Guiteau Arraigned.

Guiteau was taken into court, by two or three marshals, on the 14th. The indictment, charging him with the murder of James A. Garfield, was read. He plead not guilty, and asked the privilege to make a statement, but was informed by the court that then was not the proper time. The assassin was brought in handcuffed. There was no especial display of numerous police. He looked dejected and miserable, his cloths in disorder and seedy. The district attorney demanded immediate trial. Scovill, for the assassin, offered objections by remarks and affidavits, showing the defense was not ready. He said he himself was not a criminal lawyer, and recounted his efforts and failures in trying to procure the help of competent legal aid. He had many witnesses to subpense, without whose testimony the defendant could not have justice, but the defendant was utterly impecunins -no money, no property, with which to pay for a thorough defense. Mr. Scovill said he expected to establish defend-A new oyster bed of 100 acres has reant's insanity by his own conduct, and cently been discovered off Long Island his tendency to hereditary insanity by establishing, first, that one D. Whereas I was Blind I now See.

I take this method of publicly acknowledging my gratitude to Mrs. Dr. Monahan for the great good she has done me; and with a hope of directing and a good many more than he ever of chronic "sore eyes" where they may receive a like benefit. I suffered for two years with granulated sore eyes, during which time I was so nearly blind that I could not see to read, and Blaine told a friend recently that he it was with difficulty that I could even made up his mind on the 23d of last walk about. Various doctors treated my eyes, but with no beneficial results. On the 15th of last July Mrs Monahan took the case, and to day my eyes are well, and I can see to read as well as most elderly gentlemen can, and to attend to my affairs as well as ever I could. My eyes are free from redness and pain and I verily believe they are permanently cured. I say these things for the good female doctor through a grateful feeling, because they are true, Brownville, Oct. 20th.
