Annie Moore, Chicago, died last week of alcoholism.

Vienna papers speak of "the flowers in the open air" and "the singing of birds of spring."

Rev. C. W. Hunes, pastor of the Fifth Baptist Church, San Francisco, succeeded by cutting his throat.

Arzate, a robber chief, with thirty of his band, were captured near Chihuahua, Mexico, and promptly executed.

Philip Egley, of Venango, Kansas, was murdered and robbed, and his house was burned, on the night of the 28th ult.

The crime records of the holidays are terrible indeed, and generally chargeable to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors.

The proprietors of the hotel at Bel-lows Falls, Vt., have been sued for $20,000, for selling liquor to one Good, who died of alcoholism.

Mrs. Arthur's portrait that hangs in the President's room at the White House is, by his orders, wreathed in fresh flowers every morning.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Earp, at Tombstone, Arizona, was fired on in the dark, and fatally wounded, by unknown parties, 29th ult., supposed to be cowboys with whom he recently had trouble.

The sons of Senators Bayard and Mahone, with four other young Washington bloods, got into a row with a policeman and were locked up until a friend came and bailed out the party, who were all more or less intoxicated.

Mrs. M. T. Cappege, N. O., was killed by a pistol with which her 4-year-old child was playing. The mother had been giving the child instructions how to aim, and sat down to play with him, when he aimed and fired. The ball entered the woman's brain. No one knew the pistol was loaded.

Koesters, who killed Hammer in a saloon row in Omaha Christmas morning, has been released from jail on a bond of $10,000. This seems irregular from the fact that the coroner's jury found the killing to be wilful and malicious. But then irregularities, and curious constructions of law are very common for criminals who have rich relations.

Attorney General Brewster evidently means business. In a recent communication to Col. Bliss, engaged in prosecuting the star route thieves, he said, after approving the past course of Bliss in the matter, "The utmost penny lawlessly received and taken from the public treasury must be recovered." President Arthur seems to have had in view the appointing of a man who had the nerve to punish thieves, when he chose his law officer, rather than the payment of a locality for political services rendered.

Wm. Tulley, an election officer of Philadelphia, being tried and found guilty of making fraudulent returns, Judge Biddle, before whom the case was tried, in rendering the sentence, said:

"As I heretofore said in these cases, no character of fraud do I regard as so significant. There has been heretofore such immunity from punishment for offenses of this character that it has become a practice to violate the law to such extent that many persons regard it as no offense at all. Indeed a distinguished lawyer argued before me in one case that because it was the custom to violate election laws, therefore his client was not guilty. The court has never gone that far, and is determined to show these people that such violation must be stopped and punished. I will take into consideration an appeal for mercy, but I cannot impose a nominal sentence. The sentence of the court is that you pay a fine of $100, that you undergo imprisonment for six months and be debarred from holding any office of honor, profit or trust, or casting your vote at any general or special election in this commonwealth for a period of seven years."

Guiteau in the Dock.

On the 28th Judge Porter for the prosecution submitted a motion that the prisoner now be removed to the prisoners' dock. Judge Cox, sustaining the motion said:

It was hardly necessary that the conduct of the prisoner had been in persistent violation of order and decorum from the beginning. There was no other way which could be resorted to to suppress this disorder except such as must infringe the constitutional rights of the prisoner, and that was a conclusive argument against them. Until Saturday no other method had been proposed. Then this proposition, which he had all ready had in mind, was submitted. It had hitherto been the impression shared by court and counsel that the prisoner's conduct and language in court would afford the best indication of his mental and moral character, and contribute largely to the enlightenment of the court and jury on the point of his responsibility. It was therefore on the express desire of the district attorney that the court had allowed such latitude of conduct in order to furnish experts an opportunity of diagnosing the prisoner's case. As it now appeared the opinions of experts had been largely founded on the exhibitions which had taken place on the trial, and if they had contributed to make these experts reach their conclusions it would be a complete vindication of the view of the district attorney as to the proper course to be pursued. At this stage of the trial however, this object seemed to have been accomplished. The trial was now approaching its close. Experts had had ample opportunity to make up their judgments and pronounce them before the court and jury. It was incumbent on the court to impose such restraint as circumstances admitted and which would conduce to the orderly conduct of the case. The prisoner had a right to hear the testimony of witnesses. He could not be gagged or sent out of court. The proper place for a prisoner on trial for a felony was in the dock. He could only come within the bar to be arraigned and to receive sentence. If the court granted him the privilege of sitting beside his counsel it was a privilege which could be withdrawn summarily. While the prisoner has the undoubted right to act as his own counsel or appear by counsel he could not exercise both rights simultaneously. Having accepted counsel the prisoner had waived his right to appear as such in person. On consideration of all the circumstances, the court thought the motion would have to be granted and that the prisoner should be placed in the dock, but he did not mean that the prisoner should be exposed to any danger. He should have the fullest protection.

The judge spoke of protection from the fact that Guiteau showed great fear in the proposed change in his location in the court room, charging the prosecution with wanting him to be shot from the crowd. Scovill made no serious objections, saying no one had suffered more from the prisoner's behavior than he had. The dock being cleared of spectators, the assassin was quietly placed therein. Guiteau demanded in an authoritative manner that the entire court room should also be cleared of spectators, but no attention was paid him.

The Nebraska City News hears that the Missouri Pacific will have a station every five miles in Nemaha, Otoe and Cass counties.—State Journal.

It's about that way in Nemaha; and a little more so occasionally, as Sheridan and Carson are only two and a half miles apart, and then next comes Bedford (Church Howe's) only three miles from Carson. The latter place has scarcely been begun yet, but when the M. P. gets in operation—well, it is the dreaded rival of Sheridan, and also of Calvert, three miles away on the B. & M. Bedford makes no pretension to greatness yet.

Mr. Wm. Penn Nixon, the able and stalwart editor of the Inter Ocean, who has been one of the strongest champions for President Arthur and Senator Logan for many years, was a candidate for Collector of Customs at Chicago, but was quietly shelved and Jesse Spalding takes the cake. Nixon has learned the usual lesson—that editors are expected to work for others, and that the chief reward for elevating them to power is to stand quietly by and see some other fellow rewarded.—Saginaw Herald.

About 700 men were at work last week on the Missouri Pacific between Atchison and Hiawatha. We presume the bad weather caused a suspension of hostilities.

There is scarcely a question but a Republican boom has set in in the South. Desertions from the Bourbons are reported from all quarters, and at local elections the signs indicate a decided breaking up of Democracy. The point is, what will be left of Democracy to fight when the South goes back on the party?—Inter Ocean.

An Arkansas man named Ladd shot his wife, a few days ago, because they disagreed about a passage in the Bible. It is a fortunate thing for the New Testament revisers that this Arkansas man was not a member of their committee. All the other members would have died with their boots on before reaching the Acts of the Apostles.—Norristown Herald.

Many persons take medicine for their ailments, and as soon as they feel better they disregard all directions and stop taking it. They try it again and again, and finally throw it aside as worthless, when, had it been persevered in from the start, a permanent cure would have been effected. Now in taking Prickly Ash Bitters for all complaints of the stomach and bowels, remember to give the medicine a chance, and don't expect two doses to cure you.

NEW BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY.—An excellent feature of the New Edition of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, just issued, is the New Biographical Dictionary, in which are given the names of nearly ten thousand noted persons of ancient and modern times, with a brief statement of the dates of their birth and death, their nationality, profession, etc. This is designed for purposes of ready reference, to answer the questions which often arise as to when and where certain persons lived, and the character of their achievements. It contains many names of persons who are still living, and the pronunciation of each name is given.

One Experience from Many.

"I had been sick and miserable so long, and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, that I was completely heartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a bottle of Hop Bitters and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gain so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me they said 'Hurrah for Hop Bitters! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy.'"—The mother.
