"OUR DAILY BREAD."

The Nemaha City Flouring Mill.
 Having heard a good deal said regarding this fine mill since it has been made over and made entirely new, we, being in Nemaha City a few days ago, rode out to the mill and went through it and saw its splendid machinery in operation. The mill is situated on the Little Nemaha river about three miles, bee-line, from the confluence of that stream with the Missouri, and about one and a half miles from Nemaha City. It would be unnecessary to tell old settlers of southeastern Nebraska where "Hoover's mill," afterward Melvin's mill, then "Bennett's mill," used to be; for twenty-five years ago the "squatter sovereign" came for a hundred miles around with their grists of corn—not much wheat—to the spot where this splendid establishment now stands. The old mill that made us meal for our corn bread twenty-five years ago is gone. Like the old revolutioner's musket which he had fixed over so often that there was nothing left of the original piece but the touch-hole, so there is nothing left now of the old mill but the river and the never hushed roar of the water falling over the dam. They go on the same as they did a quarter of a century ago.
 When we stood there upon the bank of the Nemaha, where we threw our fish line in twenty-five years ago and looked upon the water as it swept by, and thought of the primitive old mill and its then owner, our dear old friend Dr. Hoover, bless his memory, we felt the truth of Tennyson's lines:
 "Men may come and men may go,
 But I go on forever."
 But it is to things of the present that we desire to call special attention. The mill and mill site was about a year ago purchased by Elder Charles Rowe and J. M. Trowbridge. By the floods of last spring the sub-structure of the building was so undermined and damaged that the whole thing was torn down, since which time a new building has been erected, 30x40 feet, three stories high, set back clear of the river, on piling driven twenty-six feet into the ground and above highwater mark. The belting machinery is in the basement. It runs like clock work and by the finest power that has been conceived. It has a backwater wheel, so that the work of the mill will be interfered with but little on that account. Eld. Rowe has the entire control of the mill now. He being an unpretentious man lays no claim to great superiority over the several excellent mills on the Nemaha, but he does have the self-satisfaction of knowing that he has in his mill the very best machinery that is made anywhere, with all the latest improvements and appliances for rapid work and turning out good breadstuffs. Among the attachments necessary to good milling these times we noticed a "George L. Smith's Middling Purifier," and dust room, and a wheat heater, invented and patented by W. R. Graham, of Nebraska City, we believe. This, the miller informed us, was one of the best little attachments ever placed in a mill, supplying a much needed want for making beautiful white flour in the winter time. We must not neglect to say that Eld. Rowe has secured the services and experience of Mr. James Bennett, whom everybody knows to be an excellent miller. We congratulate our friend Jim, upon securing so good a place; but still more for his declared determination to keep in entire subjection "the sin that hath hitherto so easily beset him." Prosperity goes hand in hand with sobriety. Take your grists to Jim. He presides over three run of burrs—wheat, corn, and the regrinder, and as they grind corn every day as well as wheat, your work will be promptly done. The Elder we notice is feeding about one hundred head of hogs that will be ready for the spring market. By his indomitable pluck and fair dealing he has overcome many serious obstacles in the past few months, and is now we hope in a fair way to be remunerated.

Godey's Lady's Book for February is a sparkling number. The steel plate is a beautiful sketch drawn by Darley, representing a scene in "The Cricket on the Hearth," and the novellette "Cherry Snows" is a thrilling love story from the pen of Carrie Beebe Crocker. The stories, poems, recipes, puzzles, games, etc., are all first-class, and the Fashion and Work Departments are replete with the very latest designs. Take it, all in all, this number is an exceptionally good one. We would suggest to those who do not take it, that the Lady's Book would make a handsome holiday present to your friend. Any of our readers can be supplied promptly, by leaving their orders at this office. We will furnish our own paper and the Lady's Book for the low price of $3.15 per annum. Guilty of Wrong.
 Some people have a fashion of confusing excellent remedies with the large mass of "patent medicines," and in this they are guilty of a wrong. There are some advertised remedies fully worth all that is asked for them, and one at least we know of—Hop Bitters. The writer has had occasion to use the Bitters in just such a climate as we have most of the year in Bay City, and has always found them to be first-class and reliable, doing all that is claimed for them.—Tribune.
