'Eve's Daughters,' a New Book.

The announcement of a new book by Marion Harland, whose popular novels and works on household economy have endeared her to thousands of hearts, is sufficient to excite great public interest. Probably no woman in the entire list of American authors is so peculiarly fitted for the task of writing a work which deals with the physical, intellectual and moral life of her sex as the successful and popular author of "Common Sense in the Household," of which 100,000 copies have been sold. The book is sure to excite a great deal of discussion and will be sought after by every intelligent woman, young or old.

The book deals frankly, earnestly and tearfully with the whole subject of woman's condition and position in the world, the position God intended she should occupy; her rights, duties, and privileges; the delicate peculiarities of her complex nature; her relations to her own kind, and more especially her relations to the opposite sex. All thoughtful persons admit the crowning need of a work of this peculiar character, written by a woman of unquestioned ability and wisdom, and that woman a wife and mother, a woman whose reputation for ability and purity is world-wide, just such a one in fact, as Marion Harland. Every mother in the land may not only profitably read this book, but safely place it in the hands of her daughters. It was written from a keen sense of duty, and with the high purpose of giving help where help is sorely needed.

The work is the earnest, practical talk of a thoughtful woman with women, upon what is to them the most momentous subject of the day and age. Beginning with the birth of the baby girl, the author leads the child up to girlhood and womanhood, each with its vicissitudes of recreation, study, society, home duties—on to marriage and prospective maternity. The book is intended for home reading,—as a reference and a help to those with whom the author is already in full sympathy, through the medium of her "Common Sense in the Household Stories,"—the Housemothers and Daughters of America.

The style is easy and sprightly; each chapter is delightful reading, apart from the vital questions therein treated, and the value of the practical lessons to be learned from every page. Price $2. Sold only by subscription. Agents wanted everywhere.

GENTLEMEN: I have used Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic does.
