J. F. Schooner, a dancing master of Davenport, Iowa, was assassinated on the public highway, while riding along in his buggy.

General Grant has been elected one of the trustees of the Madison Avenue Congregational Church (the Rev. Dr. Newman's), of New York.

The Philadelphia Silk Culture Association are preparing a dress for Mrs. Garfield—a brocade of black satin—to be made of silk grown in this country.

Andrew Olson, a young man of Chicago, who thought he was going to have small-pox, drank two quarts of whisky by way of antidote, and died in half an hour.

Senator Saunders has introduced a bill establishing a new land district in northwestern Nebraska, with a view of opening up that part of the state to settlement.

The Senate Committee of Indiana Affairs approved the bill allowing compensation to Mrs. Mecker and others who suffered by the White River Ute massacre two years ago.

The Rev. Mr. Mill, a noted Unitarian preacher of New York, recently astonished his audience by declaring a disbelief in a life beyond the grave. He said:

"If I could believe there were a future life, how gladly I would let loose my imagination to picture its possible glories. Not the gentle John himself should beat the air with more eager pinion, to reach the gate which I would fain believe opens upon the fields of paradise, than I. But, friends, I cannot afford to deceive you, and so I say that, however beautiful the dream may be, the chance of its fulfillment seems to me remote and improbable."

Charles M. Kesters, of Omaha, who killed Oscar Hammer, in the saloon of which the latter was bar-tender, on last Christmas morning, has been indicted for murder in the second degree, the grand jury finding the killing was done "without deliberation and premeditation." If the Omaha papers reported the matter correctly at the time, we would say the blow was struck without warning to the murdered man, and with deliberation and premeditation. Perhaps Kesters did not know nor care what the result of the blow would be, but being inflicted with a deadly weapon upon a vital portion of the head, should subject Mr. Kesters to the severest penalty of the criminal law.

The prize fight between Paddy Ryan, of New York, and John L. Sullivan, of Boston, came off near New Orleans on the 7th inst., resulting in an easy victory for Sullivan. He gave Ryan four square-kneec downs, the last one, on the eighth round rendering Ryan senseless, and he could not come to time again. The betting was very heavy and the Sullivan crowd was enriched by many thousand dollars. Sullivan is evidently the hardest hitter and most impetuous fighter since Heenan's time. Ryan was terribly punished, having his nose and jaw broken; and he may not survive the effects of Sullivan's fearful blows. The fight was for $2,500 a side and the heavy weight championship.

Roscoe Conkling.

At the dinner given by the Grant Club at Albany last week, Hon. Samuel Foster, of Troy, in response to the toast of the health of Roscoe Conkling, said:

It is but meet that the humblest should be called upon to speak of him for whom the greatest is not great enough to speak. When the history of the second great contest for the rights of man was fought, Roscoe Conkling led the van in the councils of the nation as Grant did on the tented field. He never spoke within the walls of any building—a nation were his auditors and the world his admirers. His power thrilled the soldier in the field and his honesty lighted every fireside. His grandeur awed the thousands; his logic convinced the millions; and his eloquence charmed all mankind. But why need I praise him, whose very mistakes made a nation tremble? I am powerless in such a presence. When history records the doings of these days, he will be known as the grandest son of the grandest state in the grandest Union God's sun has ever kissed with its loveliness.

FOR A FACT.

Letter From Regent Carson.

BROWNVILLE, NEB., Feb. 6, 1882.
Editors Journal, Falls City, Neb.

I have before me your issue of the 4th instant, in which appears an editorial containing the following:

"Regent Carson violated pledges made by Church Howe, who put him in nomination, and without which pledge he could not have been nominated. Either Howe made unauthorized statements, or Carson acted very dishonorably. We call on those gentlemen to rise and explain."

Recognizing your demand to "rise and explain," I rise to say that if Church Howe, or any other person, made pledges of any character in my name, in convention or elsewhere, such pledges were and are utterly unauthorized. I was not within thirteen hundred miles of the Omaha convention at the time of my nomination as Regent of the University, did not at any time seek, and therefore did not authorize Church Howe to make any pledge whatever to secure a nomination I did not want.

The brutal, malicious, untruthful slanders now being published on the late action of the board of Regents, coming from the falsely called "liberal" element of the State, will be ventilated in due time. "The end is not yet."
JOHN L. CARSON.

Church Howe on the University Troubles.

BEDFORD, NEB., Feb. 6, 1882.
Editors Journal, Falls City, Neb.

GENTLEMEN:—In your issue of Feb. 4th, I find the following in reference to the recent actions of the Regents of the University: "Regent Carson violated pledges made to Church Howe, who put him in nomination. Either Howe made unauthorized statements or Carson acted very dishonorably." Let me state in reply that I never made any pledges whatsoever for Mr. Carson, and that Mr. Carson, who was absent in Pennsylvania at the time, had never had a word with me regarding his nomination before the Republican State Convention for the office of Regent. I did state that Mr. Carson was not a sectarian, did not belong to any church or make any professions, and at the same time was not antagonistic to any religious denomination, and that I did not believe he would allow the question of sectarianism to have any weight with him in deciding the best interests of our State University. As his opponent before the convention was known to be a friend of Chancellor Fairfield, undoubtedly with my statements regarding Mr. Carson's independent position on religious matters before them, the opponents of Mr. Fairfield gave Mr. Carson their support, but they did not do so on the strength of any pledge I gave them regarding what Mr. Carson's actions would be as Regent, if elected, for this I did not know. I had my own opinion and that was all. In this connection let me say, that my own views regarding the proper remedy to apply to our University troubles were well known to many members of the convention, friends of both factions. As a member of the senate committee of investigation during the session of seventy-nine, after a thorough investigation into the University troubles, having for weeks, I became convinced that no compromise could ever be effected between the Chancellor and faculty, and harmony restored. I stated it publicly on the floor of the Senate, that it was my belief that the good name of the State, the success of the University required the immediate withdrawal of both Chancellor and faculty from the University, and a reorganization of the Chancellor and faculty who could work together in harmony, and to this end I proposed the adoption of a resolution to the Regents asking this. Had this course been adopted by the Legislature, our University troubles would have ended two years ago. I believed then as I do now that the removal of either one of these factions and the retention of the other will not remedy the evil, and until there is a complete cleaning out from Chancellor to Janitor and a reorganization effected, the State University will not be an institution of learning worthy of the appropriation of one hundred and sixty thousand dollars the State has made for it during the past three sessions of the Legislature. This fight has gone too far to ever be compromised without affecting the efficiency of the University. Nothing short of a thorough renovation will ever place it where it belongs as a state institution. I believe the Regents will yet see the wisdom of such action.

Yours most respectfully,
Church Howe.

Mutilated Coins.

Punched, bored or otherwise mutilated gold and silver coins, have no fixed value regulated by the original value of the perfect coin, as is generally supposed, and the value is regulated by the market value of the bullion, which is generally about twenty per cent. less the value of perfect coin. The Director of the mint has issued the following regarding the matter:

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF THE MINT, WASHINGTON, D. C., January 31, 1882.—The Government has fixed no valuation upon mutilated silver coin other than the market value of the silver they contain; they are purchased at the mints by weight as bullion, and the value depends upon the price of silver on the day the coin is received at the Mint.

"At present, the price paid by the Mint at Philadelphia is $1.18 per ounce, fine, equivalent to $1.17 per ounce standard.

"HORATIO C. BURCHARD, Director.

The law prohibits the mutilation of coins, but its provisions have never been enforced. The following from the Revised Statutes of the United States covers the offense:

"Section 5450. Every person who fraudulently, by any act, way or means, defaces, mutilates, impairs, diminishes, falsifies, scales or lightens the gold and silver coins which have been, or which may hereafter be, coined at the mints of the United States, or any foreign gold or silver coins which are by law made current, or are in actual use or circulation as money within the United States, shall be imprisoned not more than two years and fined not more than two thousand dollars."

Mrs. Partington Says.

Don't take any of the quack nostrums, as they are regimental to the human system; but put your trust in Hop Bitters, which will cure general dilapidation, costive habits and all comic diseases. They saved Isaac from a severe excess of torpid fever. They are the ne plus unum.

The subscription price of THE ADVERTISER is due in advance. If we could induce paper manufacturers to wait a year or two for their pay we would be willing to give our patrons that much time, but as we cannot we insist on our pay in advance.

Charles Miller, sentenced to be hung at Benton, Scott county, Mo., on the 18th of March, for the murder of Franklin Hamilton, committed suicide in his cell by hanging himself with a blanket which he had torn into strips for the purpose.
