How to Save.
All hard workers are subject to bilious attacks which may end in dangerous illness. Parker's Ginger Tonic will keep the kidneys and liver active, and by preventing the attack save much sickness, loss of time and expense. Delay at such times means danger.—Detroit Press. See another column.

Money for a Rainy Day.
"For six years my daughter was sick from kidney and other disorders. We had used up our savings on doctors, when our dominie advised us to try Parker's Ginger Tonic. Four bottles effected a cure, and as a dollar's worth has kept our family well for over a year, we have been able to lay by money again for a rainy day."—A Poor Man's Wife.

OUR VISIT TO ATCHISON.
It may please the readers of THE ADVERTISER to hear about our trip over the new railroad and what we saw and heard while gone.
At 7:30 we, in company with twenty others, boarded the train at North Auburn. The train consisted of five cars, two of which were filled above here. Mr. Fellows presented us all with a badge "Auburn" so if we got drunk they would know where we were from and send us home. Well the engineer seem to be in a hurry and he pulled us up and down the hills at such a speed that most of us wanted to get out and go a foot. One moment we would be trying to get out of the window and the next to be pitched into the seat on the opposite side of the car. Plug hats went by the board when ever the car took a lunge—that sent our heads against the ceiling. We added to our numbers at each depot, such as had been elected to have their daylight's shook out of them. At last an old cow took pity on us and dammed up a cut which sent the engineer's tender off on the ties. This touched his feelings and he stopped and gave us a rest on a beautiful hill, covered by blue grass. Here we got out and paid our respects to the remains of the cow and watched the engineer get his tender on the track. The Hiawatha band gave us some music to occupy our minds so we would not feel how hungry we were. At last we got to Atchison. They thought it was the Fourth of July I guess, for they had the flags all over the city, and all the niggers in Kansas were on the platform to welcome us. By the by, some of the boys came up and said they wanted to mark us, so they tagged us with a red ribbon, Atchison's guests. They said this would take us anywhere free of charge, they lied though. I was going to cross the bridge when a fellow hollered for my fare, I didn't go. I got on a street car and the driver would not stir an inch until I paid my fare. Some of the boys said they would not let them in the calaboose, and they had to pay at another place they went to. Well we tramped up the street, while they kept the sidewalks, and then they packed us like sardines in what they called A. Pole, Oh, Hall, and told us to fill up. We did not eat half what we wanted to eat, and the pretty girls they had on us. I drank two cups of ice-water and two cups of ice tea in order to have the prettiest one spend all her time on me. Well when we got done we sat back in our chairs and watched the pretty creatures for just one hour, (you see they made us leave our wives at home so we would not have to think some body was watching us). During the hour we told them how glad we was to see them, how hungry we was, how good their dinner was, how pretty they looked, what a nice ride we had, and as the rest of us had too much conscience to lie so, we gave the job out to Lawyer Schoenheit. Then as we never saw a rain storm, they got some long pipes and threw water as high as they could and let it fall down on us. We left. Then they thought they could scare us, and got twenty-five soldiers to march up and down the street, and later they got a lot of fire-crackers and fire brands and just let on us as if they was going to burn us up. Some of the boys danced I didn't, 'twas too hot, some of the boys went to the beer garden, I didn't, I wasn't dry. Then we came home. We got a new engineer. He was lazy. He stopped to rest an hour just to get a drink. Well we got home at 6 o'clock. Tom says if he danced, he don't know it, we all felt that way.
