient adventurers who now run the above named paper, would be passable bulldozers in South Carolina, were they not too cowardly to indulge their inherent instincts. Like a couple of shitepokes, having lit down in that locality they seem inclined to monopolize the whole country; thus demonstrating their poverty of common sense by opposing the enterprises of people who have been identified with the county and its interests for a quarter of a century. We are really glad that they are just what they seem to be—impotent to accomplish anything more remarkable than to exhibit their own ponderous ears, for which they have a peculiar gift. Our boys, who are the innocent cause of so much worrying on the part of the Post, inform us that their project of starting a paper at Calvert has met with the most hearty approval by gentlemen who propose to start in business there, and nowhere have they ever met with better encouragement than right in the town of Sheridan amongst the business men. So much for the senseless closing lie of the above Post extract. And to further show the popularity of the proposed "CALVERT COURIER," the proprietors are now having a building erected on a lot of their own as an office out of means already procured and subscribed. It might be beneficial to the Post boobies to go down to the town branch and soak their heads.

"While I am opposed to the machine, I am heartily in favor of party organization, for this is essential.—Robertson.

What is organization but "the machine" or what the machine but organization? And the object of organization, or "the machine" in politics, is to arrive at the will of the majority. Robertson is notorious for bolting the decrees of organization. However, he now assuming that he is to be the boss in New York politics, believes in organization. Within the last four years in the organization which is said to have been lashed by Roscoe Conkling the party has been successful—the object of organization has been accomplished. We will see how it will be under the new boss. We will see applied Abraham Lincoln's idea—of trading horses while crossing a river.

A late copy of the Quincy Whig says: The Western extension of the Q.M. & P. road is being pushed forward as vigorously as possible, under the direction of Mr. Amos Green. Three thousand tons of rails are now being received to be placed on the road bed between Milan and Trenton, to which point trains will be running by the 1st of July. Some of the iron has already been forwarded over the road. All bridges on the road have been renewed since the Wabash took hold of it, a matter of importance for the general safety of the line.

It appears by Davenport's confession that he did tell Senator Strahm he would be expected to vote against Conkling and Platt if appointed United States Marshal, but it was entirely without the President's knowledge or authority, as is clearly shown. President Garfield has suffered much by the conduct of indiscreet friends, and can only be blamed for choosing such people as his advisers.—Inter Ocean.

A lad aged 14 at Geneva, Neb., by the name of Gable, committed suicide one day last week by taking strychnine. The neighbors say his father was very cruel to him, and he killed himself to avoid a whipping the old man had promised to give him that evening.

J. Comstock, of York county, Neb., has been sentenced to the penitentiary for life, for incest committed upon his eleven-year-old daughter.

A son 8 years old of Mr. Carter, of Seward, Neb., was recently drowned in the Blue river.

The Talbot boys, who were to have been hanged at Marysville, Mo., last Friday for murdering their father, were granted a reprieve by the Governor until July 22.

Johnny Davenport, of New York, has also been caught in offering a bribe. He offered the Marshalship to Senator Strahm if he would vote against Conkling. Davenport said he was "in with Garfield" and could fix it all right. But Strahm declined the office and the treachery.

Inter Ocean: Schurz advises ex-Senator Conkling not to attempt starting a new party. No one better than Schurz knows the difficulties in such an undertaking. Conkling never has had any such experience or intention. The whole thing has originated with the high-kickers, of which Schurz is prize mule.

State Journal: The Depew lobbyists cashed $24,000 in checks about the time Bradley claims to have received the $2,000 from Sessions, and invariably drew the money in $100 and $1,000 bills. These checks were drawn by Barber and Edwards, outside lobbyists and Senators Sessions, Woodin and Wagner. The coincidence is very singular. There was apparently a very extraordinary demand for money to be carried in the "pants' pocket," about that time.

At Grand Haven, Michigan, 12 masked citizens went to the county jail while the sheriff was absent with avowed purpose of lynching a prisoner. They succeeded in getting the jail door open and they all crowded in. Then the jailer's wife, who did not take kindly to the intrusion, took in the situation and closed the door and held all the lynchers as prisoners. They were finally let out, however, upon agreeing to leave and attend to their own business.

Judge Crozier of Kansas Put to Shame.

TOPEKA, Kas., June 21.—The druggists' cases, involving the construction of a portion of the recent temperance law, were decided by the supreme court to-day. The court held that the grant of power to the probate judge to issue permits was valid; that the act was not unconstitutional, although it restricted to one class, namely, the druggists, the right to secure a permit and sell intoxicating liquors. It also held that the law did not apply to cologne, bay rum and essence of lemon, tincture of gentian, or other articles of established name and character found in the United States dispensatory or other like standard authorities and customary used for medicinal, toilet and culinary purposes; and further, as to cordials, bitters and other compounds of the ordinary intoxicating liquors, that whether they were within or without the statute was a question of fact, to be settled in each particular case by a jury, the test being that of the intoxicating liquor remaining as a destructive force in the compound, although the other ingredients might be of a medium nature.

A few weeks ago some saloon keepers, or would be saloon keepers, of Kansas, had a druggist arrested for alleged violation of the prohibition law in selling cologne, bay rum and essence of lemon. The case was taken before a judge of elastic conscience named Crozier, who sustained the charges, maintaining that cologne, bay rum and essence of lemon, as they are compounded with alcohol, are intoxicating liquors. And from this the Judge argued and based an opinion that the law interfered with commerce, and was therefore unconstitutional. Any fool might have known that the law was not intended to prohibit the sale of cologne etc., as no one would think of using it as a beverage; yet the whiskyites knew their Judge and got the decision they wanted. But the temperance people appealed to the supreme court. It is to be hoped for the credit of Kansas that she has but one Crozier amongst her Judges; for such a transaction was not only a disgrace to the Judge but also to the State for having such a Judge.

"It is announced that it is the intention of Grant and Conkling and their friends to drive Blaine from the Cabinet by threatening to disturb the Republican supremacy of the Senate.—Beatrice Express.

Well, who is it that is announcing the miserable lie? Not Conkling nor his friends. It is the administration faction, who, in the absence of anything true to say against Conkling, industriously coin and publish the vilest lies and slanders about him. Then the little dogs howl in echo, "It is announced" so and so, but are utterly unable to give any authority worthy of respect. A newspaper that has to resort to that style of warfare is getting pretty low down.
