MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of spermatorrhoea or seminal weakness, involving the seminal, nervous, muscular, mental and physical faculties. Impediments to marriage, etc.; also, GONORRHOEA, EPILEPSY and FEARS, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, etc.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure of once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

Soujourner Truth is the name of an old colored woman in Chicago who has sojourned in this world 104 years. She is a good woman, and sensible, but without education. She was introduced on the platform in a temperance meeting a few days ago, and spoke half an hour, principally against the use of tobacco.

A Chicago telegram says: The C. B. & Q. has been pushing rapidly forward its extension to Denver, and within two weeks has graded twenty-five miles from Indianola, Kansas. It has now about 100 miles under grade. The distance from Indianola to Denver is only 240 miles, which will be completed in a few months and the road will begin to run trains and take business as soon as the last rails are laid.

Senator McDonald will not make any friends, nor will he increase the respect in which he is held by the people, by opposing the confirmation of Colonel Dudley, as Commissioner of Pensions. By his energy and vigilance Colonel Dudley prevented the Democrats from capturing the state of Indiana by fraud last year, and, instead of opposing him, Senator McDonald should regret that his party made Colonel Dudley's action necessary.—Inter Ocean.

LATER—Col. Dudley has been confirmed.

Senator and Mrs. Van Wyck have had the misfortune recently to lose by death their two little girls, the elder aged eight years the other eighteen months. Their deaths occurred within a few hours of each other. They died of diphtheria. About a year ago they lost a child from the same disease, and are now childless. The parents were in Washington and their two little ones in Nebraska City, and when notified of the sickness of their children hastened home in time to see them die.

Hon. C. H. Van Wyck, formerly a member of Congress from New York, and now representing Nebraska in the United States senate, delivered an address at the Illinois state fair, in which he took the ground that civil service reform should go upon the theory of giving preference to a candidate's business qualifications instead of making proficiency in history, geography and grammar the standard. A man may have no knowledge of the year that Lafayette last visited the United States, or the location of Cape Romania, or of the different parts of speech, and yet be better qualified for the duties of a public servant than his competitor who is familiar with these things.—Exchange.

Senator Van Wyck is correct, because his position is good common sense. A practical business education furnishes the best qualifications for office business.

In the North American Review, R. G. Ingersoll and Judge Jere. Black have been discussing Bible matters.

In one of Black's articles he assuming that the Bible teaches and tolerates human slavery, takes occasion to assault old abolitionism and the cause for the Union that wiped away slavery in the United States. Ingersoll in answer, comes to the rescue in the following strong manner, and as no other living man can:

Slavery held both branches of congress, filled the chair of the executive, sat upon the supreme bench, had in its hands all rewards, all offices; knelt in the pew, occupied the pulpit, stole human beings in the name of God, robbed the trundle bed for the love of Christ; melted mobs, led ignorance, ruled colleges, sat in the chairs of professors, dominated the public press, closed the lips of free speech, and polluted with its leprous hand every source and spring of power. The abolitionists attacked this monster. They were the bravest, grandest men of their country and of their century. Denounced by thieves, hated by hypocrites, abhorred by the seekers of office—these men, of whom the world was not worthy in spite of all opposition, in spite of poverty and want, conquered innumerable obstacles, never flinching for one moment, never dismayed—accepting defeat with a smile born of infinite hope—knowing that they were right, insisted and persisted until every chain was broken, until slave-pens became school-houses, and the millions of slaves became free men, women and children. They did not measure with "the golden metewand of God," but with "the elastic cord of human feeling." They were men the latches of whose shoes no believer in human slavery was ever worthy to unloose. And yet we are told by the modern defender of the slavery of Jehovah, that they were not even respectable, and this statement is justified because the writer is assured "that the infallible God proceeded upon good grounds when he authorized slavery in Judea."

Not satisfied with having slavery in this world, Mr. Black assures us that it will last through all eternity and that forever and forever inferiors must be subordinate to superiors. Who is the superior man? According to Mr. Black he is superior, who lives upon the unpaid labor of the inferior. With me the superior man is the one who uses his superiority in bettering the condition of the inferior. The superior man is strength for the weak, eyes for the blind, brains for the simple, he is the one who helps carry the burden that nature has put upon the inferior. Any man who helps another to gain and retain his liberty is superior to any infallible God who authorized slavery in Judea. For my part, I would rather be the slave than the master. It is better to be robbed than to be a robber. I would rather be stolen from than to be a thief.

According to Mr. Black there will be slavery in heaven, and fast by the throne of God, will be the auction block and the streets of the New Jerusalem will be adorned by the whipping-post while the music of the harp will be supplemented by the driver's whip. If some good republican would catch Mr. Black, incorporate him into his family, tame him, teach him to think, and give him a knowledge of the true principles of human liberty and government, he would confer upon him a most beneficent boon."
