Robert T. Lincoln. The secretary of war, who is beginning to loan up a little for presidency in 1884, is making a splendid officer—quiet, honest and capable. He says army officers must go to their posts and do their duty or get out of the way. The Inter-Ocean says of him: Secretary Lincoln has shaken life into some of the dead bones of the army in a way that will make him odious to sinecures, but secure for him the hearty commendation of the men in active services and the public in general. Officers of the army have, as a rule, enjoyed the greatest possible advantages of ease and social pleasure since the war, and have so arranged it that they, practically, lived through a continuous furlough, being at no greater trouble than to sign a few papers and draw their pay. The corps in Washington instituted a social lobby that was all powerful, its members being protected by a peculiar form of antoeracy. They lived like lords, while the men in the real service, and perhaps more deserving, were kept bustling to meet the emergencies occasioned by the absence from their posts of the "men at the rear." The determined course of the secretary of war has dismayed the gentlemen in uniform who counted on a soft thing for the remainder of their days, and rather than go to the front and perform the services for which they are paid, these gentlemen very promptly turn in their resignations. This will be good for the real war dogs. Promotions and transfers may give the officers who have had seventeen years of obedience to drum taps a chance to taste the sweets of leisure, and find out how it is to have a tour at a civilized center. The order is being rigorously enforced.

Mr. T. J. Fagan, an old business man of Sabetha, Kansas, is here seeking a new location, and Auburn strikes him as the place. He has secured commodious business rooms in North Auburn and will soon open up one of the best grocery houses in Nemaha county in Mr. Fagan, we believe is a son-in-law of John A. Ponn, of Brownville, he has the appearance of one of the get-up-and-dust kind of business men, and THE ADVERTISER bids him welcome to our thriving young city.

Willing Bros. & Jordan, who have been maintaining hardware and furniture stores in Brownville, Nemaha City and South Auburn, moved their Brownville branch out this week, consolidating it at Nemaha and South Auburn. W. B. & J. is a live firm with the largest houses in their branches of trade in southeastern Nebraska, and anybody wanting furniture or hardware, at W. B. & J.'s is the place to trade.

C. (which means Candidate) Howe.—Tearful Torchtlight.

Al, you should have the name of your paper changed to Electric Light. Simple, unassuming "torchtlight" conveys an idea of dimness that does your brilliancy great injustice.

Summer Millinery Goods at Cost.

Miss Dollie Terry will for the next thirty days sell summer millinery goods at cost. This is a rare chance to get good goods way down low, and all are invited to call at once.

The Torchtlight says the stalwarts are the going to the devil party. The great and growing ambition of the Torchtlight, if we may judge from its present political morals, is to go to Rosewater when it dies.

Married. BROWN-BARNES.—At the residence of Rev. Thos. Lyell, near Glen Rock, on Friday evening, July 21st, 1882, Mr. Wm. Brown and Miss Sarah Barnes, all of Quitman, Mo.

The freight handlers of New York City railroads have been on a strike now over four weeks. They number nearly 4,000 men. They were getting 17 cents an hour and struck for three more cents, which the roads have refused. Their aggregate earnings since they struck would have amounted to $150,000. And they have had to live, the cost of which in addition to what they have lost by illness, could not be less than $50,000. Laborers, too often do not get enough wages; yet we seldom see an instance where they make it pay by striking.

George Keel, a young German carpenter of this place, while working on the elevator Tuesday, cut the forefinger of his left hand nearly off with his hatchet. Dr. Opperman, of Sheridan, dressed the wound and the young man is getting along as well as could be expected.
