District Court Proceedings.

The criminal docket, as usual, was not extensive. The case of the State against Sylvanus W. Tanner, charged with adultery with May E. Cottrell, was of the greatest interest, and drew a big crowd. There was considerable trouble in procuring a jury in this case, as nearly everybody had heard of it and formed some kind of an opinion regarding the guilt or innocence of the accused. In the afternoon of Friday however, the jury was complete, and taking testimony began. Mrs. Nancy C. Tanner, first and lawful wife of defendant, and her brother substantiated the fact of Tanner's former marriage with the said Nancy C. A divorce paper was then produced by Tanner's lawyers bearing prima facie evidence that defendant had procured a legal divorce from his wife, Nancy C., at Brigham City, Box Elder county, Utah Territory. This was read in evidence and also a marriage certificate, of subsequent date to the divorce, showing a legal marriage of Mary E. Cottrell and the defendant, at Oregon, Missouri, by a Methodist minister. So far the situation, to the unlearned in the intricacies of the law, looked decidedly favorable for defendant. But not so. The prosecutor bringing up the reserve caused a dark and portentous cloud to loom up and overshadow the defendant's gleam of hope. The prosecutor decided that Tanner was in Utah when his divorce was granted, or that he was ever there, before or since. Could this be substantiated by testimony, he established by citing parallel court decisions on jurisdiction, that if Utah had not jurisdiction of Tanner, therefore his alleged divorce was null and void. A witness was then produced to prove that Tanner had admitted that he was not in Utah when he got his divorce. A question of that import was asked, objected to, and argued elaborately by counsel. The court overruled the objection. At this stage of the proceeding it was nearly dark and the court took a recess until after supper. After supper the court reassembled—the officers, the jury, the lawyers, the crowd—all were there except Tanner. Tanner didn't assemble. A suspicion flashed over the court and crowd that Tanner had "lit out." The court waited and looked perplexed. The crowd was sorely disappointed and buzzed a confused discussion of the situation. The defendant's lawyers—Broadly and Osborn—didn't seem entirely overwhelmed on viewing the vacant chair beside them, but serenely smiled an acquiescing smile at the turn affairs had taken. Broadly demanded that the trial proceed. The court said "not much, that's too thin;" or words to that effect. The court did not propose to try Tanner while Tanner was out in the brush. Call Tanner, said the court to the sheriff, and tell him to come into court or his recognizance will be forfeited. The sheriff called, but Tanner didn't come, all the same. Then his surety, Wm. McKinney, was called, and next day came and paid the forfeiture—$200—money which Tanner had deposited to secure him. And so Nemaha county is even with Tanner, or as nearly so, in a financial point, as it ever will be. This is the end of the Tanner case at present. The witnesses, Anna F. and Mary E. Cottrell, and Nancy C. Tanner, were each required to give personal recognizance in $100 for their appearance as witnesses at next term of court. Tanner's bond if he is captured or comes back, was fixed by the court at $500.

In the case of James Williamson, a youth who has been in jail here all summer for forging a five dollar note on J. W. Bennett, a nolle pros. was entered by the district attorney. It was a case of mercy, compassion and promise to be a good boy and an honest man forever in the future. The judge gave the young man a fatherly lecture before setting him at liberty, that he will surely heed if he cares to keep clear of prisons and shackles in the future.

In the case of the State vs Sam. Bennett, for retailing liquors without a license, defendant gave bond in $200 for his appearance at next term. Alex. Snow surety.

J. W. Gayit was brought into court on a writ of attachment, and fined $8.25 for disobeying command of subpoena, as a witness in the Tanner case.

LITTLE GIANT POST,

Patented Oct. 15, 1872, by A. B. DRAKE, Clay Center, Kas.

Letter A represents a post, which has the iron rod B inserted at its foot, and thence extending perpendicularly downward to a sufficient length to secure a hold in the ground, where the said rod is bent at a right angle and is extended thence horizontally as far as necessary to secure the required firmness, and then it is bent upward at an acute angle to connect with the upper portion of the post A, and forms a triangular base there-with, as shown in the cut. If deemed necessary, a stone or block of wood, or other substance, may be placed upon the horizontal portion of the rod, or the excavation may be partly filled with cement. The posts or setting will be found to stand with unusual firmness and permanence.
